Trash Fire Halt Sought

by LINDA VACHATA

Where there's smoke, there's fire. Unfortunately for the Village of Bensenville the smoke is pouring over the area, but the fire is just out of reach.

Last week thick, black smoke billowed over the eastern section of the village. The smoke was coming from a rubbish fire east of York Road on Irving Park Road. For some time the village has attempted to bring action against the owners of this property for violation of pollution ordinances, but the area is located just outside the village limits in Cook County.

According to village officials, the company that conducted the burning last week has numerous other times "blatantly violated" various pollution ordinances.

"We are preparing a letter to Cook County (officials) asking them to issue an injunction against the parties involved and I will personally present it to county officials," Village Pres. John Varble said this week."The people who are open burning are committing a brazen dereliction of statutes."

Village Atty. Steve Nagy said the letter would urge county officials to check the ordinances to bring action against the parties involved. He said he thought the owners were in violation of Cook County ordinances.

"I'VE BEEN TOLD we won't get to first base with the county. If not we are going to take this to the state and I'm sure we'll get some action there," Varble said.

It has been reported that the O'Hare Control Tower has occasionally complained about the dense pollution mist in the area. Smoke from Clow Pipe Corp., and from the open burning has apparently hampered the visibility of pilots landing at the airport, according to Varble.

He said he could not effectively work against air and noise pollution from airplanes until he cleans up pollution in his own village.

Village officials have been under the impression that the property involved is owned by P. Zaccari of Zaccari Rubbish Removal. Zaccari told the Register this week the open burning was not coming from his property. He said the incident of rubbish burning last week occurred on property on the east of his.

"THE VILLAGE should check into this more before they go blame someone." Zaccari said. He added that he thought the fire was probably not set intentionally, but by accident.

Village Administrator Harold Koehler said the village "will find out who the owner of the property is and then go after that individual."

I hope someone in Cook County will make an honest effort to correct the situation," Koehler said. "If there was ever a violation in regard to pollution, the owner of that property should certainly take first prize."

The village administrator said Bensenville residents constantly complain about the dense smoke, but the village has to tell them the area is out of Bensenville's jurisdiction.

"When the wind is right, the pollution is blowing right over area residences," he said.

"We, like the citizens, would like to see some action," Koehler said.

Last night, the newly drafted pollution ordinance for Bensenville was scheduled to be presented for a first reading. Although village officials contend the ordinance is extremely comprehensive, it wouldn't affect areas outside the village such as the one in question.

Fenton Choir Recognized

The Fenton High School Concert Choir of Bensenville was one of four groups selected nationally to perform at the Music Educator's National Convention held in Chicago recently

The concert choir, with James Skomer as director, performed for an afternoon program which was followed by a clinic session. Dr. Charles Hurt of California came to Fenton the week preceding the convention to rehearse with the choir.

The concert choir program for the convention performance included "Domine Fac Mecum" by Morley; "Cantate Domino" by Schutz; "O Lovely May" by Brahms; "Life's Joy" by Schubert; "Mohacs" by Kodaly; "Let the People Praise Thee" by Monhardt and "Will Ye Go Lassie, Go?" arrangement by Bune.

A LETTER OF congratulations from Gov. Richard Ogilvie was sent to Skomer prior to the concert.

"I am pleased to send my congratulations to the Fenton Concert Choir on being invited to perform for the Music Educator's National Convention," Ogilvie said in his letter.

"The Fenton Choir deserves the praise of all the citizens of Illinois for achievement in music, citizenship and enthusiasm in representing the youth of this state. I congratulate the music department, the school and the community that have made this type of commendable participation a possibility and a reality for talented young people."

The concert choir is one of seven performing groups in the Fenton music department, in addition to the 55-member concert Choir, there are two training chairs, the Mixed Chorus and the Treble Choir, a Concert and Cadet Band, a stage band and the Fenton Singers, a 16 member "pop" vocal group.

Twenty-five per cent of the Fenton student body is in some aspect of the music program.

FENTON HIGH SCHOOL has developed a reputation as having one of the most widely traveled high school music departments in the country. The concert choir and concert band have made extensive tours of the Uniteed States biextensive tours of the United States biannually for the last 16 years.

Last year the Music department completed a successful tour of Germany and Switzerland. This tour, financed entirely by the student participants, as are all concert tours, brought outstanding reviews from local audiences in Plochingen, Munich and Wurzburg, Germany, as well as Zurich, Lucerne and Montreaux, Switzerland.

Plans for a concert tour of Southern California for the spring of 1971 are presently being considered.

Locally, the Concert Choir participates in concerts, assemblies, clinics and was recently featured on a Christmas Special presented by WLS-TV.

Two Works Officials Quit

John G. Morris, DuPage County superintendent of public works has resigned.

Morris' resignation submitted March 7 to Paul Ronske, chairman of the DuPage County Board of Supervisors, was made public Wednesday along with the resignation of Edgar Preissner, assistant superintendent of public works.

Speaking of both his and Preissner's resignationin relation to the defeated $105 million bond referendum and the recent shake-up on the county board's public works committee Morris said, "They were just a series of unrelated events and had nothing to do with either resignation."

Morris said the resignations were withheld until after the referendum so as "not to confuse the election with other issues."

He said se felt he had done "about all he could to initiate change in the county's program," and was going on to another government job where he knew he would be able to do more in the area of environment control.

Morris, whose resignation is effective Monday March 23, will announce what his exact plans are today but he did say he would still be in Illinois and it would be "a significant professional change." He added he would be concerned with environment on all levels, water, air and noise.

Many believe Morris may be taking over as the new Coordinator of Environmental Quality or Director of State Department of Conservation.

Morris said he had begun contemplating the change since February.

He had been with DuPage County for four years. Before that Morris was Superintendent of Public Works for Lake County.

He received his bachelors degree in civil engineering at the University of Minnesota where he graduated with honors

Morris received a masters degree in sanitary engineering from the University of Wisconsin. He has done graduate studies in public administration in Northern Illinois University.

He has served as the Assistant Superintendent of Environmental Sanitation for Milwaukee, and was the Director of Environmental Health.

Preissner submitted his resignation March 17 and it will be effective April 17.

He will take a position as project manager with a Division of the Universal Oil Products Co.

2nd Wood Dale Bomb Threat Told

For the second time in as many weeks, Wood Dale's police department received an anoymous bomb threat.

The latest bomb scare came Sunday night at approximately 8:04 when Phyllis LaFarge, police dispatcher, received a phone call from a middle-aged man who stated there was a bomb in the Grove Apartments on Irving Park Road that would ignite at midnight

Less than an hour later the caller phoned in another threat indicating the bomb would explode in about three hours.

Wood Dale police and fire department officials investigated the bomb threat but discovered nothing. Some apartment residents were asked to vacate the premises while other preferred to stay at home disregarding the threat.

MRS. LaFARGE stated the man on the phone talked clearly without nervousness.

"He is definitely not the same person who made the bomb threat at Highland School last week," said the police dispatcher.

Both bomb scares were phoned in by adult males and both resulted in investigations by police and fire authorities who found nothing.

The caller apparently knew the apartments were in more than one building because of the plural use of the word buildings.

Arthur Christy, Wood Dale police chief, obviously irritated by this recent bomb scare, stated that if the bomb caller is caught he will be charged with making false police reports.

Christy warned that the DuPage County State's Attorney Office initiates harsh action on persons involved with bomb threats.

Parks Announce Job Openings

The Bensenville Park District is seeking applicants to fill approximately 40 summer full time positions.

"A rewarding summer of challenge and personal satisfaction can be experienced by working in recreation with the Bensenville Park District," said Dan Plaza, superintendent of recreation.

Positions available include: playground directors and leaders, arts and crafts specialists, drama and music specialists, tennis instructor, teen program directors, snack bar personnel, life guards (WSI and Senior Life Saving), park maintenance personnel and cashiers.

Interested applicants should go to the Park District Office, 161 N. Church Road, to apply.

Deadline for application is April 15.

Service Station Hit By Thieves

More than $125 was reported stolen from the Clark Service Station, 109 W. Irving Park Road in Wood Dale, Saturday afternoon, according to station manager Tom DiLillo.

DiLillo said it was the second such theft in a month but he failed to report the other incident to village police authorities. No reason was given for his actions.

The $125 was taken from a cupboard in the back room after DiLillo left counting the money to assist an attendant servicing cars. The station manager told village police that he was gone only 10 to 15 minutes and when he returned the money was gone.

The theft occurred between 3 and 4 p.m. and station employes indicated that two men driving an Edison Truck were in the building prior to the theft.

Wood Dale CD Course To Start March 31

The Wood Dale Civil Defense will sponsor a radiological-monitoring course starting March 31 from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Wood Dale Fire Station.

The course will run five weeks with classes being held every Tuesday night under the supervision of instructor E. Nelson Bowser.

Civil Defense, police and fire officials may attend but the course is also open to any interested citizen.

Board Cancels Meet

Monday's regular meeting of the Wood Dale Library Board has been canceled.

A special meeting held this week took the place of the regular meeting, according to a library spokesman, because one of the board members will be out of town next Wednesday.

Anyone wishing to bring business before the library board may do so at next month's meeting.

Bridge Near Completion

The Route 83 bridge over Irving Park Road in Bensenville should be able to resume handling a normal traffic load next week, according to Sigmund Ziejewski, state highway engineer.

Last month a 12-ton limit was placed on the bridge and heavier trucks were rerouted. Recently state crews began the repair work.

Traffic is reduced to one lane in both directions with the use of temporary signal lights. Bridge repairs are causing traffic bottlenecks during peak periods of the day between Thorndale Avenue to the north and Grand Avenue to the south.

"We are putting in a new concrete deck to strengthen the carrying ability of the bridge," Ziejewski said. "We have had to peel off the old asphalt and pour a new concrete deck."

The bridge was in "pretty poor" condition, but the load restrictions should be taken off Monday or Tuesday, according to the state highway engineer, as work progresses.

Dad Won't Be Home 'Til Baby's Year Old

Jon A Matthies of Roselle and his wife, Terri, are expecting their first child in July, but he won't be home to play with the baby until it's about a year old.

Jon, the eldest child and only son of Mr. and Mrs. William Matthies, Rt 1, Box 334, Nerge Road, is currently stationed in Korea He is a specialist with the 199th Personnel Supporting Company in Yong Sang

Costume Judges Are Named

Four local judges have been selected to judge the costume competition for the Bensenville Park District's First Annual White Pines Masque Mardi-Gras to be held April 4 at the White Pines Country Club.

Ralph Becker of Tioga Toggery, Eleanor Reid of Reid's Dress Shop, Helen Huarut of the Hill and Dale Dress Shop and Ron Hacker from Beeline have been named to be judges. They will award prizes to the costumes that best represent King Rex, Queen Venus, King Zulu, and the Queen's Handmaiden.

The dance is being patterned strictly after the renowned New Orlean's Mardi Gras. A sumptuous buffet including lasagna, beef, chicken, salad, desserts and Louisiana coffee plus a bottle of champagne per couple are included in the price of $7 50 per person

Costumes for the gala affair are preferred, but optional.

The Bensenville Park District has asked the Bensenville Boys Athletic Association to cooperate in this venture with the understanding that the proceeds derived may be used by the Park District to benefit the BBAA.

Deadline for making reservations is Friday, March 27. For reservations call the Park District at 766-7015.

THREE NEW MEMBERS, from left, Jasper Brown, Ken Duffy, and Joseph Noah, all of Bloomingdale, are welcomed to the Bloomingdale Lions Club by Pres. John Funk, John Balbo, an official of Lions International, and Wally Hanford, district governor. The induction service took place at the Living Room restaurant in Roselle. The Lions Club, noted for its support of schools and services for the blind, recently donated $600 in recording equipment to be used in the Bloomingdale school district speech therapy program.

Addison Board OKs Movie Site

Addison's village board Monday night cleared the way for the construction of a new movie theater on Lake Street by unanimously passing an ordinance providing for the rezoning of the property for such use.

In okaying the site, located east of the Lutherbrook Children's Home and west of Kennedy Drive, the board agreed that the new theater was sorely needed for the village and it should be built as quickly as possible.

They then passed the rezoning ordinance which specifies that a special use, planned development should be constructed on the land.

Gust Fredrickson Inc., is planning to build a movie theater-office complex and allow a Florida firm to handle the operation of the movies.

Clark Edges Cheney By 7,008 Votes

by GINNY KUCMIERZ

An Election Review

James H Clark won the Republican nomination for DuPage County Treasurer as the final vote tally was compiled from Tuesday's primary.

The race for the republican nomination was one of the few in which the outcome wasn't predictable in early returns.

Clark defeated Henry C Cheney, chief deputy auditor of DuPage County, by 7,008 votes: 34,500 to 27,492. Thomas Pierce the unopposed democratic candidate polled 19,302 votes.

Incumbent Jack Kneupfer, R-39th state senatorial dist., defeated Wilbert Nottke, Itasca president in his first try at state politics by a wide margin. Knuepfer received 27,744; Nottke received 7,219.

ROBERT RENSHAW, Northern Illinois University professor and the democratic candidate received 5,183 votes.

The $105 million referendum for the construction of an eight-plant county wide sewage system was overwhelmingly rejected 774,681 against, to 11,887 in favor.

In the state representative race for the 37th congressional district Incumbent James "Pate" Philip led the three republican candidates seeking the two nominations for general assembly seats. Philip received 33,234. Gene L. Hoffman, the other incumbent and a Fenton High School teacher, received 29,448 votes and challenger Kezia Thompson received 11,151 votes.

Rep. William A. Redmond, the incumbent unopposed democrat received 11,890 votes. Redmond, a Bensenville resident, is county party chairman.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE in the general assembly from the 38th Dist., George Hudson defeated incumbent speaker of the house Lewis V. Morgan of Wheaton. Hudson and Mrs Giddy Dyer polled more votes than Morgan to qualify for the two slots. Morgan was labeled as the "Ogilvie man."

The following are the tallies in the uncontested county races. For sheriff, incumbent Republican Wayne S Shimp received 57,564 votes while Frank Hacker, the democratic candidate, polled 10,348.

For Clerk, Ray W. MacDonald polled 17,809 votes. His democratic opponent Philip Grisolia of Wood Dale, 10,348.

Finally in the election for candidate for Superintendent of Educational Service Region, DuPage County or Superintendent of Schools, incumbent republican Merrill Gates received 56,474 while his democratic opponent Gordon Jensen received 10,329 votes.

All figures are the final unofficial tallies. Results don't become official until after the canvass which began yesterday and will last several days.

Club Eyes Purple Martin

This week which is National Wildlife week the Wood Dale Junior Woman's Club is urging the community to consider the Purple Martin.

As a conservation project in keeping with IFWC guidelines, the Juniors have done research on the bird and come up with the following facts:

"The Purple Martin is an excellent way of ridding the community of mosquitoes without the dangers and unpleasantness involved in using DDT and other insecticides because he consumes as many as 2,000 mosquitoes and other flying insects per day.

"The Purple Martin (Progne Subis Subis) with his glossy black and purple color lends beauty to the community as well as melodious song. He is the largest of the swallow family, migrating from he Amazon Valley to the United States and Canada. This industrious bird lives almost its entire life in the air, procuring its food on the wing, lighting on the ground only to gather twigs for its nest or an occasional piece of shell for its young.

"THE MALE bird usually arrives ahead of the female to locate the apartment, look it over, and await the arrival of his mate. No bird is more easily attracted to a man-made house than the Martin, provided it is an apartment complex and not one apartment alone, for he is a sociable bird.

"In some communities, competition is strong to attract the Martin, and has become a matter of prestige, with people literally engaged in building a better birdhouse.

"In keeping with the Juniors' emphasis on the Purple Martin for National Wildlife Week, Maher Lumber Co., a local business is featuring Martin birdhouses, feeders, and plans for building birdhouses. The Martin will even live in houses made of gourds, therefore the houses can be as simple or as complex as a person wishes."

Itasca: Keep West Towns

Itasca's Village Board voted officially Tuesday night not to protest the abandonment of the West Town bus service at the March 23 meeting of the Illinois Commerce Commission.

The board's action came when no residents appeared before the board to protest the elimination of bus service to the village. Since no residents came to object to removal of the service, trustees had no alternative but to comply with bus company policy.

"If it is not moneymaking it can't exist," Wilbert Nottke, Itasca village president stated. "I can't see asking people to stay in business with no riders."

The West End Bus Co. had sent a letter to area villages last week indicating it could not continue service because of a lack of adequate passengers. A survey taken last week showed that only 18 people rode thee bus from Itasca to Grand Avenue during one day of service.

West Town busses service Bensenville, Wood Dale and Itasca.

Willie Michalczyk, village clerk, told the board she had received only one phone call objecting to the elimination of the busses. Another resident in the audience complained that the bus schedule had irregular hours and suggested this might be thee reason for poor passenger usage.

Parental Praise Boon to Student

BOSTON (UPI)—A Boston University psychologist says a little parental praise—instead of criticism—can go a long way toward helping improve mediocre or average students

Dr John Gilmore a clinical psychologist and psychology professor at BU and highly productive individuals generally are independent while average pupils frequently are dependent

To help overcome this feeling of dependency Gilmore said parents must start in the home to help build self-confidence

Many underachievers in schools have a poorly organized family environment he said Money is mismanaged, each family member seems to go off in his own direction with resulting confusion and insecurity

"There is frequently little communication little warmth and praise, and a good deal of criticism

To overcome this, he recommended that parents make an effort to praise and recognize their children's efforts.

In counseling parents, Gilmore said, "We insist that they make favorable comments about their children's actions, accomplishments, remarks and appearance"

One effective technique, he said, was to have the father write a letter of praise to his child or children "Once the father writes a child, there is almost an immediate change in the latter's perception of him" Gilmore said

Progress may take several weeks, he said, but parents generally find that by the end of the third week, the potential problem child is showing signs of progress.

"When parents learn that they can secure improvement using a technique with one child," the BU psychologist said, "they tend to apply these same techniques to the entire family"

The Lighter Side

Tiptoeing 'Dolly'

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ordinarily, wild horses couldn't drag me to New York, but a major cultural event is . . .

On second thought, being dragged someplace by wild horses would be an improvement over many of the trips I have made

Anyway, as I was saying before I so rudely interrupted myself, a major cultural event is no ordinary occasion, and is worth going to New York to see.

Consequently, I recently went to New York to see Phyllis Diller in "Hello Dolly." It was all that I had expected. And more.

But I shall resist the temptation to compare, or contrast, Miss Diller's Dolly with Carol Channing's Dolly, or Pearl Bailey's Dolly, or Betty Grable's Dolly, or Ginger Rogers' Dolly or Martha Raye's Dolly

Instead, I shall direct your attention to a problem that appears to have arisen in connection with the show.

Producer David Merrick is determined to make "Hello, Dolly!" the longest-running musical in Broadway history. To gain that honor, it will have to break the record of "My Fair Lady," which had 2,717 performances. Which means it must go on about 195 more times, give or take a couple of matinees.

The problem, as I understand it, is that Merrick is running low on middle-aged leading ladies who can sing like nightingales, or semipalmated sandpipers, and dance at least as well as the whooping crane.

Ethel Merman is scheduled to take over when Miss Diller retires from the cast next week, but she will only stay with the show through June. After that ???

I was discussing this problem with Miss Diller after the 2,518th performance of "Hello, Dolly!" and I suggested Margaret Truman as a future Dolly Others nominated Kate Smith, Maria Callas, Christine Jorgensen, Mrs. Miller and Liberace for the role.

It was Miss Diller, however, who did the best job of casting. Her pick for the Dolly-to-end-all-Dollies to bring Merrick the long-run championship is Tiny Tim.

Monument at site of Columbus' landing on San Salvador Island, Bahamas

"I saw so many islands that I could not decide to which I would go first."
— Christopher Columbus, October 14, 1492

Have you been island-shopping lately?

Columbus landed on San Salvador and discovered a New World. Now, SAN SALVADOR awaits your discovery.

If you've been island-shopping at all, you know about Freeport . . . Nassau . . . Eleuthera. In a few short years property values in the alluring Out Islands have risen tremendously!

Businessmen, tourists, retirees and investors have been "sold" on the Bahamas with good reason. Leading economists recommend property investments where taxes are negligible as the best hedge against inflation.

Discover San Salvador. It has all the advantages.

South by southeast of its fully-developed neighbors, this is the same paradise Columbus claimed for Queen Isabella nearly 500 years ago. Now, San Salvador is within realistic reach of modern 20th Century discoverers. If you seek Old World charm or the latest in tension-free living, you will find it on the miles of pink-white beaches and the sparkling inland waterways and carefully-preserved historic landmarks; stay at the modern Riding Rock Inn—all part of San Salvador right now. Whatever your fancy, discover this Out Island that will soon be "in"—while there's a wide choice of property at down-to-earth prices. Send this coupon today—

CHERYL ANN CHRISTOPH, age 2, and Michelle Aasen, 13 months cuddle up with some of the toy animals which can be purchased at the Chick Memorial Chapter of the Children's Research Foundation, Inc., Easter Bazaar, to be held today and tomorrow at the Green Street Food Market, York Road and Green Street in Bensenville. Cheryl is a junior member of the chapter.

Bazaar Sale Starts Today

The Chick Memorial Chapter of the Children's Research Foundation, Inc. will be holding it's Easter Bazaar today and tomorrow at the Green Street Market, Green Street and York Road in Bensenville.

Attractive toy animals of original design, all hand made, and washable, and safely constructed (no button eyes) will be available

Mrs Frank Lund, who makes cat and dog pillows, assures that her soft pillows will put babies to sleep "faster than a lullabye."

Mrs. Anna Sanders and Mrs. Charles Hall, co-chairmen for the bazaar, said the toys are most appealing, colorful and cuter than ever and they anticipate a sell-out. Before the sale started, Mrs. Lawrence Lillig, treasurer, reported this week that funds were already pouring in from pre-sales.

All proceeds from the bazaar, which officially began yesterday, will go directly into research of children's incurable diseases.

Pollution Meet Slated

Area industries are becoming concerned over the effects of pollution on citizens. It is not the physical effects that they are so highly concerned with at this time, but the effects that would prompt people to demonstrate

The Board of Directors of the DuPage Industrial and Manufacturers Association has scheduled a meeting on "Pollution and Plant Security" for March 24 at the Flick-Reedy Corporation Auditorium, 7N015 York Road in Bensenville.

"A nationwide "Teach-in" on the subject of pollution has been called by leaders on practically every high school and college campus in the United States for April 22," the Association contends.

"Dramatization demonstrations are more than a remote possibility; in fact both militant and non-militant picketing of all types of industry may be the end result of the Teach-in," the Association contends

All local police chiefs, police guards, plant security chiefs, health and safety engineers, executives and interested parties are invited to attend Retailers are also invited

The meeting will start at 10 a.m. Lunch will be served at the Flick-Reedy cafeteria and a question and answer session will be handled by participants

The following panel of experts have agreed to participate: Orville Bergren, Illinois Manufacturing Assn; James Fancher, Commonwealth Edison Co: William Gaetz, Owens Illinois Corp; Dr Donald Kleckner, President of Elmhurst College; Capt Harold Crockett, Illinois State Police and Undersheriff Richard Doria, DuPage County Sheriffs Dept.

To make reservations for the pollution meeting contact William O'May, 766-3400, Bensenville or Dale Gross, 543-4300, Addison.

Elmhurst YMCA To Teach Akaido

A beginner and intermediate class in aikado, a form of oriental fighting art, will be held at the Elmhurst YMCA from April 8 through June 10.

Mike Hardy, physical education director at the YMCA, said an overwhelming interest in aikado forced the reintroduction of the course this year.

Two experts, Ed Koren, a first degree black belt, and Herman Danklefsen, a brown belt instructor, will conduct the two classes.

Those eligible to join the classes are persons 14 years old to adults.

13 Is Now Her Lucky Number

It was Friday the thirteenth but the tears in Margaret Bree's eyes were drops of joy.

And who can blame her for being happy on the luckiest of unluckiest days. Mrs. Bree, who lives at 261 N. Addison Road in Wood Dale, but spends her hours as a radio dispatcher for the Itasca police, had just received two of her most-wanted possessions via airplane.

The two gifts came nonstop from Southeast Asia — where giving and receiving are done through a rifle sight.

A huge sign pasted across the Bree residence told the story. "Welcome Home, Tim" waved under the brisk March wind, but the people inside felt nothing but warmth upon the arrival of their son Timothy

IT WAS THE IDES of March, but unlike the Shakespearian plot, the Brees were throwing all caution to the wind in an excited family reunion.

There were the influx of questions and answers . . and of course, the war was debated vividly

"We're having a big doings at my daughter's," responded a jubilant mother Bree.

Mrs Bree had double cause to be happy. Both her son and grandson, Vito Provenzano, had arrived home safely from a year's duty in Vietnam

"They enlisted together and came home together," added the police dispatcher.

THE TWO 19-year-old soldiers enlisted in separate branches of the service. While Tim donned Army green, nephew Vito enrolled in the Marines.

It isn't too often that an uncle and nephew enlist and come home from the war together. Mrs Bree can be thankful There are over 40,000 soldiers in varied uniforms who never came home at all

The self styled GOP moderates (Democrats call them liberals) in DuPage County virtually had the daylights scared out of them this week when that old battle scarred returing party chairman Elmer Hoffman came within an inch of scoring a major party upset of national proportions

The veteran county chairman since 1949 called the shots so accurately in Tuesday's primary clear across the board that GOP voters are asking Why is he quitting" Sen Smith with such prestigious backing as Governor Ogilvie Vice President Agnew and some insist even President Nixon was able to come out of DuPage County with only a 1 002 plurality over Rentschler in the race for the Senate Six years ago Barry Goldwater in the race for president came out of this county with an overwhelming vote

County Chairman Hoffman said he was being told the party had to become more liberal to win in the future He said he didn't believe it and noticed Mayor Daley wasn't buying it either The test Tuesday seems to support the chairman's opinion

HE TOLD US HE thought the voters were tired of big taxing and big spending and would go for a candidate who preached conservative responsibility with a concern for all segments of the society The results do not prove him wrong

Rentschler had told us DuPage was the linchpin of his success he had to run big here to win The conservative Republican in this county who are in Hoffman's camp claim the governor has been giving them the run around and prefers to deal only with GOP moderates in handling DuPage County matters But they are now wondering if he wants to get any work out of them this fall he'll have to get on the telephone and talk to the right people

What this amounts to is that Rentschler spoke softly during the primary campaign but carried a big stick behind him He had the support of some of the state's biggest pros

ANY WAY YOU LOOK at the DuPage County results it has to be admitted that there was a strong under current of anti-state administration feeling This is probably due to the heavy tax situation and the rising cost of government which is always a political burden on whomever is in power and always unpopular For this reason the Democrats aside from all other consideration will have an advantage next November as the GOP had in 1968

These are the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune in politics

But apropos to the primary Tuesday the results in the race for county treasurer which gave James Clark of Milton Township the win over Henry Cheney of York Township shows the conservative tide running in full force Clark was solidly backed by Hoffman people

In this regard Lester Swailes a York Township assessor and ambitious political figure has to be mentioned He supported Clark to the hilt and it generally goes without saying that assessors generally hang together

THE NOTEWORTHY achievement though of the GOP conservatives over the moderates was in the DuPage 38th District Lewis V Morgan Ogilvie House majority leader was ousted by that arch conservative Ray Hudson of Downers Grove It turned out to be a race for survival between Mrs Robert Dyer a one-termer from Hinsdale and the veteran Wheaton representative

Reports are that the Dyer people overcame the Morgan strength in Milton Township with a public relations clout via committeemen The old adage rises like a ghost Take nothing for granted in politics There's no love quite like political affection'

Nevertheless there's consternation about Robert Mittel, chairman of Addison Township GOP committeemen, with the defeat of George Preston, town auditor and committeeman. Itasca 15, by Pat Durante a livewire Ogilvie backer with unabashed desire for his job This is said to have strategic importance in the GOP county chairman contest March 30

Another Ogilvie consolation was the win of Bill Ives, veteran 14th district state central committeeman from Hinsdale over Ruth Bateman of Warrenville It was conservatives vs moderates and the vote was 24 484 to 21,702

WHAT ABOUT THE DuPage County Democrats? Their party chairman, William A Redmond, Bensenville, without opposition in his primary bid as a minority candidate for reelection to the legislature from the 37th district, says statewide the Democrats appear to be in good shape for November The party is united, he says, behind their candidate for the U S Senate He sees accumulating party troubles for the GOP in Illinois and major troubles of political import on the national scene

But Jim Kohler York Township county board member, thinks Redmond worries too much Kohler, York 21 committeeman, despite his election chores Tuesday was first to arrive for a board session Wednesday His only complaint was that the voters ignored his endorsements and in most cases elected opponents

Thespians To Tour N.Y.

Twenty seven student drama enthusiasts and four adult chaperones will depart from Lombard on March 29 for a four day trip to New York City theater capital of the United States

The trip is being sponsored by the Speech Arts Department of Glenbard East High School Membership on the tour is limited to these students who have demonstrated a primary interest in theater

Our purpose in offering the tour is to offer our students first hand experience in attending the best theater productions in the United States today," Frederick C. Hoebel, chairman of the speech arts department said

EACH OF the students will see four Broadway productions, chosen by them from a list of approximately 20 attractions currently running Among the shows to be seen are "Coco," "1776," 'Promises, Promises," "Hello, Dolly," 'Butterflies are Free," "Last of the Red-Hot Lovers' "Child's Play" and Minnie's Boys' In all, the tourists selected 13 different shows, although an individual will see only the four of his choice

"One of the toughest things for each of the kids to do was to make a decision as to which shows to see and which to pass up' Hoebel noted

Among the activities of the group while in Fun City will be in-depth tours of the United Nations Building and the New York Stock Exchange, as well as a special back-stage tour of Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts Arrangements are also being made for a tour of Eaves Costume Company, one of the world's largest professional costumers

"WHILE IT is not our intention to offer a tour of this nature every year we feel that it holds tremendous educational and cultural opportunities for our students," Hoebel said

'88' Explanation Goes To Parents

The proposed Eighty Eight flexible scheduling plan for students of Community High School Dist 88 in the 1970-71 school year will be explained to parents at two meetings next week in Addison Trail High School 211 N Lombard Road Addison

The meetings scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday nights at 7 30 p m will deal with the proposed scheduling program in which the enrollment at the three high schools in the district would be divided into four shifts with bus transportation provided throughout the day

The first meeting to discuss the new program was held last night at the school

The plan is an innovation said William Kroeplin president of the board of education It is an attempt to better utilize both the school facilities and our teachers time

Kroeplin said there were many wrinkles to be worked out' but explained that faculty leaders members of the executive committee of the Dist 88 Citizens Advisory Council and some students were tackling the details

THE PLAN WOULD divide the schools into four shifts beginning at 7 30 a m The next three shifts are scheduled for 8 10 9 30 and 10 30 a m under the new proposal Each student would have at least a five and a half hour day and the hourly bus schedule would allow students to arrive early or stay late to work on special projects Kroeplin said

Supervised study halls would be eliminated according to Kroeplin freeing teachers for more instructional and advisory contact with the students

The Eighty-eight plan will not solve the district's space needs, according to school officials, and will probably prevent the use of double shift scheduling for probably the 1970-71 school year only

We will still be operating under an austerity or minimal program' said Dr David Koch Addison Trail High School principal 'But we feel this flexible plan will allow us to better use our present teachers and to give the students more opportunity for self-advancement'

Savings and Loan Groups Face Dilemma

Procrastination is the name of the game for most of the savings and loan associations in our area as they consider whether to go ahead with Federal Housing Administration (FHA) and other federally insured financing, or whether to hold out just a little longer before allowing conventional financing to take a back seat.

"The question is, how long can they wait before making the switch to FHA mortgages — until the state interest ceiling is raised or until savings and loans are exempted from the law, for which a court case is now pending?" asked Warren Purseli, executive director of the Cook County Council of Insured Savings Associations.

He predicted that within the next two or three months, there will be a greater use of FHA-insured funds, "but the savings and loan associations will hold off as long as possible," he added.

THE DILEMMA FACING the associations stems from the tight money situation in general, competition with other savings instruments and other problems peculiar to Illinois. Only one factor is constant in the mortgage market right now: the demand.

Credit, as administered through the Federal Reserve Board, is restricted, although its chairman, Arthur Burns, recently stated, "A resurgence of starts and construction will take place when mortgage funds become more readily available. Conditions in the credit market are now moving in that direction."

Within the past two weeks, savings and loans have had to consider the pronouncement by Treasury Undersecretary Charles Walker that interest rates will decline significantly in the next three years, with conventional mortgages dropping to 6 per cent and government bonds and bills dropping to 4½ and 5½ per cent. In addition several small banks have lowered their prime interest rate, a trend which may gain momentum.

IN AN INFORMAL survey of several Northwest suburban savings and loan associations this week, all were "considering" the use of federally backed funds for home mortgages, without making any large-scale commitments.

Treasury bills and other federal instruments are drawing away funds, the source of conventional mortgages, by offering higher rates of return. The associations are trying to give their savers a satisfactory return on their money, but are hampered by the interest rate ceiling in Illinois which limits them to a rate of 8 per cent. Since the prime rate is at 8½ per cent and higher, lenders can get a better deal in other states through conventional financing.

This is what makes FHA and Veterans Administration (VA) funds so appealing: They are not restricted by the state usury law, and are available at 8½ per cent plus ½ per cent for insurance.

Mortgage points, averaging between 5½ and 7½ per cent, are also charged for these government insured loans, however. On a house with a $20,000 mortgage, for example, if 6 points, or 6 per cent is charged, an additional $1,200 would be tacked on the price of the home. Mortgage points are charged again, if the mortgage is passed on to later owners of the home. It is these charges, in addition to the generally longer waiting period involved in the approval of such loans, that have caused mixed reactions.

AN EXCEPTION TO the wavering policies in relation to FHA funds is that of Douglas Savings and Loan Association in Arlington Heights. Citing the need to pay a higher rate of return to his customers, John B. Grabowski, executive officer at Douglas, said his association definitely plans to offer FHA loans in the near future. "It will depend on the willingness of our customers, however," he stated. "Though there is a lower initial down payment, the cost over 25 years, for example, would be higher than that for a conventional loan. But this will help buyers who do not have the one-third down payment required for conventional mortgage." He noted that one problem in FHA financing is the question of whether the buyer or the seller absorbs the cost of the mortgage points.

Another recent development: The Bank of America in San Francisco cut the mortgage points charged on VA and FHA loans to 4 per cent, down from 6 per cent. S & Ls must take all these factors into consideration, including the state interest ceiling, in deciding whether or not the market warrants making a switch from their long-time specialty, conventional mortgages.

FHA IS GAINING support weekly as the conventional sources of home financing are dried up. "Last week, we had over 800 applications for single-family homes, the largest number ever recorded in this office," said Ernest Stevens, head of the FHA office in Chicago. "We have been meeting with savings and loan associations about the use of FHA funds, many for the first time. If the market continues as it is now, conventional financing will go."

FHA and VA loans are a boon to savings and loans competing for savings accounts, according to Pursell. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board has allowed them to raise their interest rates to compete with those paid by banks, but in order to pay the higher rates they need to charge more on mortgages, possibly through the use of FHA and VA.

According to Pursell, the fact that S & Ls are even thinking about using FHA is significant. "The last time there was general usage of government insured funds was after World War II, making this the largest development in the industry in 25 years," he stated.

ANOTHER SOURCE of funds outside the conventional market is a special supply of government money for moderate and low-cost housing with Housing and Urban Development (HUD) supplements. "A few savings and loans are beginning to be interested, although the Chicago area is picking up slowly," said James L. Richter, heading this program at the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Chicago.

Defining the purpose of the board as, "keeping the flow of money in the savings and loans," Richter said there are several advantages in using these funds. "First, the funds are over and above the regular credit line," he said. "Also, savings and loans which have not been able to borrow on a long-term basis because of an escalator clause, now can get a 10-year loan at afixed interest rate."

IF YOU'RE A sponsor looking for money for this type of housing, go to a local savings and loan and ask about these funds," counseled Richter. A variety of housing projects are included in this program. Richter noted that $175 million is being appropriated for home ownership and apartment programs.

Consumer demand must become apparent, in order to interest developers to apply for these special funds through savings and loan associations. There is a stigma on government subsidized housing, however, which affects the use of these funds, as the stereotype of unkempt buildings, lawns and children is conjured up. "This type of housing is not substandard, however," said Richter. "You're talking about people with incomes up to $12,000 a year who may be helped by this program."

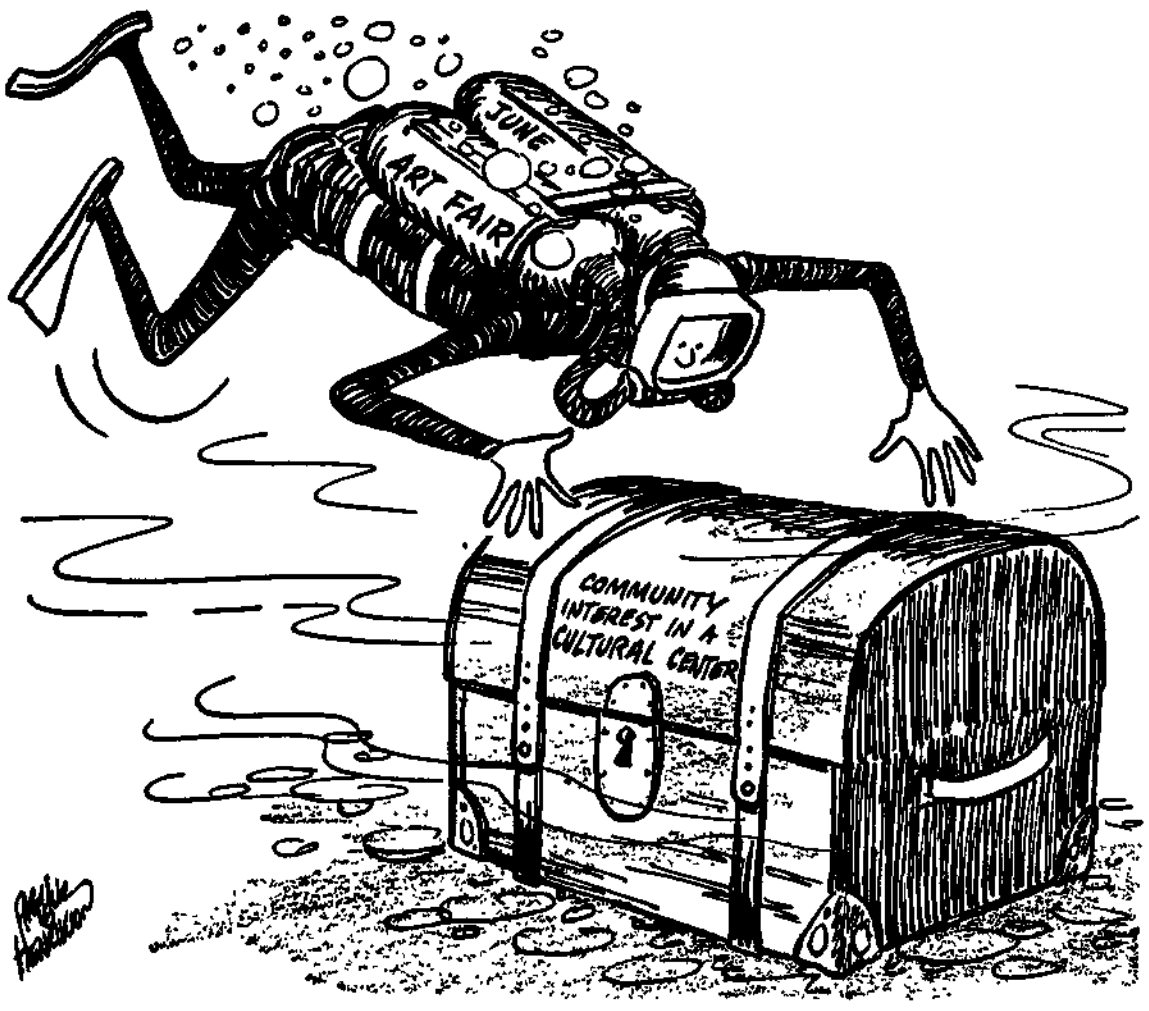
See if There's Anything in It



The Way We See It

A Good Beginning

Leadership by the new Arlington Heights Cultural Commission is providing a stimulus to cultural interest throughout the Northwest suburban community.

The commission has been aggressive and imaginative in pursuing its job of investigating the role and scope of a major cultural center in Arlington Heights. Its plans for a summer art fair will focus interest in art on the community from a wide area. The one-day show, under brightly striped tent, will be on the site of the planned cultural center in downtown Arlington Heights.

This event will spur interest, but more important it will give those planning a center a gauge of potential interest in the community and area.

The commission is exploring other cultural and performing arts centers, meeting with community groups and researching local needs through the services of a full-time staff member.

The commission's planning is a sound start and deserves a "thank you" from the community.

Addison Arena

Control or Repression?

by BARRY SIGALE

Hitler.
Again?
Just imagine!

You're sitting in your Addison home, in front of the television set watching your favorite sporting event while sipping on your favorite soft drink and munching some pretzels. You suddenly hear footsteps outside and then a pounding on the door as if someone is using a hammer.

So you turn off the T.V., push aside the refreshments and plod to the front door to see who's making such a racket. The door swings open and there stands the village president of Addison.

WITH HIM IS the village administrator and police chief. They have with them several long pieces of paper with the names of many of the male residents of the village. The president takes one of the papers and speaks.

"Mr. Cannon, it says here you own a 45-caliber revolver. You bought it on March 15 from your neighbor, Mr. Hunter, who acquired it from his cousin, Mr. Fox. The government feels the gun should be in its possession. So hand it over."

The police chief takes the firearm and places it in a police van, which is already filled with rifles, pistols and other weapons. It is taken to a central location at police headquarters for safekeeping.

Of course, this is only make-believe. But it is the very thing that gun enthusiasts throughout the country are warning about. When government becomes so big anything can happen, as in fact, it did happen in Germany in the late 1930's and early 1940's.

THAT IS PARTIALLY why they are fighting a proposed gun shop ordinance for the village which would require them to register all guns purchased within the village to the chief of police. The ordinance will probably be adopted in other municipalities and together, every gun owner will be known and the locations of such possessions would be less than a secret.

The gun lobby, as has been witnessed in the capitol of the United States, is a powerful pressure group, supported by millions of registered members. They want to preserve and protect their right to bear arms, even if it's only to shoot at still targets, or fire at live animals or to put in a larger showcase of steel firearms.

What they are trying to protect is their constitutional right to purchase a weapon if they so desire. Repeated attempts to legislate gun owners in the past has met with highly vocal dissent.

OFFICIALS, from the highest government positions down to this municipality, say they are trying to safeguard the peace and protect persons from the criminal element of society. They say there is no attempt on their part to re-enact the Hitler regime as mentioned before, which took away the weapons of the people, leaving them at the mercy of the government. What the government said then was the way it certainly turned out.

In a sense, the Hitlerism of the past is certainly possible. The thought is still fresh in everyone's mind. It wasn't so long ago that one could forget completely.

However, it seems an amicable decision on the part of Addison's government and other local municipalities to require a certain degree of control over its constituency. The federal government has admitted it has failed to keep track of known criminals and other undesirables who are allowed to buy guns and eventually use them for devious means.

SO WHAT THE local governments are trying to do, they say, is provide a means to do the work of big government.

After all. If you can't trust the government who can you trust?

The Political Beat

Rentschler: Just a Start

by CHARLES HUGNAGEL

Anyway you look at the results of the Republican primary Tuesday, the contention has to be made that there is a strong conservative trend running in GOP party affairs having less to do with political personalities than with tax raising and tax spending — and party control. It is a trend running anti-Ogilvie leadership and it cannot be mistaken.

As can be plainly seen now the William H. Rentschler candidacy for the U.S. Senate was attempted onthe belief that there was enough GOP dissent beneath the surface not only to warrant such a campaign but enough to make it successful. As it turned out the assessment was not quite correct vote-wise but it was necessary to make that test.

ONE HAS TO MAKE the surmise that Rentschler began the campaign on a shoestring and was operating not much beyond that at the end. His judgment was correct in appraising the primary campaign as picking up if he would pursue it vigorously (on the issue of anti-Ogilvieism) and stay the course.

The Ogilvie people threw everything in the organization book against him (including Spiro Agnew who came to Illinois to endorse Sen. Smith.) Even the President hastened to this state with concern for the polluted environment. All this in the midst of an Illinois GOP primary campaign that resents "outside interference."

Seldom has a Republican primary candidate running for a major office received the cold indifference and even disdain than didCandidate Rentschler. For some reason, certainly not his credentials or background, he was not fit to circulate in "recognized" Republican circles. He was anti-Ogilvie from the start. He refused to pull out of the race and this was political heresy.

But this Republican pariah in Illinois played some of his cards astutely and this brought him votes. He accepted these rebuffs and even turned them into assets. He pointed out that he had given his all as Nixon's Illinois chairman to win the state's 26 electoral votes which helped put the GOP across in a presidential squeaker.

THIS TENDED TO take the sting out of Washington support for Smith and was the cue for the Ogilvie 1968 opposition to take up the campaign cudgels in his behalf. The fact is that the Rentschler support accumulated in the final two weeks of the primary.

The record shows that he ran ahead in big GOP counties such as Knox, Peoria, Winnebago and lost by an eyelash in the biggest of all-DuPage County. Here the difference was 1000 votes.

But in this DuPage County contest Governor Ogilvie saw his majority leader in the House defeated by the favored candidate of Elmer Hoffman, retiring anti-Ogilvie county chairman. Other races saw Hoffman backers successful.

So in assessing the Ogilvie victory with his candidate Sen. Ralph T. Smith some thought has to be given to deficits that took place along the way.

THESE DEFICITS (the anti-Ogilvie areas) that surfaced in this primary campaign represent major GOP vote strength. In terms of beating the Democrats, alias the Daley-Stevenson sworn unity, in November the question is how is it going to be brought to serve the wishes of the Governor.

Can he dictate the terms of any marriage of convenience to support his candidate Sen. Smith? Or will he have to make concessions to get that support? The conservative Republicans he has to deal with are hard bargainers. This will be interesting to watch.

Rentchler with a certain charisma has shown that he has it by coming up the hard way. Therefore there might not be a willingness to come to terms. What about Rentschler confronting Ogilvie in 1972 for governor?

In a no-major-contest in their primary Democrats exhibited their punch in outvoting the GOP in nominating Adlai Stevenson to face Senator Smith in November. The Illinois Democrats served notice early that they had buried their divisive hatchet for 1970. The old maestro, Mayor Daley, has maneuvered public opinion in such a way as to indicate leadership, unity and vigor in the Illinois Democracy this year.

If Governor Ogilvie is going to do what he has threatened, to dismantle the Demos from top to bottom, this is the year of decision.

IN THIS MUCH celebrated contest to come, the Chicago mayor accomplished in a low voice what the GOP governor tried to do in a loud voiced primary. Daley put on his hat and went more than half way to quiet his party opposition. Did he assure success with this unexpected humility?

Housing, Weinglass: Coverage Mislead

I have been present at two events within the past 60 days which were subsequently "reported" in the Herald, and in both instances the coverage has been, in my opinon, deliberately incomplete and inaccurate.

The first event was the city council meeting at which the fair housing ordinance was defeated.

YOUR COVERAGE of the council meeting completely ignored the wealth of remarks made by the mayor and various councilmen, any one of which would have given your readers some idea of the atmosphere that pervaded during consideration of the ordinance. The hostility, contempt and righteousness exhibited that evening never quite reached your readers. Your new reporter seemed much more interested in cultivating the city council than covering it.

The second event was the appearance of Leonard Weinglass.

The "Sings a Song of Sorrow" article was utterly irresponsible reporting. Not one quotation was accurate. Not one of the major arguments so thoroughly presented by Mr. Weinglass was reported. The very nature of his remarks was misrepresented. He did not "sing a song of oppression in American courts." He unequivocably endorsed the rule of law, taking exception to the process by which judges are selected. He also took exception to particular rulings of Julius Hoffman which prejudiced a reasonable opportunity for defense. Neither did he "sing a song of sorrow." Your reporter heard civility and labeled it contrition, probably because he expected fiery, outraged and outrageous rhetoric and was disappointed when he heard none. The last paragraph of quotes in the article was a hodgepodge of three sentences taken out of context, each spoken far removed from the others, completely unrelated.

MR. WEINGLASS spoke with humor, logic, conviction, and a quiet sense of indignation. The article was humorless, inaccurate, sarcastic and naive. It was "Dick and Jane journalism" at best, or intentional distortion at worst.

I also cannot believe that you could "find no room" to report his scheduled appearance in an edition which had to use satisfaction with garbage removal for a headline.

Now, the "Gas Chamber Rhetoric" article openly flaunts any sense of responsibility to readers. Mr. Skipper, may I ask a question or two of you? Why was that quote the only one reported? Why was Mr. Bonds' answer to the question not reported? Why only Mr. Valentine's response, which was his only remark? Mr. Bonds responded to dozens of questions, with civil, intelligent answers. Many of the questions were very interesting and pertinent.

The point is you missed the point completely. The Herald had the chance to report some of the dialogue which might have helped to "straighten out naive Whitey and do the cause some good," but reported instead only one sensational comment.

WHO BLEW IT, baby?

By the way, what perverse logic leads you to conclude that the Hampton question relates to the Kennedy assassinations? Are you suggesting that occasional political assassinations by police are as inevitable as assassinations from any other quarter? Now what was that about "teenie-bopper irresponsibility?"

In a community which has no need for a fair housing ordinance, but requires published and disseminated manifestos on the penalties for improper care and handling of garbage, perhaps the Herald is appropriate.

Publicity Breeds Outrage

Your editorial of Tuesday, March 3 (As Outrage Breeds Outrage), surely bears out what it says, but not the way you see it. The more I studied it, the more I began to see the magnitude of ridicule being spewn on our public officials. It seems to me, if there is any one person or persons who should keep their jaws firmly closed, it should be the "Publicity 7" . . . and I mean "publicity" in every sense of the word.

Weinglass and Kunstler seem to be doing a good deal of "jawin' " around the country and whenever they get through, mob rule follows. Is this what you want? Is this the ideology for our children and your children? There are a large number of us who are not as eloquent as you with words and are not in the position to bandy words with the intellectuals, but we read a lot and think a lot.

GEORGE WASHINGTON did not run around the country in ragged clothes and spit obscenities at the King of England. At the age of 21 he was commissioned Lt. Colonel; at 23 was appointed colonel and commander-in-chief of all Virginia militia. Can you say the same for any one of the "7"?

As for your steady stream of outrages, I have a few I would like to mention, (if I may open my jaws):

The outrage of the "Publicity 7" spewing filth and obscenity in our courts. The outrage of the North Viet Nam Delegation in Paris demanding "immediate release of these loudmouths," and at the same time suppressing the truth about our prisoners of war. The outrage of infamy brought upon the judicial court system. The outrage of referring to Judge Hoffman as a "vindictive old man." (This is very sad, as I had a mother of 72 who became a U. S. Citizen and cried when she took the oath of allegiance to the Flag.)

IN CONCLUSION please, let's not talk through both sides of our mouths. The "Publicity 7" have one goal: destroy the system. You know it, and I know it. All the antics of the trial are now on record. The noise and rabble of the last five months took me back through the ages to a similar scene from the Holy Bible:

"Release Barrabas," rose the cry of the mob.

Only today it is "Release the '7' ."

Loss of Quality

In the very near future, the village board of Roselle has a tremendous decision to make concerning the future of multi-family dwellings in Roselle, or retaining the beautiful country-like tranquility of single-family dwellings.

I was raised in the country and moved to Chicago, only to find that I couldn't wait to move back to a smalltown. Now that I've lived here for five short, happy months, they want to build a city around me.

If the property south of Irving Park and east of the city limits gets zoned for apartment complexes, it is possible that other plans will start in other parts of Roselle and my family along with many other families will be looking for a new country village to live in while Roselle becomes a city.

'No Benefit'

I am opposed to the so-called progress which would involve the annexation of 16 acres to the Village of Roselle and the construction of an apartment complex containing 252 units plus a swimming pool and recreation area to be used by the occupants of the apartments. I do not believe that the tax benefits derived from these apartments would cover the cost involved in increasing police and fire protection, public utilities, parking facilities, and traffic control which the increase in population would require. As a taxpayer of Roselle, I would be faced with an increase in my taxes. I fail to see any worthwhile benefits to be gained by the citizens of Roselle should the project be approved and the above increase in taxes become a reality.

She Cares

In answer to Mr. Friedman's article, "Political Oppression Evil Grows," it was asked . . . "Does anyone care?"

Yes, some of us do.

Having read the article about Sheriff Woods and the meeting with the Elk Grove Republican Organization, I feel compelled to respond.

I WAS ANGRY and frustrated to see an elected official and members of the Republican party acting in much the same manner as the "Conspiracy 7" they were ridiculing. That is calling names, laughing and applauding. The "7" were given contempt sentences for their antics. Was this not on the part of the members of the Republican organization present, contempt for the personhood of a fellow human being.

Concerning the sidewalk academy held at Forest View High School, I have read with great interest the accounts of what the speakers have said. The forums presented the opportunity to gain knowledge of many views. Those attending were not asked to follow any particular view, but just to listen and be exposed to such views.

FREEDOM of speech is one of our basic freedoms. Let us not through fear or ignorance lose any of our freedoms. To close our public institutions to such forums would be repressing a precious freedom.

'6th Column'—5 Men, Bus

CHUCK DAVIS, right, and Fred Kienle, who front the band, look over lyrics and music of a new song. The two write most of the original material which is now being recorded in Chicago.

Photographed by Bob Finch

by G. C. SKIPPER

Laurel and Hardy lollygagged on the TV screen across the living room and occasional guffaws erupted from one of the guys sitting near the window.

All of them had come home around five o'clock in the morning — from work — and now Sunday afternoon was a foggy thing outside the door and everybody lounged around inside, barefoot, in undershirts and slacks, with long hair uncombed

They tried to explain how it all started — the five of them, young musicians traveling around the country in a bus called, "Ralph," a vehicle converted into a rolling bedroom complete with bar.

They call themselves The Sixth Column and they've been playing for the past few months at the Algonquin House in Elk Grove Village. They'll be there through March, move on to Niles at a place called The Blue Dolphin, then back home again to El Paso, Tex., where they started eight years ago, for two weeks. Then it's out to Denver.

THE GROUP consists of Chuck Davis, bass, a youthful looking 21-year-old with blonde hair that is neat and long; Dave Dorian, drums, good natured, big, and professional; George Geberick, lead and rhythm guitar, very quiet and polite, dark, heavy hair; Marty Bombenger, organ, the youngest band member, carefree and extroverted, and Fred Kienle, lead guitar and rhythm, very serious, the "old man" of the group (25), widely read in science fiction. Fred and Chuck front the group and write most of the songs.

"One of the theories of mathematics," Fred said, "is that there are eight separate entities of time, each entity called a column The fifth column was too much a reminder of World War II, so we took the next one for a name — The Sixth Column. It sounded right."

GUFFAWS AGAIN from the chair near the window and Fred's serious voice eased into a smile.

"Now tell how we really got the name," somebody said.

"Is there any orange juice?" Dave asked His heavy set frame moved quietly across the room and back somewhere toward the kitchen. In a few minutes he came back, brushed his hair away from his right ear, said something about being out of orange juice, and sat down in the floor again.

"Okay, so there's only five of us," Fred said. "The sixth member of the group is Bartholomew Crotchlow."

"Bartholomew who?"

"Crotchlow."

The sixth "band member" actually is a cartoon character on a large "painting" which is placed on stage behind the band.

"Then pretty soon there'll be seven of us," Fred explained. "The seventh member is Norton."

HE SAID NORTON is a 52-passenger bus that will be painted black. Norton has been ordered and will be converted the same as "Ralph." (Remember the Honeymooners?) It is scheduled to be delivered sometimes within the next month to replace "Ralph."

On stage at the Algonquin, the Sixth Column clown a lot. They crack jokes, rap with the audience, back and forth with each other, sometimes throw tambowines into the middle of the dance floor. Then a guitar chord sounds, Dave lashes into the drums, forcing the wisecracks and jokes into an ebb, and the place is filled with solid rock music.

On good nights it only takes a few minutes for the dance floor to jam pack with twitching couples, jerking and writhing in all directions

Or as Chuck explained, "Man, I look down there and it's frightening."

BEFORE THE FIRST set ends, it becomes apparent that the five band members know their profession. They know their music, they know their timing and, if there's any faking of chords and runs, it takes a Mr. Spock ear to find it.

The Sixth Column came to Chicago to cut records. They've been working on two cuts for the past three months. One record is called, "Tooth Sweet" backed with, "Love Can Be." The other cut is, "Happy" and "Move Up Slowly."

Their production manager has taken the newly cut sides and offered them to the highest bidder among the major recording companies. Two companies are very interested, Fred said.

Another touch of the "professional" in the performance of the Sixth Column is their arrangement of lights.

"We rig up every club we play," Chuck said. "Man, we've got eyebooks strung all over the United States."

He explained that most places just aren't equipped with proper stage lighting and most of the time, "you're dodging a 40-watt bare bulb hanging from a cord."

THE GROUP HAS hundreds of dollars invested in their lighting. There is a strobe light that makes dancers resemble old-fashion silent screen actors, they have flashing green and red lights and mormal spots which function in direct rhythm with the music. All of it is worked from a control panel located at the side of the stage.

At home, the band forgets the clowning for awhile and Chuck begins talking about their music very seriously. And all the members agree that their present goal is to get the record out and going well, then pull out of the night club circuit and slam in solid with concrerts and one night stands.

"When people come out to a club," Fred remarked, "They're there just to get away from home. Not necessarily to hear the band On a one-nighter or at a concert you know they come just to hear you and you can put your whole heart into what you're playing."

There was a momentary lull in the talk and finally Laurel and Hardy lollygagged off the screen. Near the TV set was a baby grand piano (out of tune) and above the piano was an American flag. The stars had been replaced with a peace symbol and the word "PEACE" on a blue and orange background.

Suddenly Dave heaved himself off one elbow and started talking about the clubs again

"Saturday night is pretty good," he said "Although all the couples start leaving about one o'clock or so. You know, they go out for kissy-kissy and body-huggie."

THE GROUP SITTING around the livingroom immediately turned and grinned in one direction. George was sitting at the bar with a dark-haired girl who had come from somewhere back in the kitchen. Apparently, things were going pretty darn good in the kitchen.

George and the girl, Nancy, sat quietly, hardly speaking. Fred explained. "They're getting married March 21."

Nancy plans to travel with the band once the wedding is over, she said

"Yeah, we're going to put her in a little side car way out back of the bus," somebody said.

Everybody laughed. And the sound was the gayety of a closely knit family People who have worked and lived together and who have gone through all the hard times of a new band starting out in a rough, sometimes vicious, business.

THEY HAD A new "member" and were proud of her.

Behind them were shows in Dallas, in Fort Worth, in half a dozen other cities, including Sioux City, Iowa. ("That, believe it or not, is a real swinging city," Fred said.) In front of them now is a promising future, looking brighter than it's ever looked and their talent is going strong and sure

DAVE DORIAN, drummer for the Sixth Column, catches a nap at the farmhouse.

The Sixth Column is growing in experience and exposure and the free-wheeling life style is admirable from any angle.

"The music we do actually goes back to early rock." Fred said. "To a point, that is We're great admirers of Creedence Clearwater Revival."

Though the rock style may be reversing, the Sixth Column certainly isn't.

That entity of time is moving and, from an educated guess, in the right direction.

GEORGE GEBERICK, right, and Marty Bombenger contemplate a game of Four Score, a favorite pastime of the Sixth Column.

Physical Therapist

Rugged Job But Rewarding

by BILLIE BACHRUBER

Physical therapy is one of the most satisfying of all medically related careers those in the profession are happy to tell you

And a career once dominated by women now attracts many men according to William E Dohse coordinator of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation at Lutheran General Hospital Park Ridge

Many trainers in college athletic departments and on staffs of professional ball teams are physical therapists" Dohse said adding that all Big Ten schools have them

Physical therapy is that part of patient recovery in which patient and therapist become intimately involved in the patient's effort to regain health thus restoring his physical and economic independence

'IT'S A REAL CHALLENGE" declared Dianne Eberhardt chief physical therapist at Lutheran General Physical therapists have more direct contact, work longer with and establish closer relationships with their patients than in any other para medical field she said

Miss Eberhardt who heads a staff of 13 has worked in Lutheran General's Physical Therapy Department eight years She attended Valparaiso and Northwestern Universities where an interest in physical education and hospital work led her to a career in physical therapy Dianne hopes high school students interested in using 'head heart and hands' to help others get well, will consider this profession There is acute need for many therapists she said

DEMAND FOR THERAPISTS far exceeds the supply 'The field is wide open said Bill Dohse Other than hospitals professional ball teams and college athletic departments Dohse pointed to opportunities in rehabilitation centers schools for handicapped children armed forces health agencies and private employment Starting salaries compare with those in the teaching profession, he said, and advance with experience and education

Education required for a career in PT begins with a college preparatory course in high school that emphasizes science and English But just as important, counsels Dianne Eberhardt are the qualities of patience understanding cooperation a real desire to help others and a sincere liking for people

THREE DIFFERENT programs are available to the qualified high school graduate The four year degree program leads to a baccalaureate degree in physical therapy The degree program consists of two to three years in the humanities, biological, physical and social sciences and one to two years professional education

A certificate program is for college graduates who meet requirements in the sciences and want a career in PT This program offers 12 to 16 months of specialized education

An alternative for college graduates is the two-year graduate program, which leads to a master's degree Graduates of approved programs are eligible to take licensure examinations which are required in most states before a therapist may practice

PART OF REQUIRED education before graduation is three to four months clinical experience under the supervision of a graduate physical therapist at an accredited hospital Dianne Eberhardt teaches affiliate students from Northwestern University School of Medicine the only college to offer PT in the state of Illinois

Miss Eberhardt supervises one student per month from June to October Students gain additional experience at other hospitals During this training period, students combine scientific and academic knowledge with practical experience

The only other teaching hospital in the North DuPage-Northwest Cook area is Holy Family in Des Plaines which is associated with the Harper Junior College program Sophomore nursing students spend two days a week in physical therapy taught by Rosemarie Bloeckner

DuPAGE MEMORIAL IN Elmhurst, Northwest Community in Arlington Heights and St Alexius in Elk Grove Village all have a physiatrist (a doctor of physical medicine) on their staffs and are experiencing an increase in the number of patients undergoing physical therapy

While none of these hospitals has PT students, Northwest does have a home care program Two of its therapists go to the patient's home instead of the patient coming to the hospital

Physical therapy services include testing patients to discover their abilities and limitations and training patients and their families in the use and care of equipment as ordered by medical doctors Practical experience in treatment of the patient is gained by students before actual practice begins This may include massage hydrotherapy heat and light and exercise and all equipment utilized

SOME OF THE EQUIPMENT used almost daily by Lutheran General's PT department are whirlpool baths, ambulatory equipment such as crutches canes and walkers, conductive heating units, infra red heating, diathermy, much exercise equipment (most common therapy) and perhaps the most impressive, the Hubbard tank

This large kidney-shaped stainless steel container helped to restore to health one of Dianne's most severely injured patients A 20-year-old girl victim of an automobile accident — which accounts for 15 per cent of physical therapy patients — was severely burned over much of her body The patient was near death from infection recalled Miss Eberhardt Immersion and therapy in the Hubbard tank provided cleansing ('Water is one of the oldest methods of healing') increased and stimulated circulation for healing and facilitated exercises to strengthen muscles and to stretch joints A year's work and help in PT plus skin grafts enabled the young patient to return to normal living, smiled a happy therapist

OTHER AIDS EMPLOYED by PT people to help victims of stroke coronaries, cerebral palsy, arthritis, multiple sclerosis and others are moist air unit for arthritics, parallel bars to start ambulation, the Elgin chair for resistive exercise traction unit to stretch muscles (for common whiplash) and the tilt table used by the bedridden

As a profession, physical therapy is relatively new according to Bill Dohse who earned his bachelor's degree in physical education from Iowa State University and his master's in PT from State University of Iowa World War II and the polio epidemic of the '50s gave impetus to this now expanding profession, he said

MEDICARE BENEFITS have put more emphasis on care for the elderly and those previously without funds can now get the help they need Dohse estimated PT patients at Lutheran General above Medicare-age at 60 per cent orthopedic patients 25 per cent, and auto accidents 15 per cent

Greatest patient load are stroke and orthopedic he said, with 90 per cent of these substantially helped to function in some capacity And new treatment and drugs provide increasing hope for more complete recovery for more patients, Bill believes

"It's a tremendous feeling of accomplishment to see a former patient walking down the street," smiled the congenial therapist

Mrs Myles Gibbons of Mount Prospect one of seven therapists on the Lutheran General staff couldn't agree more! Virginia who has a son in medical school and one attending Harper Junior College likes all aspects of PT work She likes to watch patients improve enjoys the close relationships and relishes the challenge involved

A BIOLOGY MAJOR Mrs Gibbons received a BS degree from the University of Maryland and received her physical therapy training from the Army Virginia returned to her profession in 1955 as a 'working mother' and has been at Lutheran General since 1967

'What interests me most in PT is the rehabilitation of the patient

Though she derives much satisfaction fom orthopedic work 'whatever I am doing at the time is most interesting'

For the student interested in physical therapy as a career Bill Dohse has this advice If you are a person who likes all types of people here is a profession with an opportunity to meet all kinds And because the patient may be not only physically impaired but mentally and emotionally affected you get to know and help the whole person

He suggested interested individuals get more information by talking with a physical therapist at a nearby hospital or writing for The Health Careers Pathway Series No 10 Health Careers Council of Illinois 400 N Michigan Ave Chicago 60611 They also may call 467-0960

'Silent Spring' Film Program

Those interested in the air pollution problem are invited to join the garden group of the Prospect Heights Woman's Club next Thursday for you will see the CBS special "The Silent Spring of Rachel Carson" sponsored by the Illinois Audubon Society

This is a 54 minute documentary on the pesticide controversy giving pros and cons with views of the chemical companies

Prospect Heights Woman's Club Garden Group is striving to enlighten area residents as to problems involved with air pollution and this is a second program in which members are presenting to the public some of the ways in which home owners can help alleviate the situation

PESTICIDES HAVE LONG been a source of concern to many people and this film will help inform you as to the dangers involved in various sprays and materials used to destroy pests according to the program chairman

Everybody is encouraged to view this film which will be shown at p m in the Ann Sullivan School Schoenbeck and Palatine Roads in Prospect Heights Literature will be distributed by Mrs Richard Rix chairman

Palatine Nurses To Hear Doctor

Dr Lawrence Margolies of Arlington Heights will be guest speaker at Monday's meeting of Palatine Registered Nurses Club The program begins at 8 p m in the lower level of Palatine Savings and Loan Brockway at Palatine Road

Members and their friends are asked to save articles for a garage sale to be held May 2 at 506 Kenilworth Palatine Almost all articles except clothing are acceptable Mrs Robert Heinrich 359 0682 or Mrs Rudy Asmus 358-3724 may be called for details

PROCEEDS FROM THE sale will help finance philanthropic and educational objectives of the club Among its projects is a lending closet of sickroom equipment maintained for community use

Each year the nurses give a scholarship to a deserving high school senior in Palatine Township Mrs Heinrich has further information on entries

A Family To Call His Own

Suburban Living is being joined in its cooperative child placing project with Lake Bluff Chicago Homes for Children by the Bensenville Home Society

This project aims to help in finding families for hard-to place children Once a month Suburban Living, in cooperation with Lake Bluff/Chicago Homes, and now Bensenville Home, publishes a picture and brief background of a child for whom a loving home is needed

Today's child is month old Bobby His beautiful brown eyes, evenly formed features and soft brown skin add up to an unusually attractive baby Bobby weighs nine pounds and has developed into a healthy, strong, alert little fellow

Bobby loves to be cuddled and played with This responsiveness will bring joy to his new family as it has to the foster family now caring for him

Readers interested in being considered as Bobby's adoptive family, or interested in some other racially mixed child, may call Mrs Dorothy Wingquist, supervisor of adoption services of Bensenville Home Society South York Road, Bensenville The number is 766-5800 Mrs Wingquist may be called between 9 a m and 5 p m Monday through Friday

Clubs Donate Candy for Vietnam

Fifteen clubs of the Seventh District, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs recently contributed 305 pounds of candy to project 'Have A Heart' Promoted by Mrs Byrd Pollard, National Defense and Veteran's Service Chairman of Seventh District, the project provided Valentine candy for servicemen stationed in the Can Tho USO Club area in Vietnam

"The club director divided the candy into 600 individual packages and gave them to all men who came to the club on Valentines Day" stated Mrs Pollard 'Some of the men who received the candy had forgotten that it was Valentines Day until they came to the club' she added

The Can Tho USO Club serves the area which extends east to west from Cambodia to the South China Sea and the southern portion of Vietnam from Saigon to the Gulf of Siam The club is located in Can Tho, a heavily-populated town in the Me Kong Delta, and it is the only club in that entire area, explained the chairman

True Love Springs Eternal

Lynn Louise Neumaier

Mr. and Mrs. Roland L. Neumaier of Woodstock announce the engagement of their daughter Lynn Louise to John David Kuranz, son of former Prospect Heights residents Mr. and Mrs. John L. Kuranz, W. County Line Road, Barrington Hills.

The wedding date will be May 2.

The young couple are '65 graduates of Marion Central Catholic High School. Miss Neumaier then earned her degree at St. Therese School of Nursing and is employed at Memorial Hospital, Woodstock.

Her fiance attended LeRosey in Rolle, Switzerland, Texas A & M University and was graduated from St. Mary's College, Winona Minn. He is now in the U. S. Army as a surgical technician at Ft. McPherson, Atlanta, Ga.

Susan Joyce Wilson

Announcing the engagement of Susan Joyce Wilson to James Charles Kozlowski, son of the Charles J. Kozlowskis of 401 S. Home Ave., Itasca, are Mr. and Mrs. Alex L. Wilson of Lombard. Their daughter will be married to Mr. Kozlowski on June 12.

Miss Wilson is a laboratory technician at DuPage Memorial Hospital, Elmhurst. Her fiance is program director for the Cicero Boys Club.

Judy Ann LeBrun

Miss Judy Ann LeBrun's engagement to Richard Francis Irmen of Mount Prospect is announced by her parents, the Ray Charles LeBruns of Arlington Heights. Mr. Irmen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Irmen.

The wedding is planned for Aug. 8 in St. James Church, Arlington Heights.

Miss LeBrun is a senior at Prospect High School and also works for Illinois Bell Telephone Co. Her fiance, a '68 graduate of Prospect High, works for Union Special Machines, Chicago, as a tool and die apprentice.

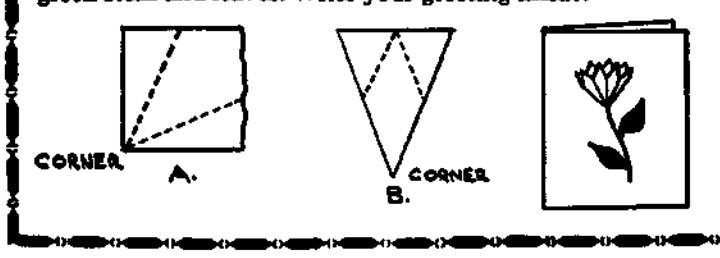
Susan Mary Jackson

The engagment of a Bensenville couple, Susan Mary Jackson and Bill Santiemmo, is announced by Miss Jackson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Bradford of Judson Street. Mr. Santiemmo's parents are the Sam Santiemmos of Indian Hill Drive.

The couple are both graduates of Fenton High School. Miss Jackson is a private secretary for Fednor Corp., Elk Grove Village, and her fiance is employed by Cormat Builders & Engineers Corp.

EASTER LILY CARD

To make this Easter card, cut about four inches off the end of a plain white envelope. With the envelope corner at the bottom, fold the paper into thirds (figure A). Cut to a point (figure B). Unfold the lily and glue one side to a folded sheet of colored construction paper. Cut out and glue on a green stem and leaves. Write your greeting inside.



The Postman Takes a Wife

The postman didn't have to ring twice when he made his deliveries at the Arlington Heights law office where Mary Susan Hume is employed as a secretary. Now on the route, Richard Arthur Henne was noticed the first time by Mary Susan.

It was six months ago that Richard acquired the new mail route and on Feb. 7, the couple were married in St. Raymond de Penafort Church in Mount Prospect. Mary Susan is the daughter of the Charles E. Humes, 401 W. Golf Road, Arlington Heights, and Richard is the son of the Arthur H. Hennes, 159 S. Hale St., Palatine.

Rev. James P. Prendergast officiated at the 2 o'clock double ring service in a setting of white glads, mums and red roses.

FOR HER MARRIAGE, the bride chose a Victorian empirewaisted gown of white peau de soie with bodice and long sleeves of ivory English lace. A high collar, cathedral train and a cathedral-length mantilla of white illusion with appliques of ivory English lace were features of her ensemble. In her cascade were white orchids, yellow garnet roses and stephanotis with ivory satin leaves and ivory streamers. Mr. Hume gave his daughter in marriage.

Miss Susan Herigodt of Elk Grove served as Mary Susan's maid of honor, who wore a floor-length gown of emerald green velvet with empire waist, long sleeves and green trim at the waist and on the sleeves. Her headpiece was of emerald velvet ribbon and petals, holding a green veil, and her flowers were a cascade of yellow roses and green feathered carnations.

Bridesmaids, in royal blue velvet gowns fashioned identically to the maid of honor's gown, were Deborah Halden of Arlington Heights, and the sisters of the couple, Teresa Hume and Beverly Henne. Their flowers were yellow carnations with blue feathered carnations.

THE BRIDE'S 4-year-old sister, Jeanine, was flower girl, and her gown was similar to the maid of honor's gown. Multi-colored flower petals filled the basket she carried.

Mrs. Hume chose a pink lace coat and dress ensemble and Mrs. Henne a mint green chiffon dress. Both mothers had white orchid corsages.

Michael Turcotte of Lake Zurich served as the groom's best man, and ushers were Michael Mattson and John Heinzen of Arlington Heights, and the groom's brother-in-law, Terry Seelenbinder of Rolling Meadows.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Henne

Both young people are graduates of Forest View High School.

Juniors Examine Narcotics

Members of Wood Dale Junior Woman's Club were passing around marijuana cigarets at last Tuesday's meeting, but it was entirely legal. The cigarets had been lit by vice detectives Jack Olson and Eugene Manion of the 15th District, Austin Police Station, so the women would be able to detect their odor.

That was one of the objects of the program the detectives have been presenting to groups of concerned citizens.

They stressed early detection of dope usage, which usually begins with marijuana, as the best chance of prevention and a stopgap to more potent drugs such as heroin. After 10 years in the narcotics division, the two men have seen very few people kick the habit, even after going through extensive hospital rehabilitation.

THEY SHOWED A FILM depicting a complete history of a young girl who started with marijuana cigarets and progressed through all sorts of personal degradation and deterioration, ultimately winding up on heroin. The officers also brought an array of pills, capsules, hypodermics and other essentials of the drug user.

The program is part of a project the Wood Dale Juniors are launching to emphasize the gravity of narcotics. The women are considering purchasing a film and showing it, especially in schools, to help educate the public on this serious problem.

They are also considering a distribution of leaflets which explain the loss of rights such as the right to vote, hold public office, etc., when convicted on narcotics charges.

A Family in Crisis

A serious crisis in the life of a family and how it was worked out with the help of a case worker will be enfolded at next Wednesday evening's meeting of Beth Tikvah Sisterhood. Mrs. Vera S. Margolis, director of community education, will present the story via slides.

The meeting begins at 8:30 p.m. at the Temple, 275 Hillcrest Blvd., Hoffman Estates.

For Rose Buffs

Selection and growing of roses in this area will be the program for Arlington Heights Garden Club at 8 p.m. Monday in Pioneer Park Fieldhouse, Arlington Heights.

Slides will be shown by Mr. and Mrs. Donald Ballin, accredited National Rose Society judges. Mr. Ballin is also regional governor of the American Rose Society and director and chairman of training and accrediting of rose judges.

Because of the interest in growing roses in the area, all rose buffs, men and women, are invited.

For Soroptimists

Mrs. Helen Otzen of Arlington Heights is among members of the Soroptimist Club of Chicago who will hear Miss Genevieve Flavin, editor of the Voice of Youth column in the Chicago Tribune, Tuesday evening in the M&M Club of Chicago's Merchandise Mart.

The club will also present awards to winners of the Youth Citizenship contest promoted by the Soroptimist Federation of the Americas.

Nursing Home Tour

Hanover Township Nurses Association will tour the Oliver Nursing Home, Watch and Raymond Streets, Elgin, next Wednesday. The tour will begin at 8 p.m. and will be conducted by Mrs. Oliver, director of the home.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Ron Tardieff, 537 Newberry, Streamwood.

Dr. Tyrell Guest Of Couples Club

Dr. Donald Tyrell

"Don't lie to your children . . . it doesn't protect them" is a leading principle to be discussed by Dr. Donald J. Tyrell at tonight's meeting of the Couples Club of the First Presbyterian Church, Arlington Heights. Starting time is 8 o'clock.

Dr. Tyrell, a psychologist and author, is a resident of Arlington Heights and has many teenage patients in his suburban practice.

An important reason for the generation gap, according to Dr. Tyrell, is that youngsters do not believe what their parents tell them because parents don't behave in the manner they preach. "A person who behaves just to please his parents is psychologically still a child," says the psychologist.

HE IS THE AUTHOR of a book titled "When Love Is Lost" and was recently the subject of a series of newspaper articles which explored his methods and views of therapy.

Dr. Tyrell is consulting psychologist for Little City, director of Victor C Neumann School for Mentally Retarded Children and chief psychologist and administrative director of the psychiatric department of Family Court of Cook County.

St. Paul's Story To Be Reviewed

For their Easter time meeting, members of Palatine Book Review Club will hear the story of St. Paul before his conversion when they meet next Tuesday in Uncle Andy's Cow Palace, Palatine.

Although the book, "Great Lion of God" by Taylor Caldwell won't be released until April 10, Mrs. Allen Hopkins will review the book through special arrangements with Doubleday Publishing Co.

Members desiring to cancel or bring guests are asked to contact Mrs. John J. Murphy, FL 8-3668, before 10 a m. Monday.

Paolella Rustic Barn

Have you ever eaten at a barn? No? Well, then you're in for a treat! The Paolella Rustic Barn, 251 Lake St. in Bloomingdale, is just that — a barn — in an early American setting, only more so — the finest food around. If you think that name sounds familiar, it's because Dominic Paolella has been synonymous with fine food for over 25 years. They are especially famous for their Italian cuisine from treasured family recipes, sure to please the most discriminating palate.

The Rustic Barn is open for lunch every day with fashion shows on Tuesday and Thursday, and a tempting menu including extraordinary sandwiches as well as special luncheons of the day.

For dinner the menu features such gourmet delights as "ship and shore," a combination of lobster tail and prime filet broiled to your liking, roast Long Island duckling and baked breast of capon Adeline, the last two served with orange sauce and rice pilaf. There are other specialties including roast prime ribs of beef, au jus, fresh Florida red snapper served with lemon butter and a variety of steaks to tempt the appetite. A visit to the relish bar is included in the feast.

For your favorite cocktail visit the "Horseshoe Bar" and enjoy the entertainment, too.

The Rustic Barn also has a most attractive banquet room, pictured above, which can accommodate 250 people, and has a staff that exclusively arranges wedding receptions.

You're sure to enjoy a visit to Paolella Rustic Barn. And bring the whole family — children are always welcome here.

'Once Upon a Mattress'

Adults Stage Fairy Tale

The princess who is so sunsitive she can't sleep on top of 20 mattresses because of a single pea under the bottom one is a Hans Christian Andersen fairy tale heroine who comes to life again in the musical "Once Upon a Mattress." It will be presented by Music on Stage in the Elk Grove High School Little Theater April 3, 4, 5, 10, and 11.

The librettists, Jay Thompson, Dean Fuller and Marshall Barer, felt that the original tale did not tell it like it was and wrote a corrected version. Mary Rodgers, daughter of the famed Richard Rodgers and inheriting a goodly amount of his musical talent, agreed with the gentlemen and provided a sackful of tunes which with fairy tale accuracy fit each occasion and character as they appear.

WINNIFRED, the 13th princess to try to pass the series of impossible tests devised by the Queen, so that her son Dauntless will stay with her forever, is played by Karen Mason of Arlington Heights. (This is the role made famous by Carol Burnett when the show opened its lengthy run in New York in 1959.)

Beth Woulds, Schaumburg, will portray the Royal Mom who tries to stack the cards against Winnifred, and Doug Patterson, Arlington Heights, is the sad-sack victim of royal momism who wants a lass. Mike Woulds is the poor King who is also a victim of his wife. He has been literally struck dumb by her.

ONE OF THE PROBLEMS of the kingdom is that legally no knight and lady can marry until Dauntless does. Sir Harry, played by Jim Tuverson of Buffalo Grove, and Lady Larken, Barbara Curran of Des Plaines, find themselves in an unhappy predicament because of this ruling, needing to wed soon. They, and the hero and heroine, enlist the aid of the Wizard, played by Hank Vandenboom of Wheeling; the Jester, Don Crop of Mundelein, and the Minstrel, Ron Napier of Schaumburg, in finally carrying the tale to a successful conclusion — for all except the Queen.

"Once Upon a Mattress" is being directed by Tom Ventriss; Beth Vandenboom is choreographing the dances and assisting Ventriss in direction; Gordon Palmer is serving as musical director. Pat Cotsakis is accompanist. These four most recently joined forces, working in the same capacities, for the very successful 1969 fall presentation, "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum." That show was co-produced by Music on Stage and Des Plaines Theatre Guild.

Make-up Artist Tells All

There are no unattractive women, only those who do not always make as much of their beauty as they could."

These are the feelings of Glenn Roberts, an international face designer with Elizabeth Arden who is touring the world teaching his techniques of make-up to women.

"Women all over the world have the same interest in make-up, the same wishes, the same problems," he said.

Roberts will appear as a part of "Arden's Red Door," being sponsored by Carson Pirie Scott & Co. in the Town Hall of the Randhurst Shopping Center April 13 through 17.

He will introduce new make-up ideas and help women select colors the way they would accessories. Generally, he will advise each women which treatment and make-up preparations she should use to provide the most attractive look.

He will appear for two classes a day, Monday, 2 and 6 p.m.; Tuesday and Wednesday 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.; Thursday, 2 and 6 p.m.; and Friday, 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

Glenn Roberts

"We will start taking reservations Monday," said Marty Owen, manager of cosmetics at Carsons. The number is 392-2000, Ext. 309. There is a $5 charge.

Auditions for 'Sweet Charity'

Best Off Broadway will present "Sweet Charity," the story of a big-hearted dance hall hostess who keeps falling in love with men, but never receiving any love in return. Dates have yet to be set but the production will be this spring.

The production is to be directed by Richard Tyler. Music director is John Shaw, and handling the choreography of the dancing show is Carol Mack.

Auditions have been set for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday the tryouts will be held at Pioneer Park, Wednesday at Arlington High School and Thursday, back at Pioneer Park.

Dancers should audition on Monday. Anyone is welcome to try out or sign up for work backstage. The role of "Charity" and the two supporting female leads require previous dance training. Information, 259-4194.

Melodrama To Be Presented for DPTG

Music on Stage, of Arlington Heights, will present the melodrama, "He Ain't Done Right by Nell," at the Wednesday membership meeting of Des Plaines Theatre Guild.

The program will be given following a brief business meeting at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday in Guild Playhouse, 620 Lee St., Des Plaines.

The melodrama will be directed by Michael Woulds, a member of both community theatre groups, active in productions and management in each.

The cast of "He Ain't Done Right by Nell" includes Roy and Dorothy Quid, Frank Randall, Maryanne Butcher, Jim Gutzmer, Anne Blakeman and Diana Lonergan.

Current production at Guild Playhouse is the suspense thriller "Wait Until Dark" which ends its run tomorrow. In May the fifth and final production of the season, "Tom Jones," will be staged three weekends, May 8-23.

A Theater in the Sky

by VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD UPI — The coming of the 747 jetliner has provided transcontinental passengers with a theater in the sky where some 360 transients can watch a movie or movies at one time.

Of the three carriers with 747s in service only TWA is attempting to cater to the tastes of adults and youngsters by showing two motion picutres on a single flight.

For example, "The Sterile Cuckoo" is screened for mture travelers while "True Grit" is available for family watching.

Passengers may rest assured that "I Am Curious Yellow" or other X rated films will not be shown on any flights. Movies with excessive nudity or explicit sex scenes are avoided, too.

AMERICAN AIRLINES has six screens on the roomy new airplanes — two located in first class, the remainder in coach.

Unlike TWA, American offers only a single film per flight.

"We keep our films for about two weeks," a spokesman for the airlines said. "It's tough to come up with 52 movies a year — one for eastbound flights, say from Los Angeles to New York, and one westbound from New York to Los Angeles — that pleases everyone.

"If you show only G rated films for children, you'll bore the adults to death," he said. "If you show only adult-oriented movies you can't send all the kids to the other end of the airplane."

Pan-American, like TWA, has five different screens, but only a single film. As in the case with others, Pan Am shows a different movie going west than eastbound so passengers making round-trips within a week or two won't be stuck with the same movie.

ALL THREE AIRLINES report the majority of customers prefer watching the movie to reading or listening to stereo music.

TWA currently is showing "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" and "The Downhill Racer" on westbound flights. "Cassidy" is aimed at mature audiences and "Racer" for general audiences.

Future flights will screen, "Don't Drink the Water," "Generation," "Ice Station Zebra," "The Only Game in Town," "Viva Max," and "Topaz."

Many seasoned flyers restrict their movie-going to jetting cross-country. This practice has its advantages: the passenger may fall asleep without offending anyone, and the price is right.

The Potting Shed

To herald the first day of spring and the beginning of National Lawn and Garden Week, I planted annuals in my basement A new Gro-Lux outfit and baby greenhouse initiated me into the ranks of those who grow under lights

These days indoor gardeners have a choice of so many growing mediums for different purposes, it's pick your poison (oops) potting pot The new tuffite (Styrofoam) pots and trays are lightweight and stay white and clean Besides that, they re strong and shatterproof, a better pot than clay because they don't develop green algae and fungus growth I find them perfect for painting electric colors like shocking pink sun orange, and squint yellow to coordinate with gay forced tulips grown in them Lots of people prefer peat pots — simple and inexpensive

Milled sphagnum moss as a growing medium in the pot is touted as eliminating damping off Or gardeners can grow seedlings in vermiculite Fertl-Cubes (available from George Park Seed Co, Greenwood, S C) are made of moss, plant food and vermiculite A special feature of using the cubes is that seedlings can be transplanted to the outdoors when it s time, cube and all — no shock to the plant I've seen the cartoned water hyacinths in sponge and Styrofoam, paper narcissus in gravel and seeds started between layers of cotton squares

Keep seedlings at 60 to 75 degrees F. After initial watering, cover with polyethylene sheets or plastic covers (for humidity) until they're germinated Later remove the sheeting and place seedlings under lights (Window sill light just doesn't do it — if you're going to tackle seedlings, get a light) A set-up can be bought for about $15 — cheaper if you make your own!

Seedling containers should be about six inches below the fluroescent tube Some plants develop best under short-day conditions between 60 and 65 degrees Grow the following under artificial lights for 10 to 12 hours a day cornflower, petunia, phlox, gaillardia, poppy, portulaca, scabiosa, snapdragon, verbena, rudbeckia, salpiglossis, globe-amaranth, China-aster and calliopsis

Most plants need 18 hours of light each day If they are started on short days, they soon begin to form flowers, never producing good bedding plants Grow the following seedlings with a day length of 18 hours and a temperature of 65 degrees cockscomb, morning-glory, scarlet sage, sunflower, zinnia, marigold, dahlia and cosmos

If your plants are on neither of these lists, grow them with a day length of 18 to 20 hours If you have no control over the temperature of your basement, and you notice it dips to 50 or 55 degrees, don't fret Day length is not too important at low temperatures, but know they will develop more slowly, that's all

If you're new to gardening under lights as I am, that fluorescent rosy-blue glow from the Gro-Lux when you turn off all other basement lights will really turn you on, especially when you know there's nothing outdoors to hold a candle to your indoor greenery

Basketball's greatest show!

That's what they call the electrifying state finals in Illinois, and it's hard to dispute such lavish praise

This is what every high school team dreams about, a spot in the Elite Eight, state-wide attention, a shot at the biggest prize in schoolboy sports in Illinois.

The giant project of attrition first reduced the field of over 700 starters to the fabled Sweet Sixteen, and now to the final eight.

They'll stage the 63rd edition of this basketball headliner at the monstrous mushroom, the University of Illinois Assembly Hall, and the excitement is building toward that dramatic windup Saturday evening

It starts today with four games, and the pressure is tremendous.

These youngsters live in fear of the bad night the early foul trouble . the layup that just won't fall. But even when you don't win, when you have that bad game, you learn something

For the winners and the losers, it's an experience you never forget.

Entire student bodies and communities channel all their interest and enthusiasm in the direction of this sports spectacular, and gaily-decorated cars with horns blaring and banners waving have already begun the trip to Champaign-Urbana.

By noon today, the campus at the University of Illinois will be alive with excitement, the frenzy that annually accompanies this basketball extravaganza.

The uniqueness of the Illinois tournament series is that one tourney structure applies to all schools regardless of size. While many states have adopted a classification system which separates schools according to size and awards championship titles to winners in each class, Illinois permits all schools to vie for a single title as a true state champion.

When you get this far, you have the tools to take it all, bring home that precious first place hardware.

Could it be an Okawville with only 260 students or a LaGrange with 4,800? Or Effingham St. Anthony with 280 or East Moline with 3,100?

When you win the state tournament in Illinois, you know you've reached the highest ideal of hundreds of teams and coaches and thousands of players.

There's only one true state champion.

What team will reign as king of Illinois basketball? As a guide to help your watching of the state finals, we've talked to the coaches involved, carefully examined the season and tourney performances, and have come up with these brief scouting reports and some predictions.

Now, sit back and enjoy basketball's greatest show!

ST. ANTHONY VS. LA GRANGE
12:15 p.m. Friday

For a club that's lost only two games, St Anthony of Effingham was cruising along in surprising obscurity until Tuesday night. Granted, the Bulldogs don't play that classy a schedule, but there isn't a higher scoring team in Illinois.

And then came Tuesday and that 85-79 overtime shocker over touted Collinsville and now everybody is asking, "Can they knock off another giant in LaGrange?"

Kickin' It Around

by BOB FRISK
Sports Editor

"Sure, there's a chance," says head coach John Keller. "We have one outstanding boy (All-Stater Mike Wenke) and four good ones. And, remember, they didn't think we could beat Collinsville either. We have the confidence now."

Wenke obviously is the key boy for this club that has averaged 89.9 points per game over the season, has topped 100 eight times, and once beat a club 121-29. Mike is a strong 6-7 workhorse who scores at 22.5 per game and also collars about 14 rebounds for each outing.

Wenke had 33 Tuesday in the win over Collinsville, can work well underneath or outside, hits 80 per cent from the line and 55 per cent from the field.

Everybody else on the team is capable of scoring indouble figures although 5-5 Billy Martin, an alternate starter at one guard, is primarily a go-go-go youngster who sparks the team just with his presence.

The biggest surprise for St. Anthony, a school of 280 students, is 6-1 forward Hank Stephens, who didn't even start on the jayvees last winter but who hit 25 in a sectional win over touted Lawrenceville.

Top-ranked LaGrange comes into the Elite Eight with a spotless record in 28 games, size and muscle underneath, and two excellent guards.

Head man Ron Nikcevich, who took over the Lions' job after several fine years at Riverside-Brookfield, has a well-meshed club that has been a slow starter in recent games but which has exploded in the closing minutes.

"The key expression that characterizes this team,"says Nikcevich, "is togetherness and unity. I don't like to think of us as a bunch of individuals. Everyone contributes.

"That's what we've worked on since the beginning of the year. We had to undergo a period of adjustment, like any team would under a new coach, and I like to feel that we're reaching that point of consistency now."

LaGrange has an excellent big man in 6-8 Owen Brown, only a junior but already in his third year with the varsity. He scores at an 18.0 clip and is a strong rebounder and defensive player.

Complementing Brown beautifully is lightning-fast guard Marcus Washington, a 6-1 tricky, high-jumping senior who really likes to challenge his opponent. Scott Shaw, another 6-1 senior, teams with Washington to give LaGrange what many observers call the finest set of guards in the state.

If LaGrange has a weakness, it may be in the outside shooting game and the sometimes erratic play of the forwards.

But they can kill a club on the boards, and that's how they took care of Sterling Tuesday.

FRISK'S PICK: St. Anthony has escaped two straight overtimes in getting this far, has the talented pivot man that is so important, but doesn't appear to have the backcourt strength or muscle underneath to upst LaGrange. We'll say the guards make the difference here as LaGrange advances, 68-61.

OKAWVILLE VS. JOLIET CENTRAL
1:45 p.m. Friday

"This town is going nuts," says ecstatic coach Dave Luechtefeld as he prepares his Okawville Rockets for their Elite Eight assignment.

"It's just unbelievable. Every place has been closed since the regionals started and that win over Mt. Vernon Tuesday . . . well . . . this is just fantastic, unbelievable."

State tourney fans have a couple Little Davids to cheer for in the 1970 finals, and Okawville certainly will draw tremendous support at the Assembly Hall.

The Rockets are gigantic under the basket, and that's why they've advanced this far. They go 6-5 at both forwards with 6-11, 235-pound Gail Wolff, an All-Stater, in the pivot.

The big boy has a great outside touch, can mix it up underneath, but must avoid foul trouble.

"Wolff is averaging about 24 points per game but could be averaging 35," says his coach. "But I have felt all year long that we have to go with the other kids."

Okawville, which clamps on a sticky man-to-man defense, is quicker than most people expect, and the junior forwards both average in double figures.

Wolff had 32 in the Super-Sectional win over Mt. Vernon, but the Rams' center only stood 6-2 and there still seems to be some question about the Rockets' ability to cope with a physical team.

Okawville has ousted a couple big names in Illinois basketball in Centralia and Mt. Vernon, and they kept Centralia from winning its 24th straight regional championship.

Joliet Central has come a long, long way for a club that wasn't expected to make a big splash until next winter.

"We're at our peak now," says their enthusiastic coach Dale Glenn. "I won't be surprised by anything that happens from here on. We've won a lot of our games in the second half this year because of our strong bench and good conditioning. When we beat Thornton, the boys executed perfectly."

Beating Thornton, as expected, has given the Steelmen exceptional confidence in their abilities and this is vital to a young club, a club that starts two juniors and a soph.

"At the start of the year," the coach continued, "we knew Jones (6-6 junior Jeff) could do the job and we knew Powell (6-3 Roger) was a phenomenal sophomore, but the other kids have really come through too."

Powell, the soph, has been sensational.

After Weeks of Preparation

Live and in Color . . . A TV Spectacular!

TOURNAMENT CENTRAL is the nerve-center of the television coverage of the Illinois high school basketball finals. An estimated 5 million viewers will watch the 1970 championship today and tomorrow.

by HERB CARL

It's January 1970, almost 10 weeks before state tournament time.

Harry Fitzhugh, Executive Secretary of the Illinois High School Association, is preparing to draw eight tiny wooden pellets from an old leather bottle to determine the pairings for the Elite Eight in the University of Illinois Assembly Hall.

This is also the signal for television men to go to work preparing one of the biggest events in our state's TV coverage. Ten weeks before tournament time, but lots of work to be done . . . commercials written and taped, interviews arranged, engineering planned, scripts written and edited.

To the sports fan, it's just a matter of reaching over and turning on the television set . . . there's the picture.

Sure, there must be a cameraman and a play-by-play announcer. Yes, maybe we'd better have an engineer too, just in case. So what's the big deal 10 weeks before tournament time?

Channel 9 (WGN-TV) sends a crew of 30 to Champaigne very year for the exciting state finals.

In addition, the advertising agency producing the show sends their own crew of 15.

Writers, producers, camera crews, directors, sound and video engineers converge on the University of Illinois campus Monday of tourney week.

TV trucks set up at the north end of the Assembly Hall are tied in via huge cables with facilities inside. The control room is actually built then and hopefully, by Friday morning they're ready to roll.

Ten weeks of detailed preparation now boils down to six days of concentrated hard work

The 300-page production book covers all assignments in detail Reams of cue cards are unpacked. Commercials have been carefully prepared on color videotape.

WGN-TV uses five color cameras for the tourney, including a 50-pound portable "back-pack" unit for candid shots of cheerleaders and spectators All cameras feed their picture to the remote truck where Director Jack Jacobsen decides which one will go out to viewers.

Tournament Central is the nerve-center of the TV show. A bare concrete room on the lower level of the Assembly Hall bristled with activity.

There's even a makeup man for on-camera appearances of announcers and guests. Rick Hawley of the N.W. Ayer & Son Advertising Agency has served as Executive Producer of the tournament telecasts since the games were first televised.

Jack Drees, well-known sportscaster, is back doing the play-by-play after an absence of two years. This will be Drees' 16th year as state tourney sportcaster, and he was at the microphone for the first television coverage of a state tourney, Hebron's dramatic climb to the title.

Lou Boudreau of WGN, recently elected to the Hall of Fame in baseball, who played in three straight Illinois basketball title games as a prep at Thornton of Harvey, will work with Drees. In addition, there will be several veterans of tournament telecasts on hand to assist in the coverage.

WGN's Jack Rosenberg feeds names and game statistics into a new $20,000 gadget that prints out a superimposed message moving across the bottom of your TV screen. The devise also has a memory bank and will hold 11,000 separate items for play-back at the push of a button.

Assistant directors, producers, and stage managers always seem to be moving about, giving hand signals, whispered messages and sometimes slightly worried or pleased expressions.

In 1952 Illinois became the first state to televise its state basketball tournament. Several states, including Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota and Iowa have copies the Illinois program in recent years.

The two-day Illinois telecast has grown frm a $15,000 operation to a $200,000 bonanza and is still growing. This year, for the first time, the IHSA permitted local TV stations to cover first round games at some Super-Sectionals, and the opening games in Champaign also will be televised around the state.

This year 11 TV stations in Illinois will carry the Assembly Hall games live to an estimated 5 million viewers. Illinois Bell Telephone Co. is sponsoring the telecast for the 19th straight year.

But it didn't just happen.

Dozens of professionals worked for more than 10 weeks to give you the picture. So, go ahead fans, turn on your TV set and enjoy the tournament!

It's always quite a show.

What to Look for in 63rd State Finals

He's their top scorer, can stuff the ball from a standing start, and Tuesday bagged 29 in the win over Maine South.

There are only two seniors on the top seven for this club that has won 17 of 18 in the new year, losing only to East Moline 76-62 in a game coach Glenn still feels they could have won.

"I set some goals at the beginning of the year," summed up Glenn. "I knew we were going to be young but I wanted that conference title, a good showing in the Pekin tourney, 20 victories, and a regional title. I said then the rest is surplus."

For Joliet Central, the "rest" is a spot in the Elite Eight.

FRISK'S PICK: Okawville will have the fans behind them, they do have a big, strong, effective center and front-line size, but we still like Joliet Central's jumping-Jacks in a 63-57 thriller that should feature some real action under those boards.

EAST AURORA VS. SPALDING
7:00 p.m. Friday

East Aurora is back, that swift, slick-passing outfit that looked so sharp last year at the Assembly Hall.

Coach Ernie Kivisto said at the beginning of the year that his Tomcats would get much stronger as the season progressed, and he was right.

Naturally, the attack revolves around 6-3 Tom Kivisto, son of the coach and an All-Stater with a 27 per game scoring average. Tom is a good shooter, although not exceptional from the 15-20 foot range, but he is an adept ball handler and fantastic schoolboy passer.

"We're playing great, just great," says the head coach.

With Tom Kivisto the strength outside and 6-2 Cliff Patterson the key rebounder, the Tomcats need a good performance from 6-6 soph center Greg Smith.

Smith, a burly blonde who is a transfer from Naperville, didn't practice before the Super game Tuesday because of a large, painful blister on his foot. He only scored two points against Harlan, but the doctor says he should be okay by tip-off time today. If he isn't, the Tomcats will be in trouble.

Spalding, second in the state last year, lost its starting five by graduation but has returned to Champaign with a late-season surge that included a stunning win Tuesday over previously unbeaten Lincoln.

"We started from scratch," says head coach Ron Patterson, "and the boys deserve a lot of credit for coming this far. We were only a .500 team in January. The key has been our improvement on defense."

The boy who figures to give Aurora the most trouble is 6-7, 210-pound Ken Wolbeck, who's scoring at 20 per game. "When Ken doesn't want to be stopped, there's no stopping him," says the coach. We just try to get the ball in and he does the rest. He can also go outside when he has to. When people try to collapse on him, it seems that Scovil (6-3 Dave) gets the important baskets."

FRISK'S PICK: Spalding handled Aurora last year in the state, and Kivisto had a poor shooting night, only 4-for-18. The Tomcats need a strong game from Kivisto and their soph Smith to offset the many talents of Spalding's Wolbeck. We like Aurora in a 57-54 battle.

LaSALLE-PERU VS. E. MOLINE
8:30 p.m. Friday

LaSalle-Peru first attracted state-wide attention when they handled touted Bloom and Waukegan over the holidays, and now the Cavaliers find themselves among the state's elite.

"Maybe I'm expecting too much, but I don't think we've looked that sharp recently," says head coach Jack Margenthaler, who prepped at Pinckneyville (Ill.) High School and played three years at Houston.

"Our bench has had to pull us through a couple of times, but we were much steadier Tuesday against Danville. Now, if we can just keep that consistency . . ."

The big plus for LaSalle-Peru is 6-7, 185-pound All-Stater Gary Novak, a young man who was only third team on a freshman unit with 33 points scored. Today, he's averaging 26 points and 19 rebounds per game, and 150 colleges have contacted him.

Novak suffered a severely sprained ankle late in the season and has been a source of concern since. "I just hope he can keep it up," says the coach. "He got 27 for us Tuesday again and is a great kid who's worked hard for four years."

Novak isn't the whole story for LaSalle-Peru because the Cavaliers feature a pair of quick guards in Doug Pomatto and Paul Kramarsic who love to run. They usually go with a zone press throughout the game.

The Cavaliers will need a sparkling effort in their state opener against powerful East Moline, a quick and mature team which likes to mix it up under the boards.

Th Panthers have played possibly the strongest schedule of any team in Illinois and own 28 victories. They've whipped Thornton, Galesburg twice, Joliet Central, Quincy and Collinsville among others.

A physical team, East Moline operates with a front line of 6-5 Craig Davis, 6-6 Darryl Griffin, and 6-4 Tommy Haliburton with both Davis and Haliburton touted for All-State credentials

The Panthers have exceptional balance and a strong bench that includes a 6-7 youngster (Calvin Stamp) who lettered as a soph. When Haliburton fouled out against Galesburg with East Moline trailing by one, the Panthers were still able to pull it out.

"The only way a team can get better is to play the best competition in the state," says head coach Talley. "I think we're one of the top one or two teams in the state. We've proved it all year."

FRISK'S PICK: Watch for LaSalle-Peru's guards to give the Panthers fits for awhile, but we like East Moline's overall strength underneath to settle the issue. LaSalle has size but some of the youngsters are pencil-thin. Call it East Moline, 73-66.

SEMI-FINALS

A match between LaGrange and Joliet Central in the 12:15 p.m. action Saturday would give fans some interesting lessons in position, rebounding. Both clubs like to go at it underneath, and Joliet can give the unbeaten Lions trouble but we look for a steadier LaGrange team, with Owen Brown the difference, to win, 64-57.

In the second game Saturday at 1:45 we have East Aurora matched up with East Moline. Moline's physical strength should be too much for the quick Tomcats. This one offers some interesting possibilities as East Aurora coach Kivisto actually spent several years as head man at East Moline, building up the basketball program. We'll send East Moline to the championship game, 75-70.

THIRD PLACE

Let's call it Joliet Central over East Aurora, 67-61, with rebounding the difference.

CHAMPIONSHIP

If they do meet for the title, as it says here, the confrontation between LaGrange and East Moline could be one of the classic championship games in years.

Both teams have good size, both can go to the boards, although East Moline may be stronger at the forwards and that could spell the difference in the pressure-packed windup.

If there's an edge at guards, it's a slight one and it would go to LaGrange's crack combo of Shaw and Washington.

We've liked this Panther club all year and although it would be great to keep that state title in the suburban area, we see East Moline shading LaGrange, 71-66, for the championship.

Just Where is Okawville?

OK just where is Okawville?

Here's a team in the final eight of Illinois basketball, and not too many people have ever heard of the high school before.

This isn't surprising. Okawville, located in southern Illinois 45 miles from St. Louis, hasn't really done much before now.

But here they are, the rangy Rockets, just a few hours away from an appearance in the University of Illinois Assembly Hall.

Okawville is a slow-paced community of 950 people, and the high school has only 260 students. Incredibly, three of those students stand 6-5, 6-5, and 6-11 which explains a good part of their basketball success.

The community loves their Rockets as you might expect, and they've closed the place down since these youngsters started their climb to state-wide prominence.

"We've got a population of 950 and 900 of them at least want to go to the state tourney," coach Dave Luechtefeld says. "The windows are all painted in town and everybody is tremendously excited."

Each of the starters on the Rocket team grew up in Okawville, and most of the people there work around St. Louis, many at National Mines.

A reporter was trying to find the mayor the other day and recieved this answer:

"He's out of town a lot. He drives a truck in St. Louis for a fruit company. You know, he wants to retire and if he is elected again, he probably will retire. He wants to bring some industry here."

That's Okawville, Ill., home of the Rockets.

A Fine Year but Rog Hoped for More

by KEITH REINHARD

The agony and the ecstasy

Sounds like a good title for a movie or a book

But how about a basketball campaign?

In small, humane doses, this is about the way the Hersey basketball season unwound at any rate A season of great achievement and a season of anguish and despair, it was a period too unsettled and inconsistent to be summed up by any one simple word

And nobody was more aware of this after it was all over than Coach Roger Steingraber

Rog Steingraber

For the record the Huskies captured a consolation bracket championship in the Danville holiday tournament, tied for third in the final Mid-Suburban League ratings, and then advanced all the way to the sectional playoffs before being snuffed out of action for the winter.

These were not bad accomplishments for a school boasting its first graduating class.

But Steingraber was far from satisfied. "You know, a team with our height . . . with our potential . . . doesn't come along very often," he opined "We had a good year and perhaps I was overly optimistic last December in expecting more than that but somehow I just don't feel we realized that full potential."

Several things might have been improved upon by Hersey's cagers of course

They could have won their holiday tourney. They could have given Arlington a good run for the loop title. And they could have advanced even further than opening sectional action.

What happened then to prevent these accomplishments?

Injuries had to play a key role in any failings attributed to this big ballclub. There was Mark Lindstrom lost the first two months of the campaign with a hand injury and there was Tim Nagle out a similar period with his foot in a cast.

There was Don Spry absorbing a broken nose and there was Dick Powell stung by a reoccurring wrist injury. There was also Bruce Frase set back by illness and Scott Feige hindered several times by lesser injuries.

Lindstrom finally regained his preseason form in time for the playoffs and Spry and Feige were never seriously hampered by their pains. But Nagle, who showed a world of promise before his injury never did not hit his stride again and Frase, after a tremendous start last November, failed to regain that tempo the remainder of the season.

Powell, meanwhile, was sidelined later in the campaign at a time when he was probably the most consistent performer on the club. That void was never really filled.

Still, while the Hersey attack received way more than its share of crippling blows, Steingraber's gang never gave up the struggle. It was no doubt because of this persistence that they were eventually rewarded with a regional crown.

And while Hersey knew its share of gloom, bright spots along the path to glory were numerous. There was Andy Pancratz to begin with, settling into a varsity role as a sophomore with the ease of a swallow taking to flight. He went on to become the league's top rebounder (231 for a 16.6 average) and seventh highest scorer in the circuit with a 15.6 medium.

He also established himself as one of the most rugged and effective defensive players around and for his efforts he attained recognition on the MSL's all-conference listings.

Feige added his share of sunshine to the Huskie season. After a slow start he burst forth in the Danville gathering with a 27-point production and was a pretty tough individual to stop the rest of the way. After finishing ninth in the league in scoring (a 13 9 tempo) he went on to pace his club to their regional laurels and wound up with the hottest shooting pace on the roster, both afield and at the line.

By putting two great seasons back-to-back, Feige joined a very select list at the conclusion of his prep career, moving up into the top ten all-time MSL point producers.

The rest of Steingraber's crew made their own valuable contributions too. Pesky guard Mark Jacoby practically accounted for Hersey's two most important wins of the season with clutch shooting. Burly Don Spry gained respect as one of the top defensive players in the loop. Lanky Mark Lindstrom beefed up the team with some tough outside shooting to go with his rebounding and ball handling prowess during the stretch drive and John Durso, as Steingraber's number six man all season, came off the beach countless number of times to shore up the club.

It's all over now. Eight members of Hersey's ten-man alignment graduate this year.

With coaches especially, there's always a next year however. And with the likes of a Pancratz to build around and the potential of a Frase to dwell upon, Steingraber can't be too far away from wondering if there might not be more of the ecstasy than agony coming with the next November.

Hits Every Day

Joe DiMaggio's most famous record is that he hit in 56 consecutive major league games. But most people do not know that the Yankee Clipper once had a longer streak — he hit in 61 straight games while with San Francisco of the Pacific Coast League in 1933.

Strong Loop Finish Cougar Bright Spot

by LARRY LAFRHART

One way to review Conant's just past basketball season is to follow a format which has been used by television's Laugh In — first the bad news, then the good news.

Let's get the worst over with first.

The Cougars finished with eight wins against 13 losses and suffered a mid-season losing streak of eight games.

They were plagued at times by an all-too generous defense which gave up an average of 86.1 points per game. During a nightmarish six-game streak, Conant yielded a staggering average of 85 points, allowing single-game totals like 101, 95, 88 and 87.

The Cougars were crippled early in the season by a rash of injuries to key performers and this drastically cut down their depth the rest of the way.

Conant never could live up to pre-season expectations of coach Dick Redlinger to win their regional and of other observers to strongly contend for the Mid-Suburban League championship.

But wait. Before you get too bleak a picture there were good points too.

Four wins in their first six games and a strong finish took much of the sting out of that losing streak in between. Conant amazed everyone by closing out the league schedule with upset overtime wins over Arlington (The champs' only loss) and Prospect.

Brant Barton, the slick, 6-1 forward, led the league in scoring most of the season before finishing third with a 19.0 average. He was a unanimous all-conference pick and set nine different school records, which will be specified below.

Center Dave Lloyd Redlinger felt, was 'the best defensive center in the league.' There was other individual improvement, especially in sophomores Dave Irion and John Whiteford and junior guard John Macdonald.

The defense as a whole showed great improvement. In a six game stretch late in the season it didn't allow more than 57 points, setting a school record by holding Arlington to 44.

Finally, and most gratifying to Redlinger, was that his squad never gave up, even when things may have seemed hopeless.

In retrospect, the coach quite naturally had mixed emotions about the season of peaks and valleys.

Brant Barton

'It had its good parts and bad parts,' he began. "Sure, it was disheartening when we had all those injuries and a couple of guys quit. But the ones that stayed, I think, deserve a hand for hanging in there."

Even if Conant didn't win the title, they deserve the Blue Cross award. Had the original squad been called together any time after Christmas, it would have had enough casts and crutches to resemble a company of war veterans.

Among the wounded who missed sizeable hunks of the season were Bob Wallin, Dave Kellermeyer, Bruce Newman, Bob Schuster and Ed Brandl, all of whom had shown good promise. At least one other talented performer dropped off the team for non-physical reasons.

"We kept having to call up new kids and start all over," recalls Redlinger.

It takes time to get boys working well together who are not used to each other. Hence, Redlinger's offensive patterns suddenly began fizzling and the defense became leakier than a moth-eaten raincoat. Too much of the offensive load fell on the shoulders of Barton, who at times looked to be taking on a whole team by himself.

"But we kept working and working on a new defense (1-3-1 zone)" Redlinger says, "until we got it down pretty good. After that, we were tough. We looked pretty good in our last few games.

'Our strongest point? You may laugh at this but I thought it was that defense. Whiteford played the point real well, and Lloyd did a real good job at center.

"Lloyd usually held the other centers to about half their average. He was moody and a little inconsistent, but when he found he could play good defense, he worked at it and took real pride in it."

Lloyd was by far the team's top rebounder with 156.

Naturally, Redlinger had praise for Barton. "He was our outstanding boy all year and a real hard worker," says the coach. "He must have taken half a million practice shots from the time he was a freshman until now."

That diligence paid off in a host of records. Among the new marks Barton set were: Most season points (398), most points in one game (32 against Palatine), highest overall average (18.9), most field goals, season (133), free throws attempted, season (149), free throws attempted, game (19), free throws made, season (117) and season free throw percentage (77 per cent).

Bob Wallin, 6-4 senior forward, showed flashes of good rebounding but missed much of the season with a leg fracture. He and Lloyd each had 16 rebounds in different games to tie for the season high.

After the Cougars' strong start, the many injuries began to take their toll. The first sign came in the Rockford Invitational holiday tourney when the Cougars took two bombings. They absorbed several more shellackings as the defense began to crumble, then lost a couple of close ones before snapping the streak.

After that, the team pulled itself together to win four of its last five league games. That made the final MSL record a respectable 6-8, but the season ended all too quickly when Maine West breezed past the Cougars in their first outing in their own regional.

All things considered, Redlinger couldn't be too unhappy despite his early expectation of a winning record.

"Even with all their mistakes, a coach has to be proud of those boys," he concluded.

Card Cage Future Extremely Bright

by LARRY MLYNCZAK

George Zigman's record since taking over the head basketball coaching job at Arlington two years ago is quite impressive.

Zigman, who came to Arlington from Glenbard in the fall of 1968, has had successive 16-6 and 18-7 records In Mid-Suburban League play his Cardinals have been 25-3. To his credit, Zigman has a second place and a league championship in the MSL

But, as Jimmy Durante likes to say, you ain't seen nothing yet.

As good as Zigman's Cards have been the past two years, next season's team, barring unforeseen injuries, has the potential to be the best yet.

No less than 73 per cent of this year's scoring total and 63 per cent of the rebounding from this championship season will be back in 1970-71.

"But we'll have two big places to fill next year," Zigman reminded.

The two places, forward and guard, were filled quite well by 6-3 Jack Hult and 5-7 Bill Heffernan. Both are seniors and will not be around for Zigman to call on next year.

Hult was Arlington's second leading rebounder, fifth leading scorer and a heck of a defensive ball player. He had a fine shot from the baseline and was especially noted for his performance in the clutch.

Heffernan was the Cardinal playmaker and went about his job as well as any other guard in the MSL "His job was to run the team," Zigman said. "And he did a great job for us. He didn't get to shoot very much but he never complained. He liked the playmaking responsibility and he did it well "

Besides Hult Heffernan, Jim Stipp and Gary Bratko, however, the rest of the Cards who scored in double figures will all be back. . including six of the top eight scorers

The leading scorer, guard John Brodnan, will be one ofthe returnees.

Brodnan, a 6-1 junior, led the team with 478 points, finishing less than 20 points shy of Arlington's single season scoring record. And Brodnan was by no means a "gunner."

He hit on 51 per cent of his field goal attempts and set a Mid-Suburban League record by sinking 83 per cent of his free throws. Brodnan was fourth in rebounding and second in assists for the Cards.

Zigman's rapidly improving big men will also be back — Mike Mandele and Bill Kieck.

Mandele, a 6-5 forward, led the team in offensive and defensive rebounds and was second in scoring, averaging 11.1 points per game. He also made 48 per cent of his field goal attempts.

George Zigman

Kieck, a 6-7 center, was third in both scoring and rebounding. The tall junior made 36 per cent of his field goal attempts.

Also returning in 1970-71 will be Zigman's two "sixth" men from this year's contingent. Tom Harris, a 6-2 forward, was Arlington's top reserve until a broken leg forced him to miss half the season Ken Peters, a 5-10 sophomore guard, was the Cardinal sixth man during the latter part of the season. Next year Peters will be much better than the 27 per cent he shot from the floor this year

The Cardinals started off the season not quite looking like the team that would go to win the MSL championship. They were 3-3 going into the DeKalb Christmas Tournament and then split four games in the tou ney. "The team we brought back from DeKalb was a different one from the one that left," Zigman noted.

Indeed it was

The Cardinals rolled their way to 10 straight wins and clinched the league title with two weeks to spare.

The week after clinching the crown, the Cards were caught in an off night and lost to Conant in overtime. But they came right back to win three straight, including victories over Mundelein and St. Viator in the Regional Tournament.

But Arlington lost to Hersey, a team which it had beaten twice previously, in the finals of the regional.

"To be frank," Zigman said, "we were flat against Hersey. I'm not taking anything against Hersey. No denying, they did beat us. But we didn't play a good game at all."

The loss to Hersey, incidentally, was the only game that Arlington lost on its home floor the entire season.

"I felt sorry for Heffernan and Hult and the rest of the seniors," Zigman remarked. "I played in the sectional tournament when I was in high school so I know what they're missing out on.

"But maybe, just maybe, that loss might be a blessing in disguise. I told my boys after the game, 'There's only one way that you get to know success and that is by having a couple of failures.' When you think about it, how are these boys going to recognize success unless they've had a couple of rejections in their lives?

"Maybe that loss will give us something to prove next year."

Zigman called the 1969-70 effort "a team effort all the way down the line, from the starters to the 12th man. We couldn't have won it without everybody pulling together like they did."

Zigman's Cards did win it — the championship — this year when not too many people expected them to.

But come next December the pressure will surely be on — there won't be anybody picking the Cardinals any lower than Numero Uno.

Period of Transition for 'Cats Showed 9-12 Record

by KEITH REINHARD

Limbo

Officially it's described as an abode of souls barred from Heaven through no fault of their own

Off the record it's the haven in which Wheeling's basketball squad spent a good portion of their 1969-70 crusade

The Wildcats really couldn't be blamed much either

Here was a ball club succeeding two consecutive heavenly entries in little more than name alone Yet with all but two fresh faces on the roster and a brand new coach to boot they succeeded in pulling off a season 50 per cent successful at least

Youthful coach Ted Ecker guided his charges to a winning conference campaign and that alone sufficed to stifle the doubts of many wondering what would happen to the defending Mid-Suburban league champs sans the backbone of their team

True the ex-champs did fold quickly in a couple of tournaments bowing out of the Dundee holiday tourney in two tries and their regional playoff in one from calls both conquerers went on to win their tournaments taking quite a bit of the sting out of the defeats

And as for the paltry 1-6 non-conference mark rung up by the Cats it didn't come to light until most of the dust had settled across the state near the conclusion of the cage campaign Five of the six foes in taking Wheeling their victim in out of league bouts went on to claim regional titles

Why then with a third place finish in loop play and a decent if not respectable 9-12 mark overall should Wheeling's group fall into limbo at all? For one thing pilot Ecker would be the first to want it that way

It was really a period of transition for us this year We just didn't have the horses to make an earnest run for it he said Gary Kawell was probably one of the most consistent and durable players in the league and Bart's (Kevin Barthule) overall play was one of the bright spots on our club most of the year but the rest of our lineup was too unsettled to produce a constant winner

The mentor went on to speak of two of the most promising young ball players around in Roger Wood and Mike Groot

Rog is still learning the game He's come an amazingly long way this year and his help to the club has been invaluable but we feel he's still shy of his peak yet And his injury midway through the season and the fact that Mike didn't come along to help us until after Christmas had to make a difference in our overall showing

These hindrances coupled with an unsettled fifth position all season long had to make the difference as well between a winning and a losing ledger

Wood who missed two games and played only a fraction of a third, completed his sophomore year with the number six scoring average in the circuit at 16.1 His team coincidentally dropped all three contests in which he did not go the route

Groot meanwhile responded to his elevation to the parent club in January with one of the sweetest outside shots around The lefthanded junior finished with the tenth best scoring tempo in the MSL (13.9) nabbed fourth in the circuit in field goal accuracy (sandwiched between eight inside shooting specialists) and placed in the top 20 in both free throw shooting and assist mediums

The youngsters fit in well with veterans Kawell and Barthule Kawell who worked with Wood under the nets compiled a 11.7 league scoring average with a varied assortment of close in shots against mostly taller competition In addition to earning all conference honors for his toils he moved into sixth place on his school's all-time rebounding list at 234 and among the top ten on Wheeling's career scoring roster at 411

Barthule proved to be somewhat of a disappointment as a scorer after a 9.1 average his junior year But his floor work easily made up for it He wound up second in the MSL in assists with a record 5.1 average and achieved a ranking of third on the school's all-time list for that department with 178 over a three-season span

Barthule also finished up his prep career with 440 total points tying him with former 'Cat standout Rex Peterson in fifth place on the school's scoring ladder

After this quartet the cager most called upon to fill the fifth slot in Ecker's alignment was senior Jon Pitt a scrapper who rebounded, passed shot and dribbled equally well He had to earn a lot of votes as the most hustling ball player in the conference

This combination, however augmented primarily by Mark Bencriscutto and Bob Stegg wasn't afforded the opportunity to germinate And while non-conference losses at the hands of regional winning Aurora East Danville Deerfield Hersey and Crystal Lake could be written off, other less-than-successful endeavors had to prompt questions concerning Wheeling's overall showing

Ecker glimpsed beyond the immediate horizon during the holidays and in subsequent weeks began giving bursts of exposure to a batch of talented underclassmen with seemingly unlimited drive

The list includes junior Dave Geils and sophomores Jim Kass, Joe Rusek and Tony Schuld All have now acquired some amount of varsity experience and all have proved at the same time that they will have no problem making the transition to permanent varsity status next winter

And by joining with the likes of Wood and Groot Wheeling's coach feels the upcoming lot of young hopefuls will bring the 'Cats out of limbo and back into serious contention over the next two campaigns

Track Relays Host 7 MSL Teams

The first of two big indoor weeks is on tap this Saturday when seven Mid-Suburban League track teams participate in the Blue Deamon and Naperville relays.

Arlington, Fremd, Wheeling, Prospect and Hersey will be challenging a field of 12 at the Maine East hosted meet starting at noon.

At the same time, Conant and Palatine will be competing in Class "A" and 'B' respectively down at Naperville.

Palatine has the best chance of the MSL entries for the top prize for Coach Joe Johnson's boys have done it three out of the last four years. And the Pirate coach admitted that he thought they had a good chance again.

The feeling was shared by Bud Berger, head man for Naperville, who added that Palatine usually just has "too good a program" for the rest of the Class 'B' teams.

Berger, who's mighty proud that his meet is entering its 35th straight year, said he thought that Riverside-Brookfield and Proviso West would fight it out for the 'A' title. Proviso captured it last year.

Another defending champ — Maine East — is also one of the top contenders again, according to Deamon head coach Al Eck. He also tabbed Niles North, Maine West and Maine South as the teams that could have the best chance of breaking the stranglehold the Deamons have had on their own meet having won it all three years.

Also entered besides the MSL teams and the favorites are Highland Park, Niles East and West. Last year, Arlington was third followed by Fremd and Prospect tied for sixth and Wheeling all alone in eighth.

In the Class 'A' tussle at Naperville, Conant will have to vie for honors with Aurora East and West, Deerfield, Elgin and Elgin Larkin, New Trier West, Hinsdale Central, Willowbrook, Naperville as well as favored Proviso and R-B.

Palatine will have to fight off Downers Grove North and South, Glenbard North, Glenbrook North and South, Crown, Kaneland, Wheaton North and Central, and Benet Academy.

After this weekend, the spotlight switches to the Wildcat and Oak Park showdowns.

Classic Battles Continue

The battlegrounds will be Barrington's Ten Pin Bowl for the men and Rolling Meadows Bowl for the ladies as the Paddock Classic Traveling Leagues resume their second-half races at the usual hour of 6:30 Saturday evening.

There are no direct clashes for first place, but all matches will be important as the league schedule moves into its closing stages Only four more weeks remain until the second-half champs are crowned.

The Women's Classic, which will be displayed on lanes 29 through 36 at Rolling Meadows, will include the following matches: Girard-Bruns vs. Des Plaines Lanes, Morton Pontiac vs. Sims Bowl, Duchess Beauty Salon vs. Kemmerly Realty and Doyle's-Striking Lanes vs. Lattof Chevrolet.

The men's schedule at Ten Pin has Buick-in-Evanston vs Langlo's Refinishing, Thunderbird Pro Shop vs. Snack Time Restaurant, Morton Pontiac vs Gaare Oil Co. and Uncle Andy's Cow Palace vs. Aladdin's Lamp Restaurant at the Flying Carpet Motor Inn.

At present, the men's Classic has a red-hot chase going between two teams for first place. Morton Pontiac now leads by one point, having taken over the top last week from Snack Time Restaurant, which had held the lead for several weeks.

There are several other strong contenders Uncle Andy's is a solid third, five points out of first, and Gaare Oil and Buick-in-Evanston are tied for fourth, each eight points back.

Don Eberl still leads the league with his 198 average. Closest to him are Rich Sypel of Snack Time, Joe Simonis of Uncle Andy's, Bill Smith of Morton and Ray Olson of Buick-in-Evanston.

The standings aren't quite as tight at the top of the ladies' league, with the growing concern being to stop the fast rise of Des Plaines Lanes, which has opened up an eight-point lad. Sims Bowl and Lattof Chevrolet are tied for second, while Doyle's-Striking and Morton are deadlocked for fourth.

Pheasant Run Course Now Open

Marv Oglesby

The Pheasant Run 18-hole championship golf course has officially opened for the season with pro, Marv Oglesby, returning for his second year. Oglesby spent four years as pro at the Barrington Hills Country Club and six years as head pro at the Elgin Country Club before coming to Pheasant Run in 1969.

Last year, Oglesby came in second in the finals of the Illinois P.G.A match play championship. He plays in as many local area tournaments as possible and usually winds up "in the money" several times a year.

The Pheasant Run course was remodeled last season and a new pro shop and locker room were constructed at the west end of the resort property. The course is available for group golf outings and tournaments as well as individual play and golf instruction. Electric and hand carts are on hand for rental. Greens fees are $5 00 on weekdays and $5.50 on weekends and holidays.

For information and reservations call 584-6300 or the Chicago number, 261-7366.

Central AAU Gymnastics At Arlington

The Central AAU Men's Gymnastics Championships will be held Saturday, March 21, starting at 12 noon at Arlington High School.

The competition sanctioned by the United States Gymnastics Federation will feature all the Olympic events plus trampoline.

Boys of high school age or with an exercise of a 5 0 caliber or above may enter in the junior and senior divisions. The meet is sponsored by the Midwest Gymnastics Association, Inc.

Any questions on entries may be directed to Arlington High Gymnastics coach Tom Walthouse at 253-6200, extension 65.

The doors will open at 11 a.m. Saturday with the events starting at noon. Admission is $1.00 for adults and 50 cents for students.

Palatine Matmen Sixth at Tourney

The Palatine Park District wrestling team finished sixth in the East Maine Invitational tournament as five grapplers finished in the top four.

Randy McAlister took a first place, John Lonergan a second, Brian Bauer and Rusty Bersteegh thirds and Sam Mulvey fourth in the invitational. East Maine's park district won the meet with 91 points. Palatine was sixth with 34.

In recent action Palatine also defeated St. Colette 32-3 and Addams Junior High 28-9. The Palatine winners against St. Colette were Fred Barr, Bill Skinner, Lonergan, McAlister, Bob Stark, Jamie Swartz, Chuck Tuttle and Bauer. The winners against Addams were Tuttle, Barr, Lonergan, McAlister, Bauer, Bill Country man, Skinner and Bruce DeWyze.

Wheeling Wins In Hockey Play

Wheeling's Wildcats scored an impressive 6-1 victory over Darken's Falcons in hockey action at the Polar Dome in Santa's Village, Dundee.

Scoring for Wheeling were Biff Lowing with two goals, and Dean Sheridan, Art Andrews, Dave Connelly, and Gordon Halcrow with one each.

Suns' Start

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—In 1968-69, their first season in the National Basketball Association, the Phoenix Suns failed to win a single game against Baltimore, Boston, Los Angeles and Atlanta. The Suns won only 16 games against 66 defeats.

Girls Track Finals Slated

The Palatine Bible Church girls track team, ages 8-13, won the District-2 meet over 16 schools and qualified for the Chicagoland Area championships at Wheaton College on Saturday at 7 p.m.

The Palatine Bible School scored higher than 16 schools at Wheeling High School last week to quaify for Saturday's championship finals of the AWANA Olympics.

Pitt Sparkles But 'Cats Fall

Jon Pitt logged a pair of school marks in field events but Wheeling fell anyway in indoor track action against hosting Maine West last week.

Pitt picked up a pair of blue ribbons with record breaking performances in the high jump and long jump. Only two other Wildcat managed firsts in the dual encounter however and the Warriors triumphed 75-34.

Pitt's marks were a 19-11½ effort in the broad jump and a 6-0 leap in the high jump. Sam Romano meanwhile unleashed a 46-2¼ shot put and Gary Hildebrandt turned in a 53.0 quarter mile to account for Wheeling's only other individual firsts.

Other 'Cat pointage was contributed by Dave Poole, Gary Kawell, Tom Holzkopf and Frank Savage. Poole placed second in the long jump at 18-3½, Kawell picked up a second in the 50 and a third in the 440, Holzkopf earned a third in the shot-put and Savage came home third in the 880 run.

To Feature Sled Dogs

The International debut of one of the Midwest's fastest growing winter sports will be in early spring. Just how strong and swift Northern sled dogs actually are will be proved in daily exhibitions at the International Kennel Club Show, April 4-5, at Chicago's International Amphitheatre.

Added to show competition among 114 AKC breeds, obedience trials, field trials and junior dog judging, the Midwest Sled Dog Club will compete with Siberian Huskies, Alaskan Malamutes, Samoyeds, Eskimo and Indian Dogs, and Alaskan Huskies in sled races, weight pulling contests and Skijoring — dogs pulling the driver on skis.

These Northern breeds have an ancient history. It is believed that the ancestors of these modern racers first entered this continent in the great migrations from Siberia over the natural land bridge that once connected Siberia and Alaska. The history of Alaska was shaped with these sled dogs as an integral part — Sled dogs once carried diptheria serum 650 miles in a blizzard to save the early citizens of Nome from an epidemic in 1925.

Modern Class "A" races are run over 20 mile courses for three days with total time declaring the winner. In class "A" races, six to 12 dogs constitute a team pulling an eight foot sled at an average speed of 16 miles per hour over a 60 mile course.

Sled dog racing has been modified for the International competition. Competition will be over a quarter mile nylon carpeted course in children, novice and professional classes. Competition will also be in weight pulling contest — the best pull in the Midwest Club this year is 905 pounds by one dog. The record is over 1,500 pounds.

Competition will be just as though it were set in the winter of Alaska. Over 60 Huskies, Samoyeds and Malamutes and dogs will be staked out in the race area. Races and contests will be held both days of the International. The weight pulling contests are great crowd pleasers.

At Rolling Meadows

A 2079 series was rolled by the Stingers and the Moonshiners had a 732 game for the Thursday Eye Openers at Rolling Meadows. . .High scores of the week were the Gimlets Irma Ressler 183-518; Nora Amato of the Stingers 194-501; the Moonshiners Esther Soukup 193-485; and Grace Lisching of the Bloody Marys 184.

10 resounding reasons why you should buy a new Chevrolet instead of a new something else:

1 Higher resale value. No other car in Chevrolet's field gives you as much back on your initial investment. Year after year. You may never want to sell your Chevrolet, but if you do, it'll be rewarding.

2 Deep down value. When you buy a Chevrolet you get exclusive things like flush-and-dry rocker panels which help combat rust. And inner fenders that keep your outer fenders looking good longer.

3 Smooth, smooth ride. Chevrolet springs are computer selected. Linked with Full Coil suspension and advanced body mounting system, it makes our big rides a smooth ride.

4 Impressive styling. Reason enough alone to go with Chevrolet. The impression is that it's an expensive car, if you want to make an impression.

5 Massive interiors. Room? Room to stretch out or to sit tall. A lot of room for people and their luggage. Chevrolet actually has more front leg room than any other car in its field.

6 Side-guard beams. A steel side-guard beam is built into every big Chevrolet's door for added protection and peace of mind..

7 A finish that lasts. In Chevrolet's field a new "something else" won't have Magic-Mirror acrylic lacquer finish. Which is unfortunate because Chevrolet's 15 colors sure keep their shine.

8 Exceptional engines. Chevrolet's standard 350-cubic-inch V8 runs on regular fuel. So does an even larger 400-cubic-inch V8 that you can order. There are also four other fine performing engines available.

9 Tremendous selection. Of colors. Of accessories. Of engines. Of transmissions. Of fabrics. Of custom features you can add. And of models to pick from. There are nine different big Chevrolets alone.

10 America's favorite. Something else a new "something else" can't claim: America's most popular car. If actions speak louder than words, doesn't this say something to you? See your Chevrolet dealer.

Chicago Bears' Ralph Kurek

Kurek to Speak at Lancer Sports Banquet

Ralph Kurek will be the guest speaker Tuesday night at the annual Lake Park Athletic Banquet sponsored by the Itasca Lions Club.

Kurek, backfield handyman of the Chicago Bears, has been a hard-driving, consistent ground-gainer since he joined the Bears in 1965, with a rushing average of 3.6 in four years.

His single biggest day last year was at Minnesota where he rushed for 69 yards in ten carries and caught four passes for 50. Late in the game he scored on a 23-yard touchdown run to give the Bears the lead.

The banquet Tuesday night is for Lake Park athletes, cheerleaders, Lancettes, and their fathers. At 8 p.m., following the banquet, awards will be presented in the auditorium and Kurek will address the gathering.

The public is invited to the program in the auditorium.

Chicago Outdoor Show Grand Opening April 10

Preparations are well underway for the expected 400,000 visitors to tour the Chicago Boat, Travel and Outdoor Show which opens April 10 at the International Amphitheatre.

Some 400 displays by exhibitors in the boating, fishing, camping and outdoor fields plus state tourism bureaus, resorts, vacation spas, campgrounds and dude ranches will be presented.

Upwards to $3 million in products and services will be on display at the 10-day exposition. An estimated 170 boating exhibitors will show 500 vessels with an additional 250 exhibitors representing fishing tackle, travel and other industries.

One of the largest exhibitor groups at the show will be the all-terrain vehicles. The 37th, annual Chicagoland attraction will have such unique names as Terra Tiger, Sandpiper and Sidewinder — each capable of traversing anything except the side of a building. These unique vehicles are like a boat, dune buggy and swamp buggy all rolled into one.

About 125 tackle and equipment manufacturers will also be displaying their wares. Also the big three in boat motors — Johnson, Mercury and Evinrude — will be showing off their latest lines. These three manufacturers will be featuring snow mobiles, too.

Performing daily at a 20 by 100-foot pool will be Peter Anderson, Scottish and international casting champion.

Other specialty attractions on tap are daily showings of a collection of every Winchester model firearm manufactured as well as a mad, mod 17-foot guitar boat — "the boat that rocks."

Admission is $2 for adults and 75 cents for children. Opening day hours are 6 p.m. to 11 p.m., Saturday from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m., and on Sunday from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Gates are open weekdays from 2 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Baseball Rules Meetings Scheduled

The Illinois High School Association will be holding baseball rules interpretation meetings starting next week at 15 locations throughout the state.

Three sites that umpires, coaches and athletic administrators in the Paddock area might want to attend are at Des Plaines (Maine West) on Tuesday, March 24, at Wauconda High School on Thursday, April 2, and at the University of Illinois Chicago Circle Campus on Thursday, March 25.

All the meetings will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The rules interpretation will be based on the National Alliance Baseball Code. Part of each session will be devoted to the mechanics and procedures of umpiring.

The manager at Des Plaines will be Ken Olson and the interpreter will be Jack Klein. Managing at Wauconda will be Sam Renno with Klein at interpreting. Al Herman will be managing the Chicago meeting with DeWayne Gailhaert doing the interpreting.

Murphy In Seminar

Kenneth R. Murphy, 525 N. Walnut, Itasca, an associate of the Chicago-Hannon agency of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co., recently attended the company's first 1970 estate planning seminar.

The seminar, attended by 34 field representatives from 26 agencies in 18 states, emphasized the coordination of life insurance with other assets in the areas of personal and business financial planning.

A native of Buffalo, N.Y., Murphy received a B.B.A. degree in business administration from St. Bonaventure University. A veteran of the U.S. Army, he joined Massachusetts Mutual in 1961 after several years as a special agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation and is chairman of the Crusade of Mercy campaign in his community.

Badgerland Blows Its Horn at Show

Wisconsin's vacation time offerings will go on display at the Arlington Park Convention Center in Arlington Heights, when "Wisconsin On Parade Show" opens on Wednesday, April 1 through Sunday, April 5.

Combined for the first time in the history of Badgerland's vacation industry, will be the state's array of resort offerings, campgrounds, motels and hotels. Many of the state's related industries including boating, camping, hunting and fishing will be highlighted in displays, said Victor Swan, director of the show.

Miss Wisconsin, Alice in Dairyland and Lt. Governor Jack Olson will also be in attendance, as well as the Wisconsin Indian Dancers.

Pat Wilse, "Uncle Pat" to the visitors at Aqualand near Boulder Junction, Wis., will have his "Deer Forest" display with 12 tame deer that may be photographed and petted by show visitors.

Jim Reeder will be on hand with his tame timber wolf, Gentle Ben's stand-in "Big Ben" will be at the show along with his handlers.

Wisconsin's "Green Bay Packer" exhibit is scheduled for the show, with live "pros" there to autograph souvenirs.

Wisconsin's Circus Museum of Baraboo will have an exhibit, plus live music played throughout the day on the calliope. Live exhibitions, Indian vocalists, Indian artists at work are all planned to be a part of the five-day event.

Carl Marty, naturalist and wildlife authority, will also be at the fair.

Movies filmed in Wisconsin will be a daily feature in the theatre section of the show area.

The "Miss Outdoor Wisconsin Shutterbug Contest," offering free vacations in Wisconsin as prizes, will be featured. Photos of Miss Outdoor Wisconsin may be taken twice during each hour of the show, in color or black and white. Entry blanks will be available at the show. Vern Whaley, president of Photo Ideas, Inc. will judge the entries, which must be received by May 1, 1970.

Show hours are 2-10 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Saturday 12 noon to 10 p.m. and Sunday 12 noon until 8 p.m.

Forecasts Brighter Days in 1970

"No one has a monopoly of truth," said U.S. Representative Philip Crane, R-13, as he explained to the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors last week "Congress' position in today's money market — what the future holds."

A member of the House Banking and Currency Committee, Crane spoke at the board's monthly meeting, held at Arlington Park Towers, Arlington Heights.

"We cannot divorce the housing problem from others facing our country. We have a mutual vested interest in the survival of our economy," he commented, noting the opinions of various interest groups in the U.S.

The problems within the real estate and housing industry which he referred to include the decreasing employment figures within the industry over the past year, and a substantial drop in mortgage lending over the same period, although he predicted a more favorable market toward the end of this year.

Referring to two bills proposed to alleviate the mortgage money pinch, Crane said that the formation of a national development bank, and the purchase of government securities by the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board would raise the question of rationing, and largely bypass suburban areas. "The bill to create the national development bank would only aggravate the situation," said Crane, "because the chief ill is the enormous deficit incurred by the previous administration, to the tune of $57 billion." He cited the increase in the money supply from 1959 to 1969, a jump from $65 billion to $365 billion, without a similar increase in the production of goods and services.

Crane also criticized another proposal to lower the interest rates paid on home mortgages by middle income families (up to $12,000 income annually). "There would only be 100,000 loans made each year under this plan, when 36 million families would qualify. This would also require a surtax of 1.5 per cent," Crane stated.

Turning to state usury laws, Crane said, "The whole concept is medieval and antiquated. Just like any other commodity, the price of money is determined on the market." This observation is relevant in Illinois, where the state interest ceiling, set at 8 per cent, puts savings institutions at a disadvantage in competition with treasury bills, and other gomenment instruments paying a higher rate.

Efforts by the current administration to ease the housing market were cited by Crane, including measures to curb inflation, the raising of VA and FHA interest rates, and the extension of credit through The Federal National Mortgage Corp., Government National Mortgage Corporation, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and other agencies.

The creation of a secondary mortgage market for conventional mortgages is a promising proposal, according to Crane, as well as the attraction of private capital.

It was announced at the meeting that the regular monthly meeting for April has been canceled. The Illinois Association of Real Estate Boards' sales caravan will be held April 8-10, with the April 9 meeting to be held at Arlington Park Towers.

New active members were installed at the meeting, including: Clarence E. Folkes, Kole Real Estate, Rolling Meadows; Fred I. Gillick, Fred I. Gillick, Park Ridge; Ralph H. Plans to Issue Mortgage Bonds

Chairman J. Harris Ward recently announced that Commonwealth Edison Co. plans to market a $100 million issue of ifrst mortgage bonds through competitive bidding on April 8, 1970, subject to satisfactory market conditions.

The maturity date of the new bonds — not earlier than the 2nd nor later than the 30th anniversary of their date of issue — will be fixed by telegraphic notice from the Company to prospective bidding group representatives at least 72 hours before the bidding time. The new bonds are to be non-callable if their term is eight years or less. Otherwise, they will be non-refundable at a lower interest cost for eight years from date of issue.

The company will shortly file a petition with Illinois Commerce Commission and a registration statement with Securities and Exchange Commission covering the proposed bond issue.

Ward said the proceeds will be added to working capital for application in part toward repayment of short-term commercial paper notes issued and to be issued primarily for interim financing of the company's construction program and in part toward the cost of that program, estimated at $1.95 billion for the five-year period 1970-1974.

There are no lots for sale in Inverness...just homesites

There's a big difference Most developments are arbitrarily divided to get the maximum number of rectangular parcels from the land. These are lots Inverness planners followed the contour of the rolling countryside letting nature determine the individual size, shape and character. These are homesites. Each is one acre or more, and provides a spacious, "custom" setting for your home. This same natural planning produced the picturesque winding roads in Inverness. It's no accident that magnificent Inverness is regarded as one of the most beautiful communities in the Midwest. Homesites from $12,000 to $32,000 Liberal terms are available. INTERIOR DECORATION service is provided free to owners of Green Acres Condominiums in Arlington Heights, a development of Charles G. Matthies, Inc. Pictured above is the Sellergren-decorated living room of the model. One and two-bedroom units are available, with prices ranging from $22,900 to $27,700. All units have a carpeted balcony or a stone patio entered through sliding glass doors in the living room.

Stay Even With Inflation

Charles Matthies of Charles G. Matthies, Inc., condominium builder/developer in the Chicago area, recently stated that young people are rapidly becoming a substantial portion of the condominium market.

Matthies, who built the first condominium in Illinois following the passage of the Condominium Property Act on July 1, 1963, attributed this trend to the escalation of real estate and construction costs.

"Today's young marrieds," said Matthies, "can't afford to buy a home that measures up to their standard of living, nor can they afford to live in a neighborhood of their choice. An alternative is renting an apartment until they can afford it. But because of the sharp increase in the cost of renting and steadily rising cost of living, it's impossible for them to save fast enough for a down payment. Condominium lets them stay, even with inflation because they build equity in property that increases in value."

The firm has opened Green Acres, a matching pair of four-story buildings with 52 units each in Arlington Heights. To date, the first building, which opened in January, has sold 30 per cent of its units.

One-bedroom units are priced from $22,900 and two-bedroom units are from $27,700. Living area ranges from 1010 square feet to 1385 square feet.

The company offers professional interior decorating service, free, to purchasers of Green Acres condominiums. The service, provided by Sellergren Decorators of Park Ridge, includes consultation in furniture, carpeting, draperies, accessories, painting and wallpaper.

The Green Acres model, one of eight plans available, is furnished and decorated by Sellergren. A two-bedroom bath unit with 1350 square feet living area, it includes a 23 foot x 14 foot living room, formal dining room, a 17 foot 4 inch x 12 foot master bedroom with private bath and walk-in closet, and a 13 foot 9 inch x 12 foot 6 inch kitchen.

All units have individually controlled central air conditioning and electric heat, wall-to-wall carpeting, ceramic-tiled baths with built-in vanities, and a carpeted balcony or stone patio entered by way of sliding glass doors from the living room. The fully appliances kitchens include an 18.3 cubic foot refrigerator, range, double corner sinks with disposal, custom wood cabinets and formica top counters.

Two-bedroom units include dishwashers. A private storage area, laundry facilities, insulated windows and screens are provided. Private parking facilities or optional garage with electrically operated doors are available.

To reach Green Acres, take (U.S. 14) to Central Road and turn west to Fernandez and south ½ block to model, open daily 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Carroll Is Promoted

Robert F Carroll

Robert F. Carroll of 1116 Crabtree Lane, Mount Prospect, has been promoted to the newly created position of Chicago operations manager for Fullerton Metals Co., Northbrook, it was announced recently by Gordon C. Anderson, president.

Carroll came to Fullerton in 1966 from Aluminum Distributors, Inc., Forest Park, as marketing manager, aluminum mill products.

In his new assignment, Carroll will oversee all production, administrative and sales activities at Fullerton's corporate headquarters and metals service center. He was promoted "in recognition of his outstanding record of service to the company," said Anderson.

Catering to The Youth on the Go

Craig T. Courtice

Preparing for anticipated changes in consumer buying habits in the Seventies, Montgomery Ward is introducing a magazine-type catalog for the younger generation and for those who think young.

Wards has also opened a boutique-type store in Sandburg Village on Chicago's near northside, featuring clothing accessories and furnishings for young persons. Craig T. Courtice manges the store.

"Wards has decided to make some unprecedented moves," said James Lutz, Wards merchandising executive vice president, "to introduce the younger generation to the advantages of catalog and chain retail merchandising. We are meeting these new customers in their own habitats with fashions and merchandise."

The new all-color 80-page magazine catalog, titled, 'The Unexpected Generation,' is being distributed in the Chicago metropolitan area and on college campuses in the Midwest.

The selection of merchandise for the introductory "magalog" was made after two panels of young people — one at Wards and one from the outside — scanned merchandise in stores, catalogs and magazines and submitted choices to Wards merchandisers.

With emphasis on portability, the "magalog" promotes inflatable furniture, component stereos, table-top television sets, as well as fashions, home furnishings, sporting goods and other items.

According to Robert Daly, Chicago's Metropolitan district manager, "Items ordered at the new store in Sandburg Village before 4 p.m. will be ready for customer pick-up at the store the next afternoon. Store hours will be from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Monday through Saturday, and 12 noon to 5 p.m. on Sundays."

The new store is modern in decor with lighting combined with psychedelic colors and reflecting walls. Merchandise from the "Unexpected Generation" catalog will be sold over the counter. Tickets for Chicago area theatrical and sporting events also will be sold through the store.

Lutz explained that Wards entry into this was generated by demographic reports showing that by 1980 the under 35-year-old head of household will earn 33 per cent of the household income, up from less than 25 per cent in 1967. The household formation rate will be much higher in the Seventies, about 1,500,000 annually between 1975 and 1980, he noted.

He pointed out, too, that the number of families earning $10,000 or more, in 1968 dollars, will rise from 19.1 million in 1970 to 33.9 million in 1980. The $10,000-plus family group will control 80 per cent of the total income in this country, Lutz predicted. This compares with 55 per cent in 1966.

Clotfelter Attends Insurance Seminar

Richard W. Clotfelter, general agent for Mutual Trust Life Insurance Co., recently attended an agency management seminar in the Chicago home office.

The seminar was conducted by John J. Morrissy, educational director, in conjunction with the agency department supervisory staff.

Many of the newest teaching methods were used in exploring and developing the concepts needed to establish and build a Mutual Trust Life Agency. This is part of a continuing process offered to enable Mutual Trust Life general agents to fully provide the best service to their policyowners and agents.

The Clotfelter Agency's offices are located at 1810 E. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

Announcement of the new facility was made by Eugene Mecklenburg, general manager of the Morton Grove branch, and Gilbert Sprott, manufacturing manager. Avon is the world's largest manufacturer and distributor of cosmetics and grooming aids for all the family. Its products are sold only through independent sales representatives in the United States, Canada and 13 other foreign countries. 15

They've Got the Spirit

A contagious "spirit" is coming to Arlington Heights Monday, March 23.

"I've Got the Spirit" is the theme for the annual spring dealer meeting of Union Oil Company of California, with some 800 service station jobbers and dealers from throughout the area participating at the Carousel Restaurant, Arlington Heights.

A live stage revue featuring performers from Broadway plays, full-course dinner, reception and trade show containing displays of the company's all-new product line will be featured.

Claude S. Brinegar, president of the Union 76 division, said, "the main topic will be the new national identification program for company service stations, now flying the Union 76 banner. Previously, stations in the Eastern half of the United States have carried Pure Oil identification.

"In connection with the nationalization of the Union 76 name, we are introducing an all-new line of battery, tire, oil and other accessory products and these will be demonstrated for dealers at the show," Brinegar said.

The company's new marketing and advertising program will also be unveiled.

That program includes many dealer give-aways such as orange styrofoam satellite balls for mounting on car radio antennas and bright day-glow color "I've Got the Spirit" stickers.

Monday's musical comedy stage show in the spirit of a Broadway play has seven performers from Broadway plays and motion pictures.

The touring show was created by Humphrey-Henry and Associates of Chicago and directed by Tony Mockus, who has produced some 45 shows at his Stagelight Theater in Chicago.

Elmer Swanson Jr.

Swanson Assumes Development Post

The Branigar Organization, Inc., a subsidiary of Union Camp Corp., announced the appointment of Elmer Swanson Jr. as vice president and marketing director of the company's land development operations.

This is a newly-created post according to Maynard O. Hestrom, president of Branigar.

Swanson has directed sales operations at Lake Redstone near Reedsburg, Wis., from 1965 through 1968 when the property was sold out. He then took over sales management of Branigar's Apple Canyon Lake, a 2,800-acre private lake development 17 miles east of Galena. Sales of homesites began here in May of 1969 and to date, approximately one-third of the property has been sold.

In his new post, Swanson will direct marketing of Branigar projects now under way or in the planning stage in six states.

A graduate of the University of Wisconsin, Swanson joined the Branigar Organization in 1965.

He and his family live in Glen Ellyn.

Create Trade Barriers

Protectionist trade policies of the Common Market on agricultural products are discussed in the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago's review, Business Conditions.

The Common Market, or EEC, consisting of six European nations began to function in 1958. The EEC has gradually eliminated trade barriers among members, while erecting common barriers against the products of nonmember nations.

The Common Market is the largest export market for U.S. agricultural commodities, although amounts shipped have been declining in recent years. The most important U.S. agricultural exports to the Common Market now are soybeans and corn, mainly from the Midwest.

Many agricultural products imported by the Common Market are subject to "variable levies," taxes that have the effect of raising the prices of imported commodities substantially to meet those within the Common Market itself. Grains, meats, dairy products, and poultry are covered by the variable levies. For one product, poultry, U.S. exports have been effectively excluded by the variable levies, which are the equivalent of heavy tariffs.

Common Market countries spent more than $8 billion on agricultural programs last year, including expenditures for price supports and export subsidies. Higher production stimulated by agricultural programs has produced surpluses of some grains, dairy products, sugar, meat, and poultry. Subsidies are provided to move these supplies into world markets.

Discussions concerning future policies of the EEC are now in progress. Results of these talks may determine whether the United Kingdom and other European nations join the organization. Unless current programs are changed, consumers in the United Kingdom would have to accept substantially higher food prices as a condition of membership.

Strong political forces are striving to maintain high agricultural prices in the Common Market. Plans are being explored to lower agricultural program costs, reduce surpluses, and expand production of certain products. Little hope exists, however, that the Common Market will soon relax its protectionist policies.

Home Buying Rush Is Starting Now

When is the best time to buy or sell a house?

If you want the greatest selection of homes, and the greatest competition from other home-seekers, start looking in March and plan to make a purchase in May.

If you want to do your shopping more leisurely, but probably have less of a selection, begin looking in October and make a purchase in December.

The same advice applies if you're planning to put your home up for sale. You'll find the greatest number of people looking between March and May and the least number of shoppers between October and December.

These are the conclusions of a 19-year market study of Baird & Warner, Inc., 27 offices in the city and surrounding suburbs.

"Our figures show that twice as many home sales contracts are signed in May as in December — 10.87 per cent against 5.62 per cent," reported John L. Hall, senior vice president and general sales manager.

"Since it takes 30 to 60 days to shop for a home, find one, and make the purchase, this means the greatest number of home-seekers start looking in May and least number begin shopping in October," he added.

August is not far behind May as the month of the most home closings, which means the June-August period is a good one for shoppers and sellers alike.

"These figures corroborate what we've always known; namely, that people try to time home purchases and sales to the late spring and summer months, when there's less disruption to children in school," Hall said. "Most corporate transfers are geared to this timing, too."

He pointed out, however, that buyers should not hold off putting their home on the market in any of the so-called "slack periods."

The buyer who looks during a relatively uncrowded period, and the seller who puts his home on the market during such a month, have two important advantages according to Hall: time and more personalized attention.

"It's obvious that more time is available to work with buyers and sellers at certain times of the year than at others. Also, there may be less demand for mortgage money during this period, and consequently mortgages may be easier to obtain," said Hall.

Marge Yeats Reaches $2 Million Goal

Marge Yeats, sales representative for Robert L. Nelson, Realtors, Palatine office, has reached the $2 million real estate sales goal for the second consecutive year.

It is the first time that a real estate sales person has achieved the $2 million sales figure in the history of Northwest Suburban Real Estate.

In 1969, Marge sold a total of $2,198,600 as compared to her $2,406,190 sales volume in 1968.

MEDICAL AND OFFICES suites will be housed in this $750,000 building now under construction at 2600 E. Higgins Road, Elk Grove Village, sponsored by O'Hare Center, Inc. The three-story structure offers 91-car parking. Designed by architects Pyskacek and Rosenwinkel of Chicago, the building is scheduled for completion next fall. Contractor is Frederick Quinn Construction Co. of Des Plaines.

Financed By Dovenmuehle

Dovenmuehle, Inc. has arranged for a mortgage loan in the amount of $750,000 to finance an office building under construction at 2600 East Higgins Road in Elk Grove Village.

Luke Thornton, vice president of Chicago's largest mortgage banking firm, said the term of the mortgage is for 25 years.

Sponsored by O'Hare Center, Inc., c/o Professional Management Associates, Inc. in Oak Brook, the three-story structure will house medical and office suites. The first floor has been leased to the O'Hare Industrial Clinic for medical office purposes. The project will offer 91-car parking and 40,000 square feet of paved parking.

The building, designed by architects Pyskacek and Rosenwinkel of Chicago, is scheduled for completion in the fall of this year. The contractor is the Frederick Quinn Construction Co. of Des Plaines.

Leasing of the $1,000,000 project is being handled by Judelson Malkin & Co.

O'Keefe Elected

The board of directors of General Finance Corp., Evanston, has elected Thomas J. O'Keefe, Jr. of 644 S. Chestnut, Arlington Heights, executive vice president.

O'Keefe was born in Chicago and is a graduate of St. Mary's College, Winona, Minn., and the law school of De Paul University, Chicago.

He joined General Finance Corporation as an attorney in 1948, became assistant general counsel in 1956, and vice president and general counsel in 1964. Last year he was elected senior vice president.

His professional affiliations include membership in the Chicago Bar Association, the American Bar Association, and the Governing Committee of the Law Forum of the National Consumer Finance Association. He is also chairman of the legal advisory committee of the American Industrial Bankers Association.

Builder Recruits Land Specialist

Kenneth R. Berliant

Kenneth R. Berliant has been appointed to the newly created position of director of research and information services for Miller Builders, Inc., it was announced by Albert J. Miller, president of the diversified building firm.

"In the development of both residential and commercial properties," said Miller, "We find an increased need for internal economic feasibility and market studies, and the establishment of an improved computer-based management information system. Berliant's background as senior vice president of the institute of urban life makes him an ideal choice for this position."

Berliant holds a master's degree in sociology from the University of Chicago He is a member of the national honorary sociological fraternity, Alpha Kappa Delta and of Lambda Alpha, the international land economics fraternity. Berliant is a full member of the American Institute of Planners.

He has served as a member of the board of directors for both the Illinois Chapter and the Metropolitan Chicago Section of the American Institute of Planners. He is a lecturer in Loyola University's graduate urban studies program, and is a member of the American Association of University Professors.

Mrs. Jungkans Named Executive Secretary

Mrs. Marge Jungkans of LaGrange, secretary to Western Electric's Central Region general manager William Opdyke at Rolling Meadows, was named executive secretary to vice president, Armin Fick, whose offices are located at 20 N. Wacker Drive, Chicago.

Fick's area of responsibility includes directing the manufacture of all Bell System switching equipment in Western Electric plants located at Columbus, Ohio, Oklahoma City, Okla., Omaha, Nebr., Mesquite, Texas, Montgomery-Aurora, and Hawthorne (Cicero) Works.

Mrs. Jungkans' husband, Ray, is a scheduling analyst in the service branch at Rolling Meadows.

She joined the company as a shop clerk at the Hawthorne Works and worked as a typist and stenographer before her promotion to secretarial work. Except for five years spent in the company's public relations department, her duties were mainly centered in the manufacturing division.

She has been an executive secretary (assistant administrative officer level and above) for the past seven years.

Tourville Retires; With Bell 47 Years

Walter Tourville

Walter Tourville, 220 Pleasant Drive, Elk Grove Village, retired recently from Illinois Bell Telephone Co. after 47 years of service.

Tourville joined the company in 1906 as an installer. He later held positions as a repairman, installation foreman and training instructor. Prior to his retirement he was a repair foreman in the Irving district on Chicago's northwest side.

During retirement, Tourville plans to pursue his hobbies of golf and photography, and travel around the United States with his wife, Marie.

THREE FOUNTAINS IN PLUM GROVE.

Zoomed from Zero Within a Decade

Thousands of Centex-built homes have been sold ready buyers since the first models opened in 1957 and the population of the community zoomed from zero to over 20,000 residents within a decade, stated Robert C. Winkle, Centex Corp., sales director for Elk Grove Village.

"We are pleased to announce that, bowing to persistent public demand, we are opening up a new section of 117 homes," said Winkle. "Our six new models, soon open to the public, embody the finest efatures of our previous homes, plus other details."

Three ranches, a four-bedroom trilevel; a four-bedroom, two-story; and a five-bedroom, two-story models, are now rising. The exteriors represent both contemporary architecture and the influence of traditional French and Spanish styles.

The interiors offer more flexibility and value than before, according to Winkle. They feature three to five bedrooms, two to three full baths, family-size kitchens with Tappan gas or electric double ovens, ranges, party-sized living-dining rooms with formal dining areas of separate dining rooms, master bedroom suites with dressing rooms, closets, additional bedrooms, and finished family rooms with a fireplace. All models include a two-car garage. The large sites are complete with underrgound utilities.

The new addition is between Devon and Higgins roads, on the west side of Rte. 53.

"Smart families should inspect our artist's renderings, floorplans, select their home and choice site at our preferential, pre-opening prices today, for summer or later occupancy. Today, we offer them in the $31,000 to $42,000 price range with excellent financing available. Higher prices can definitely be expected," said Winkle.

The sales office is in a townhouse model at the present time, on Arlington Heights road, south of Higgins road. It is open every day from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Brokers Name Chairman

John L. Markay

John L. Markay, of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors has been appointed local chairman of the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers, Realtor Philip C. Smaby, Minneapolis, 1970 president, announced recently.

Markay assumed his post during the midwinter meetings in Houston, Tex. of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, with which NIREB is affiliated.

In making the appointment, Smaby said activities of committee members are essential to the growth and development of real estate brokerage since most of the continuing work of the institute is carried out through its committees.

NIREB was founded in 1923 with the aim of educating brokers on the intricacies of the swiftly-changing real estate market.

Through its publications, courses, seminars, and conferences, the institute has helped Realtors and their associates enhance their skills and methods.

The institute's commercial and investment division and its residential division provide specialized educational programs geared to the needs of members involved in those particular fields.

Smaby succeeds Realtor Owen Hall, Birmingham, Mich., and was installed along with vice-presidents and governors of the institute during the Houston meetings.

DESIGNED FOR all-age entertaining, this family room at Berkley Square in Arlington Heights, by 3-H Building Corp., is decorated in hot pink, avocado, gold and turquoise. Easy care is emphasized with a vinyl floor, table and upholstery surfaces that rub clean with a damp cloth.

Berkley Square is located at Arlington Heights and Rand Roads. Homes range from $35,490 to $41,990.

Family Room Rates First

Large family rooms have top priority with today's young homeowners, according to 3-H Building Corp.

When it comes to entertaining, a family room with a lot of space takes precedence over the living room. These families desire space for a number of different recreational activities appealing to the needs of teenagers, as well as their parents, the firm noted.

A recent study by 3H Building Corporation of their Berkley Square development in Arlington Heights shows that the Sherwood model with four bedrooms and large family room is the best seller. Sherwood homeowners are, for the most part, in their thirties, earning an average of $14,000-$15,000 and prefer entertaining often, 3-H stated.

Vivid color, good-looking functional modern furniture and imaginative accessories make the Berkley Square model family room an entertaining center for everyone in the family.

The model features hot pink, avocado, gold and turquoise plaid wallcovering that sets the color palette for the rest of the room. The avocado rug is on a neutral, easy-care vinyl floor. All table and upholstery surfaces wipe clean with a damp cloth for easy maintenance.

Reddick Joins Sales Elite At His Company

LeRoy W. Reddick

LeRoy W. Reddick, Elk Grove Village, has earned membership in the President's Club of All American Life & Casualty Co. The announcement was made by E. E. Ballard, president, at the Company's Home Office in Chicago.

To earn membership in this honor club, the representative must meet stringent qualifications and produce a specified volume of sales for a one year period. Only 79 of the more than 1,500 men who represent the insurance company throughout the country qualified for the President's Club.

Reddick received an award plaque at the March Regional Meeting.

Miss Miner Promoted

Lynda M. Miner

A Wheeling resident, Miss Lynda M. Miner, has been promoted by Illinois Bell Telephone Company to operating practices assistant in the general traffic supervisor's division.

A graduate of Wheeling High School, Miss Miner joined the company as an operator in Arlington Heights in 1965. She has also worked as a clerk and supervisor.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Miner of 746 S. Merle, and is a member of St. Joseph the Worker Catholic Church.

Suburbs Showing Business Growth

Statistics released today by W. T. O'Connell, district manager of the Chicago office of Dun & Bradstreet, reflect the activity of the business population in suburban Cook County during the past year.

Figures obtained from a physical count of the Dun & Bradstreet Reference Book for January 1970 totaled 18,309 manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers in this area, as compared with 17,358 in January, 1969.

The Dun & Bradstreet Reference Book lists all manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers who seek or grant commercial credit. It does not include some of the service and professional businesses such as beauty and barber shops, security dealers and real estate brokers.

O'Connell added that during the past year 5,492 changes were made in the Dun & Bradstreet Reference Book listings of suburban Cook County businesses, including names added, names deleted, and changes in the ratings of continuing businesses.

Using Dun & Bradstreet Reference Book listings as a guide, comparison of January, 1970 listings and those of a year ago can be made, including some of the larger area communities: Des Plaines — 1,021 in 1970 and 874 in 1969; Arlington Heights — 1,014 and 847; Park Ridge — 386 and 354; Palatine — 376 and 325; and Mount Prospect — 344 and 318.

Founded in 1841 in New York City, the Dun & Bradstreet organization now includes nearly 250 offices in the United States and Canada. The company was originally established to collect and report data on merchants on the Western Frontier in order to promote trade, and has been gathering financial and credit data on firms of all types ever since.

Dun & Bradstreet, through its national network of offices, writes annually to all businesses in each of the 50 states listed in the Reference Book (8,577 pates in 4 volumes) to request their financial statements. This year, these requests are being sent to approximately 3 million businesses.

Each Reference Book listing, which includes the rating, is a condensed summary of the information contained in the Dun & Bradstreet business information report. The report includes the following; a history of the business, (who owns it, who runs it, and how long it has been operating); a description of what the business does and how it does it; a financial section which usually includes the latest financial statement; and a record of how the business pays its bills.

TWO-STORY ENTRY and foyer of Three Fountains apartment in Rolling Meadows is shown above. Designer Don Scholz stresses the visual impact of an apartment building. Here, paneled wood doors, topped by baroque pediments, are set in a frame of mullioned glass panes.

Entryway Has Visual Impact

Families looking for apartments in suburban areas have a strong preference for elegant exteriors, according to Don Scholz, designer of Carriage Way apartments in the Hinsdale-Burr Ridge area and Three Fountains apartments in Rolling Meadows.

"Ideally, the visual impact of an apartment building should be as impressive as that of a luxury home," Scholz said.

The designer stresses the importance of entryways. At Carriage Way and Three Fountains, entrances are two stories high. Paneled wood doors, topped by baroque pediments, are set in a frame of mullioned glass panes that reveal foyers.

Inside, curved staircases with wrought white gold balustrades, formal paneled wainscotes, panels of authentic colonial wallpapers, and ornate period chandeliers contribute to the look of luxury. Thick wall-to-wall carpeting on the floors and stairs add a note of color and provide sound control.

The entryways are the focal point of classic period-style architecture. Lawns, curving driveways, and fountains contribute to the appearance.

Three Fountains is located at the junction of the new North-South Route 53 freeway and the Northwest Tollway.

Holbrook Appointed Manager Of Training

Eldon G. Holbrook, 710 Crestwood Drive, Arlington Heights, has been appointed manager of training in the American Oil Co. marketing department.

He joined the company in 1956 as a salesman in Salt Lake City, progressed through positions of increasing responsibility at Boise, Denver, Casper, and again Salt Lake City, and became assistant manager of training in marketing staff services department at the Chicago general office in 1968.

Holbrook was graduated from University of Utah, and was in the Air Force three years.

Taxes Hike Your Bell Phone Bill

Illinois Bell Telephone will spend $461 million — or more than one million dollars per day — during 1970 to construct and expand its service and facilities, according to the company's 1969 annual report.

Company President Charles L. Brown characterized 1969 as a year of "vigorous growth and wide-ranging accomplishment" marred by persistent cost inflation. The company added 269,000 telephones in 1969, and has seen the number it serves jump by almost 2 million during the past 10 years — "more growth than Illinois Bell in its first 64 years of business, through World War II," the report says.

"In 1969 we handled some 6.4 billion telephone conversations — a jump of 385 million over 1968 and 60 per cent higher than the rate of a decade ago," it said. Long distance calls rose 12 per cent during the year and have increased 75 per cent in five years.

"The year's accelerated growth in telephones and calling volume, coupled with catch-up expansion projects we had left from 1968, boosted our 1969 construction program to a record $337 million," according to the report.

"We now think that, in this era of rising costs, we will have to invest $2 billion during the next five years to meet demand, extend and improve our service," stated the report.

As its volume of business grew, the company's revenue also rose, President Brown said in his message to the shareowners. "But this revenue growth was badly out-spaced by soaring costs of operation — accelerated by the quickening of inflation," he noted. "The company's revenue rose 9.6 per cent to $948.2 million while operating costs rose even faster, soaring 15.2 per cent to $552 million.

"Operating taxes rose 2.5 per cent to $243,579,000. Another $81,300,000 in excise taxes, was collected from customers for the federal government. Together, these taxes represented 32 per cent of the customer's average telephone bill in 1969," the report said.

As reported earlier (1-22-70), Illinois Bell's net income was $125,087,000, down $3,796,000 from that of 1968. Earnings per share was also down, to $2.32 on both average and year-end shares — compared with results in 1968 of $2.49 on average shares and $2.39 on year-end shares.

In December, Illinois Bell petitioned the Illinois Commerce Commission for its first general rate increase in nearly 17 years.

During 1969, Illinois Bell personnel participated in activities of the communities it serves. They sponsored a new television series to help the Chicago area Spanish speaking community and developed a speech therapy program for the use of elementary school teachers.

KUNKEL

IRISH EYES SMILING?
They must have seen this home. The fantastically "nice" family room with wet bar and bar furniture (including color TV and refrigerator) is just one of the outstanding features of this seven room, three bedroom home. There is a full basement. There are two baths, carpeting and garage. The fenced-in rear yard has a beautiful patio. This home is absolutely spotless, and a real joy to own. Hurry, before its too late.
Arlington Heights $33,900

WATCH SPRING BLOSSOM
From this five room Brick home. There is a full basement, patio and enclosed porch. There is even a beautiful fireplace with panelling. This home offers carpeting and ceramic tiled kitchen and bath. There is a beautiful yard. Located in a very fine area within walking distance to train and shopping, and is in excellent condition.
Mt. Prospect $34,500

Ordinance 70 - 16

AN ORDINANCE PROVIDING FOR THE PURCHASE OF A FIRE STATION TO BE LOCATED AT 3030 NORTH ARLINGTON HEIGHTS ROAD IN THE VILLAGE OF ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, BY INSTALLMENT CONTRACT

WHEREAS, the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Arlington Heights, after due consideration, have determined that the purchase of a certain fire station to be located at 3030 North Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights, Illinois, and to be known as Fire Station Number Four, is essential, desirable and in the interest of public safety and

WHEREAS, the Village has negotiated for the purchase of such a municipal facility from The Bank & Trust Company of Arlington Heights by contract calling for the payment of the purchase price by installments, and

WHEREAS, pursuant to the provisions of Division 74.1 of Article 11 of the Illinois Municipal Code, it is necessary that the President and Board of Trustees of this Village adopt an ordinance providing for the purchase of said fire station, authorization for the execution of an agreement for that purpose and to provide for the levy and collection of a direct annual tax sufficient to pay the annual installments provided for by such an agreement as and when such installments become due and payable;

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF ARLINGTON HEIGHTS:

SECTION ONE: That it is hereby determined that it is essential and in the public interest and necessary for public purposes that the Village of Arlington Heights purchase a structure to be used as a fire station and to be known as Fire Station Number Four and to be located at 3030 North Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights Illinois, and for the purpose of paying the purchase price thereof the Village shall enter into an agreement for purchasing said municipal facility at a cost of Four Hundred Sixty-Four Thousand Five Hundred Fifty Dollars ($464 550)

SECTION TWO: that said agreement shall be in substantially the following form

ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT FOR THE PURCHASE OF A FIRE STATION BY THE VILLAGE OF ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, ILLINOIS

This agreement, made this day of , 1970 between THE BANK & TRUST COMPANY OF ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, a national banking institution (hereinafter called "Seller") and the VILLAGE OF ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, a municipal corporation (hereinafter called "Buyer" or "Village") WITNESSETH

WHEREAS the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Arlington Heights, Illinois, have determined that it is essential and in the public interest to construct a certain fire station to be known as Fire Station Number Four at 3030 North Arlington Heights Road, in the Village of Arlington Heights and

WHEREAS, the Village has heretofore acquired unencumbered title in fee simple to the following described real estate:

The south 160 feet of Lot 9 in the Resubdivision of part of Lot 1 and all of Lots 2 through 5, both inclusive, in Arlington Industrial and Research Center Unit 1, being a subdivision in the Northwest ¼ of the Southwest ¼ and the Southwest ¼ of the Northwest ¼ of Section 8, Township 42 North Range 11 East of the Third Principal Meridian, Cook County, Illinois.

upon which property the said fire station is to be located; and

WHEREAS, Division 76.1 of Article 11 of the Illinois Municipal Code (Chapter 24) authorizes the Village to acquire property, both real and personal, for public purposes pursuant to contracts which provide for the consideration for such purchases and acquisitions to be paid in annual installments during a period not exceeding twenty (20) years, and to provide for the levy and collection of a direct annual tax sufficient to pay the annual installments when same become due and payable; and

WHEREAS, the Seller has agreed to construct the said fire station for the Village in consideration for the payment of annual installments as hereinafter provided

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants and agreements hereinafter contained, and other valuable considerations, it is mutually agreed between the Seller and the Buyer as follows:

ONE: The Seller agrees to construct for the Buyer and the Buyer agrees to purchase from the Seller the said fire station for the sum of Four Hundred Sixty-Four Thousand Five Hundred Fifty Dollars ($464,550), which price includes interest at the rate of six per cent (6%) per annum on a principal amount of Two Hundred Eighty-Five Thousand Dollars ($285,000) remaining unpaid from time to time. Buyer will not have the privilege of prepayment in whole or in part of any of the unpaid principal indebtedness.

TWO. The Buyer will serve as the agent for the Seller for the construction of the said municipal facility and will have full authority to select and prescribe all of the plans and specifications for the construction of the building, shall determine the location thereof, shall select, approve and contract for any and all labor materials, architectural, engineering legal, consultative and other supplies and services in its own name without prior or any authority from the Seller; and the Seller does hereby approve of any and all such selections and contracts by Buyer heretofore entered into or which Buyer may hereafter execute relating to the construction, equipping and landscaping of the said Fire Station Number Four. All such surveys, plans, specifications, contracts, authorizations for changes and all related documents will remain on file with the Village Clerk or such other public officials as the Village Manager may hereafter designate and the same are hereby ratified and made a part of this agreement. Those documents as may hereafter be created or executed which relate to the construction of the said fire station will, upon their creation or execution, become a part of this agreement but in no event will the Seller become liable for the payment of any sum greater than that designated herein

THREE. The Buyer agrees to indemnify and hold harmless the Seller from any and all claims arising out of the construction of the building and the furnishing or finishing thereof, including, but not limited to, claims for bodily injury, property damage, claims arising out of any provision of the Illinois Workmen's Compensation Act or any and all other statutory regulatory, or common law rights and entitlements, together with those reasonable costs and attorneys fees which may be incurred in connection therewith.

FOUR. Title in and to all improvements, whether or not completed, during all stages of construction shall and do vest immediately in the Buyer, subject only to statutory rights or interests created in favor of contractors, subcontractors and suppliers by reason of any improper failure to provide payment for services and materials, FIVE: Upon receipt by Seller of an unqualified letter of opinion signed by the Village Attorney for the Village of Arlington Heights, reciting full compliance with all applicable statutory requirements, that the obligation of the Village is legal and binding in all respects, and that the interest payable on the within obligation is not subject to taxation under any current federal or state codes, statutes, rules or regulations, the principal sum of Two Hundred Eighty-Five Thousand Dollars ($285,000) shall be deposited by the Seller in a commercial account at The Bank & Trust Company of Arlington Heights, Arlington Heights, Illinois, in the name of the Buyer, from which account the Buyer may draw from time to time for the payment of any expense properly incurred in connection with the construction of the fire station or for the reimbursement to the Buyer for such funds as it may have advanced in connection therewith. The Buyer may, from time to time, invest a part or all of the funds in the account in accepted and proper securities.

SIX It is understood and agreed by and between the parties hereto that the payments required under the terms of this agreement shall be a general obligation of Buyer and the total amount due Seller, together with all other general obligations of Buyer, are within the statutory and constitutional debt limit requirements

SEVEN: The Seller agrees to execute any documents which may at any time hereafter become necessary to complete the construction of the fire station and to achieve the purposes of this agreement, including but not limited to waivers of lien, except upon good cause shown.

EIGHT: All of the foregoing have been obtained or will be obtained, purchased, erected and constructed pursuant to the demands, supervision, specifications, interests and needs of the Village. No warranty or guarantee of any kind on the part of the Seller as to the condition, maintenance, construction, erection or engineering thereof is relied upon by the Village nor has any representation of warranty or guarantee either expressed or implied been made by the Seller.

NINE: The Buyer shall provide for the levy and collection of a direct annual tax in each year while any amount remains unpaid on the indebtedness, in amounts sufficient to meet its annual obligations for the payments hereinabove provided both as to principal and interest, together with such additional amounts as may be necessary to cover losses and the costs and expenses of the collection of the same. Such taxes in any year may be abated in whole or in part where funds from any other proper source are available with which to meet the said obligations.

TEN: Any portion of this agreement found to be invalid will not affect the validity of the remainder of the said agreement.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the Buyer, in pursuance of the express authorization of its President and Board of Trustees passed at a regular meeting of said President and Board of Trustees held on the 16th day of March, 1970, has caused these presents to be signed by its Village President, attested by its Village Clerk, and its corporate seal to be affixed, and the Seller has caused these presents to be signed by its President and attested by its Secretary, and its corporate seal to be affixed the day and year first above written

Schmidt: He's Been Around

You can see him every afternoon making his legendary walk through town. A stop by the village hall, a trip to the bank, a short talk with Elmer Mensching and a daily visit to Ben's Tavern. That's how it has been for Walter Schmidt for most of his life and hopefully, it will never change.

Schmidt keeps a sharp but aged-eye on Itasca doings. He is proud of the fact that he helped to make many of the town's changes and won't mind too much telling anyone who asks.

The elder citizens blends his colorful life around Itasca and its people. He makes a habit out of visiting village businesses and particularly Ben's Tavern where he wets his lips with friendly conversation and beer.

"They won't serve me more than two beers," jokes the famed conversationalist.

WALTER SCHMIDT is Itasca's mobile library on ancient legs. The honorary Kentucky Colonel knows more about Itasca than most people know about their own families.

A human history book on the town's growth since 1944 when he served on the World War II rationing board, Schmidt is often called upon by village officials for background information on how, why and when Itasca did something. His answers befit his colorful character because they are usually loquacious and filled with insight and information.

What Walter Schmidt learned about the town he loves, he learned through civic participation. He has given Itasca more than 26 of his 80 years and offered them unselfishly to such organizations as the Itasca Lions and Itasca Community Association. He was past president of both.

THE WRINKLES OF wisdom that line Schmidt's face come honestly. The senior citizen has served nine years on the village board and is presently in his seventh year as a member of the village planning commission.

Active in civic affairs for 41 years, there was little surprise when the people, who he served so well, recommended him for a spot in the Senior Citizen Hall of Fame in 1963. Needless to say, it was the easiest election in Schmidt's political life.

The dean emeritus of Itasca civic affairs has no rival when it comes to resident appreciation. And it is no wonder. The town buff attends village board, park board, and planning commission meetings faithfully. He is solely motivated by concern on what is best for the village and its people.

"I have always been active in the village and always will be," asserts Schmidt.

WHAT SCHMIDT does in his spare time most people should do with their lives. He willingly and enthusiastically participates, despite his age, in all community affairs and takes from 10 to 12 fishing trips a year with long-time friend Fred Steging, former mayor of Bensenville. He journeys to Canada about three times a year but also does some fishing in Arkansas and Wisconsin.

The fish enthusiast will talk to anyone anywhere anytime about Itasca and its residents. But the town doesn't receive all his attention. There are television mysteries, newspapers, Sherlock Holmes and of course, his grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

His daughter, Harriet, whom Schmidt lives with, admits that "grandpa" spoils the kids affectionately with sweet treats. But you won't hear the youngsters objecting or the parents scolding him for contributing to the delinquency of minors.

CHEWING OVER the town's problems like the self-inscribed stationary cigar that dangles from his ruddy cheeks, Schmidt is never at a loss for comment on Itasca's politics. And what he doesn't say with words his cigar does with rising degrees of smoke.

The cigar is a thermometer to the former trustee's popularity among the townfolk. Often-lit but little smoked, Schmidt never really gets a chance to puff because he is in a constant frenzy of greeting and conversing with people.

Walter Schmidt is as old as the village. While both celebrated 80-year-old birthdays amidst the clamor of St. Patrick's Day and county elections this past Tuesday, Schmidt's attachment to the town goes beyond candles and birthday cake.

Itasca as it looks today is a portrait of people like Walter Schmidt who made it that way. Any town is an extension of its residents and Schmidt's altruistic years in civic affairs is a clear measure of the man's worth to the community.

TUESDAY NIGHT Itasca's Village Board officially honored Schmidt's civic contributions to the community by presenting him with an official commendation of merit.

A moist-eyed Schmidt accepted the award gratefully with a short speech.

"To me Itasca is it . . . I love it," said the flustered recipient.

Wilbert Nottke, Itasca Village Pres. summed up the general feeling best.

"I too feel Itasca is a nice community and it is people like Walter who make it that way," Nottke said.

Fiery Debate on Burning

Itasca Village Pres. Wilbert Nottke turned a request by the Itasca Human Relations Council for an open burning ordinance into a fiery debate Tuesday night.

Nottke verbally assaulted representative James Enyart after the spokesman suggested the village board should investigate an open burning oridnance proposed by his organization.

While Enyart requested the ordinance be read, Nottke refused because of an apparent lack of time. The village president suggested that six additional copies be distributed among the trustees before the board would take action.

"I feel the village attorney should draw up our ordinances and no one else," said Nottke.

"I'm dead against what the president said," rebutted Trustee Roy Petherbridge in obvious anger.

Petherbridge indicated that Nottke was particularly opposed to the Itasca Human Relations Council and he wanted the same treatment for this organization as the women's clubs.

"IT IS A POLICY of this board not to discuss anything without digesting it," Nottke said. "We will use this ordinance as a guide."

The council apparently was motiviated to draw up an open burning ordinance from the burning of the old St. Luke school earlier this month. Some relations officials apparently thought the burning was unnecessary pollution and was in violation of county and state statutes.

While the proposed open burning ordinance ignited a hot argument, Nottke added to the war of words against the liberally-oriented organization by charging he relations council was in error about a qualified village juvenile officer.

In a circulated newsletter, relations officials indicated that they sought a qualified juvenile officer for the village.

Stanley Rossol, Itasca police chief has already stated Itasca has five qualified juvenile officers headed up by Sgt. Pete Andersen.

"This particular organization is getting involved in things they shouldn't get involved in," charged Nottke.

Youth Struck By Car; Breaks Leg

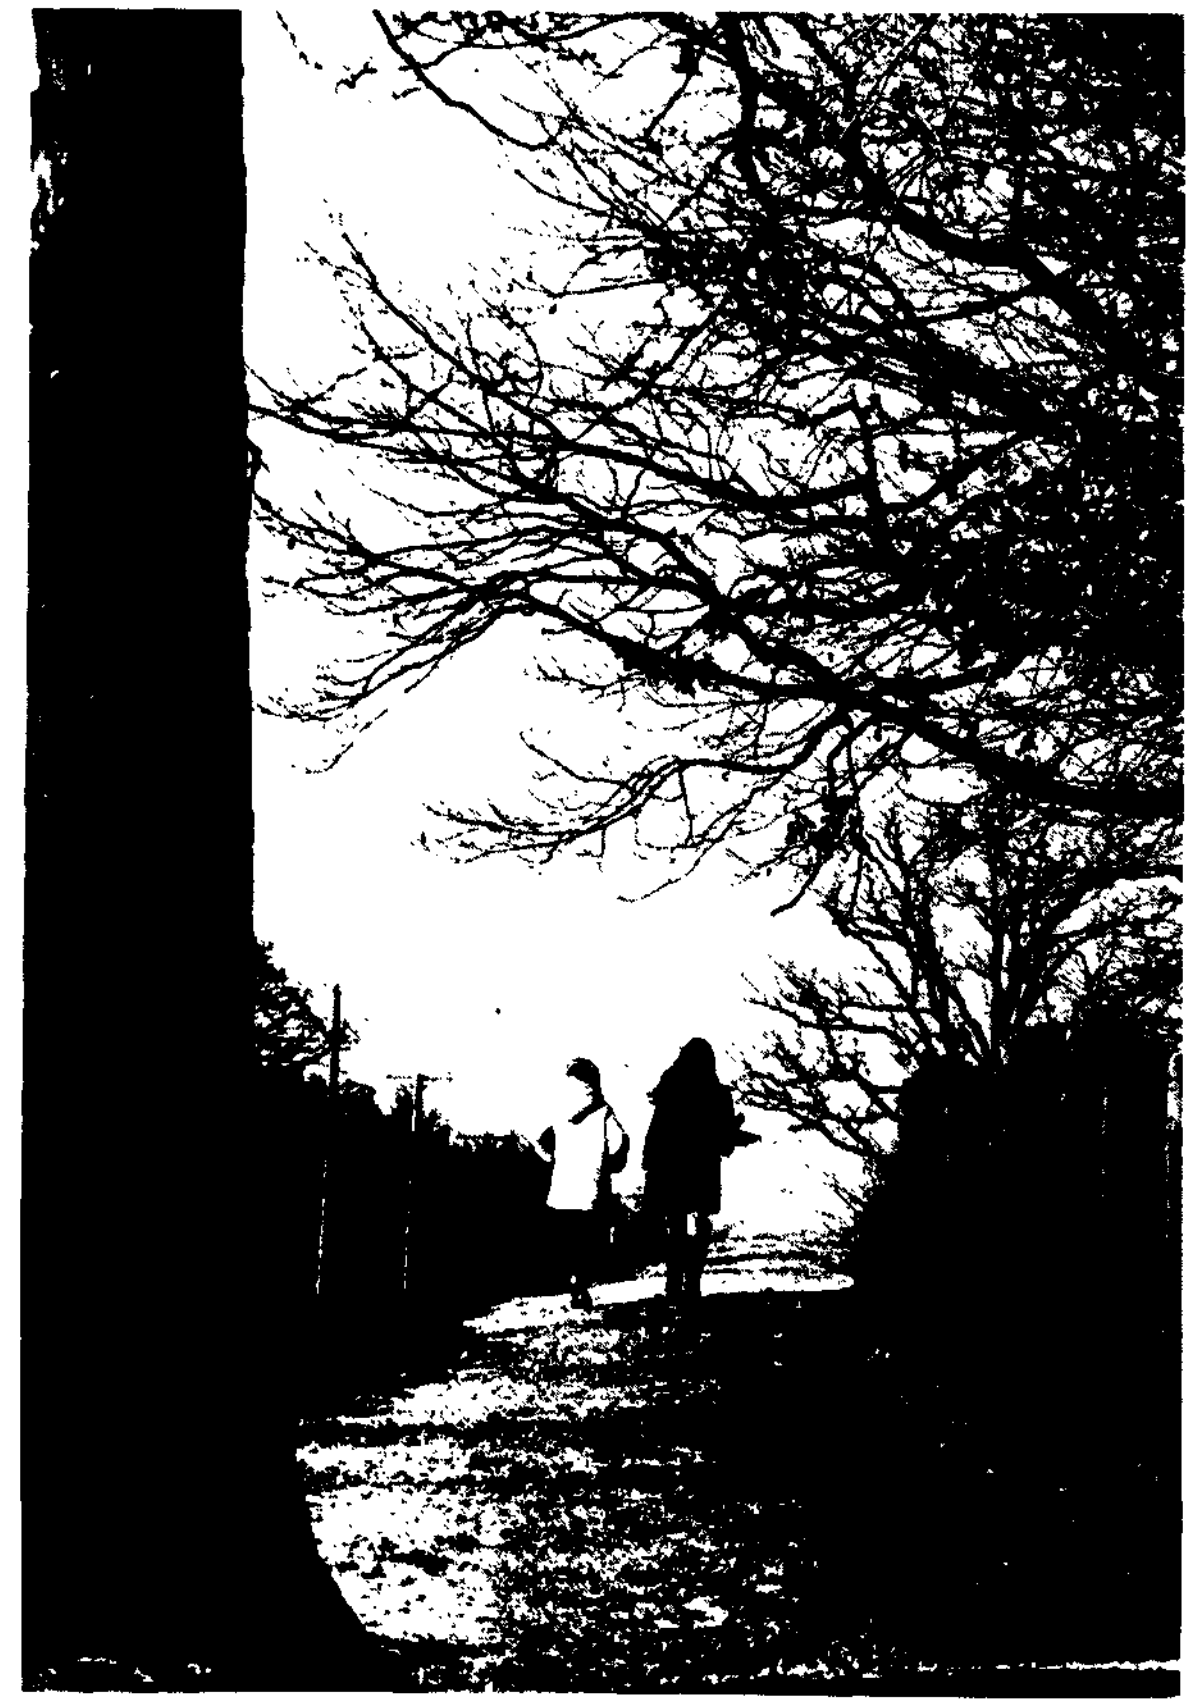
A 9-year-old Itasca boy suffered a broken leg after being struck by a car Saturday afternoon on North Street.

The youth, Gregory Tomberg of 323 W. North Street in Itasca, apparently darted in front of a car driven by Frederick Ringley. Ringley told police that he slowed down to greet the driver of another vehicle which was traveling east on North Street. He saw the top of a child's head as he ran into the street in front of him. The driver said he applied the brakes but the child hit the car.

Tomberg told police there were no cars in sight after he got out of the bus and he began crossing the street.

Following the accident, Ringley drove the injured child to St. Alexius Hospital where he was treated for a broken right leg.

Itasca police issued no driving citations for the accident.



TOMORROW IS THE first day of Spring, but most people feel it is about two months late. Blossoms are shivering on their branches waiting for warm weather and golden sunlight to ring them into the season. Weary from a cold, damp winter people are beginning to think about such trifles as picnics, boat rides, walks, backyard barbecues and lemonade.

Two Works Officials Quit

John G. Morris, DuPage County superintendent of public works has resigned.

Morris' resignation submitted March 7 to Paul Ronske, chairman of the DuPage County Board of Supervisors, was made public Wednesday along with the resignation of Edgar Preissner, assistant superintendent of public works.

Speaking of both his and Preissner's resignationin relation to the defeated $105 million bond referendum and the recent shake-up on the county board's public works committee Morris said, "They were just a series of unrelated events and had nothing to do with either resignation."

Morris said the resignations were withheld until after the referendum so as "not to confuse the election with other issues."

He said se felt he had done "about all he could to initiate change in the county's program," and was going on to another government job where he knew he would be able to do more in the area of environment control.

Morris, whose resignation is effective Monday March 23, will announce what his exact plans are today but he did say he would still be in Illinois and it would be "a significant professional change." He added he would be concerned with environment on all levels, water, air and noise.

Many believe Morris may be taking over as the new Coordinator of Environmental Quality or Director of State Department of Conservation.

Morris said he had begun contemplating the change since February.

He had been with DuPage County for four years. Before that Morris was Superintendent of Public Works for Lake County.

He received his bachelors degree in civil engineering at the University of Minnesota where he graduated with honors.

Morris received a masters degree in sanitary engineering from the University of Wisconsin. He has done graduate studies in public administration in Northern Illinois University.

He has served as the Assistant Superintendent of Environmental Sanitation for Milwaukee, and was the Director of Environmental Health.

Preissner submitted his resignation March 17 and it will be effective April 17.

He will take a position as project manager with a Division of the Universal Oil Products Co.

Wood Dale CD Course To Start March 31

The Wood Dale Civil Defense will sponsor a radiological-monitoring course starting March 31 from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Wood Dale Fire Station.

The course will run five weeks with classes being held every Tuesday night under the supervision of instructor E. Nelson Bowser.

Civil Defense, police and fire officials may attend but the course is also open to any interested citizen.

Board Cancels Meet

Monday's regular meeting of the Wood Dale Library Board has been canceled.

A special meeting held this week took the place of the regular meeting, according to a library spokesman, because one of the board members will be out of town next Wednesday.

Anyone wishing to bring business before the library board may do so at next month's meeting.

A Wiggly Promotion?

by KEN HARDWICKE

The situation is getting pretty hairy at the Itasca State Bank these days. As a matter of fact, a couple of bank employes have been observed flipping their wigs during business hours.

But savers shouldn't get alarmed because they are the primary reason the bank has become hair-tight this past month.

The instigator of all these hair-raising shenanigans taking place outside teller windows is a suave gentleman known professionally as "Mr. Roberto."

Mr.Roberto, minus the limelight, is Bob Green, who has made a pleasurable career out of running his fingers through women's hair. As a matter of fact, Roberto is so good that his company, Chicago Hair Goods, has sold wigs and hairpieces to such noted male baldies as Jimmy Durante and Sid Caesar.

BANK EMPLOYES were the first ones to get their hair dressed and displayed. While pretty bank secretaries were busy showing off their new wigs, curious savers were diligently trying to deposit enough coin for a hair piece of their own.

"We specialize in problem hair such as baldness," said Roberto.

And while a lot of the bank patrons have more money in their account than hair on their heads, the promotion figured to improve savings along with appearance.

The belated debut of "Hair" among bank customers has become highly profitable to both bank and baldy. Bank officials are hoping to keep the promotion gimmick going until May 10 — Mother's Day.

A financially-wrought husband feels more secure knowing that a deposit in the bank can result in a gift for his wife and the price of permanents to come.

ALL HAIRLESS savers and nonsavers have to do for that "hairy" look is open a new checking account for $100 or more; open a new savings account for $200 or more and add $200 to present savings account. A deposit of $5,000 in a new or old savings account or certificate of deposit entitles customers to a new wig.

The wigs are imported human and synthetic hair which sells for $24.95. With any of the above bank deposits, customers may purchase the wigs at a reduced price of $8.75.

So if money problems have been causing your hair to fall out or turn gray Itasca State Bank has a promotion plan that will build up both kinds of interest.

It may not solve your debts, but it sure will improve your appearance in the poor house.

Addison Board OKs Movie Site

Addison's village board Monday night cleared the way for the construction of a new movie theater on Lake Street by unanimously passing an ordinance providing for the rezoning of the property for such use.

In okaying the site, located east of the Lutherbrook Children's Home and west of Kennedy Drive, the board agreed that the new theater was sorely needed for the village and it should be built as quickly as possible.

They then passed the rezoning ordinance which specifies that a special use, planned development should be constructed on the land.

Gust Fredrickson Inc., is planning to build a movie theater-office complex and allow a Florida firm to handle the operation of the movies.

Homeowners Fight Annex

by GINNY KUCMIERZ

They aren't fighting city hall but they think city hall or more specifically, the Roselle Village Board, is fighting them, and the residents in the eastern part of the village are angry.

"It's a compromise," Mrs. Norman Malcolm, 400 Springhill said about the preannexation agreement between the owner Joseph Beckman and the village.

The preannexation agreement involves approximately 20 acres of land south of Irving Park Road, and east of a subdivision known as Pinecroft village which was also developed by Beckman.

Annexation of the 20 acres to the village is contingent upon zoning most of the land for multiple-family apartment dwellings.

AT A PUBLIC hearing for the preannexation agreement Monday, both the residents and the developer argued their case to the village board.

The meeting concluded with a promise by the village board to work with Beckman and his associates to reword the annexation agreement to insure the village of more authority in enforcing expected improvements on the land.

The village board said it would tentatively consider the preannexation agreement and vote on it at its April 6 meeting.

The agreement discussed Monday was the product of lengthy negotiations between the residents and the village and the village and the developers.

Both the residents and developers presented technical and professional arguments pro and con why the land should or should not have apartment buildings on it. The overriding issue was whether the general character of the land lent itself to this type of development or whether it should stay residential as the surrounding neighbors wanted.

"AN IMPORTANT factor in wanting to develop the area for apartments is the large portion of swamp land there. Edgar E. Webster, landscaper, representing Beckman told the audience.

The 12 to 20 feet of peat in several places of the area made it impossible for building single-family houses, he said. "It would be more economical to use the land which is buildable for apartments and use the swamp areas for lakes and open spaces," Webster said.

The preannexation agreement spelled out a total of 242 apartment units, with not more than 5 per cent of the total to be three-bedroom, not less than 45 per cent to be two-bedroom and not less than 50 per cent to be one-bedroom and/or studio apartments.

"Roselle is certainly not overloaded with apartments and since it will have to have housing for a growing population, let's get the best layout we possibly can," Webster concluded

HE SAID THE character of the neighborhood had changed since the residents first moved in, the traffic on Irving Park Road and the tentative location of the railroad station all made apartments logical in that location.

Mrs. Malcolm said there were three petitions presented to the board, one signed by all the homeowners whose property was adjacent to the land in question and two other petitions with 289 signatures each of Roselle citizens who were not in favor of another apartment development.

Fred Weiszman, an attorney acting as a consultant to some residents, cited a 1958 subdivision plat used by the developer during the sale of homes in Pinecroft Village.

The plat which has been recorded in the county shows at least half of the 20 acres will be developed as single-family homes. The plat further indicates the plan will remain in effect until 1975.

Weiszman said later the plat, "is a sound legal document on which the homeowners could prevent zoning and argue they were sold houses with misrepresentation."

THE PLAT doesn't officially subdivide any land except the area which the residents bought, officials said.

Weiszman pointed out the preannexation agreement was written "very loosely" and left the developer much leeway to avoid improvements while preventing the village from enforcing such things as construction of sidewalks etc.

At the request of the residents, the village board reviewed the Zoning Board of Appeals recommendations on the land which were to deny the multiple-family zoning.

The zoning board's report pointed out both the Kennedy and Buttonwood developments to the north included apartments. It also said the village board seemed, "overly anxious to allow apartments. . .which were in conflict with the wishes of the homeowners."

THE ZONING board said the village could control development of the land without annexing it because it was within the mile and a half limit from the village boundaries. Any village has some authority on zoning of land within this area.

Above all, the homeowners didn't want the apartments across the street.

"Im a conservationist" one lady said "The apartment buildings will spoil the wild blueberry, strawberry and raspberry patches growing in the field now."

Police Chief Is Stressing PR

Robert Greve, acting Roselle police Chief is stressing public relations with the people of the village and feels this is the major way to improve efficiency and service of the department.

"We're for you," Greve told the members of the Roselle Chamber of Commerce Tuesday.

His theory is basic "we want to encourage everyone to turn in a complaint no matter how small it may seem," he said, "because even what appears to be little things can turn out to be a significant incident and we want people to know their complaints are acted on.

Greve had an opportunity not too long ago to thank a conscientious resident and at the same time two policemen who answered what seemed to be his small complaint

A MAN LIVING on Pinecroft Drive saw two boys running from a parked car near his house. He reported this to the police who found the subjects apparently stealing tires from Dick Wickstrom's Chevrolet on Irving Park Road.

Greve not only wrote a thank you note to the man, but made sure the policemen involved, Patrolmen Charles Gurke and Clarence Higdon were recognized by the village board.

The recent burglary of over $7,000 of equipment from Roselle Building materials might have been prevented if an alert citizen had taken the time to call the police about suspicious people around the store, Greve added.

Greve doesn't say the people have to do all the work. "We'll try our hardest, but your help is important, the police can't be everywhere, just let us know and we'll answer your call."

HE TOLD ROSELLE businessmen the cheapest form of insurance available to them was adequate lighting in front and in the back of their stores.

"The police check all the doors of the stores every night and if a light that is normally on is off, they investigate immediately," Greve said.

Greve has been with the Roselle police cruising the streets in the cars and are on the look-out for suspicious persons and incidents in which they can assist citizens. He emphasized the people have "to let us know. Little things can be something big."

Greve has been wit the Roselle police department since November of 1966. Before that he was with the Bloomingdale Police Department for seven years. He started in the Bloomingdale as a patrolman and was promoted to sergeant in 1962

After coming to Roselle, he was promoted to corporal in 1968 and sergeant in 1969 He was appointed acting chief last month after the resignation of Lester Sola who is still with the department as lieutenant.

Two Works Officials Quit

John G Morris, DuPage County superintendent of public works has resigned

Morris' resignation submitted March 7 to Paul Ronske, chairman of the DuPage County Board of Supervisors, was made public Wednesday along with the resignation of Edgar Preissner, assistant superintendent of public works

Speaking of both his and Preissner's resignationin relation to the defeated $105 million bond referendum and the recent shake-up on the county board's public works committee Morris said, "They were just a series of unrelated events and had nothing to do with either resignation."

Morris said the resignations were withheld until after the referendum so as "not to confuse the election with other issues."

He said se felt he had done "about all he could to initiate change in the county's program," and was going on to another government job where he knew he would be able to do more in the area of environment control.

Morris, whose resignation is effective Monday March 23, will announce what his exact plans are today but he did say he would still be in Illinois and it would be "a significant professional change." He added he would be concerned with environment on all levels, water, air and noise.

Many believe Morris may be taking over as the new Coordinator of Environmental Quality or Director of State Department of Conservation.

Morris said he had begun contemplating the change since February.

He had been with DuPage County for four years. Before that Morris was Superintendent of Public Works for Lake County.

He received his bachelors degree in civil engineering at the University of Minnesota where he graduated with honors

Morris received a masters degree in sanitary engineering from the University of Wisconsin. He has done graduate studies in public administration in Northern Illinois University.

He has served as the Assistant Superintendent of Environmental Sanitation for Milwaukee, and was the Director of Environmental Health.

Preissner submitted his resignation March 17 and it will be effective April 17

He will take a position as project manager with a Division of the Universal Oil Products Co.

Wood Dale CD Course To Start March 31

The Wood Dale Civil Defense will sponsor a radiological-monitoring course starting March 31 from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Wood Dale Fire Station.

The course will run five weeks with classes being held every Tuesday night under the supervision of instructor E. Nelson Bowser.

Civil Defense, police and fire officials may attend but the course is also open to any interested citizen.

Vision, Hearing Tests Set

Parents who live in Addison elementary school district are eligible to register their preschool children in a preschool vision and hearing screening program Monday through Wednesday.

Sponsored by the West Suburban Association for the Hearing Handicapped, the program is available for children from three to five years old, who live in school Dist. 4.

The screening program is scheduled for Monday at Fullerton and Army Trail schools; Tuesday at Wesley and Oak Schools, and Wednesday at Lincoln school.

Technicians trained by the Department of Public Health will conduct the screening with volunteers held from the Addison Council PTA and local unit PTA's in Addison.

The registration is necessary to enable the children to qualify for the screening so the child can be given a scheduled time and a screening readiness game, which prepares the children so they are able to cooperate at the screening.

The Addison Council PTA warned parents that unnoticed eye problems and hearing deficiencies are sometimes discovered during such tests and that the program is a safeguard for their children's better health.

$8,500 Grossed At The Fun Fair

Last Saturday's fun fair, in Medinah North School, the first sponsored by the Medinah PTO grossed $8,500 in ticket sales. Over 700 students participated in the fair.

"It was a real school, teacher and parent effort," Mrs. L. H. Murison, Medinah PTO member said.

CHILDREN FROM the seventh and rated and set up for the fair. Mothers rated and set-up for the fair. Mothers baked all kinds of cakes, including a rabbit cake and an unusual "leprechaun" cake.

Proceeds go towards the purchase of needed equipment for Medinah School Dist. 11. In the past, the PTO bought a portable stage and television sets for the district.

Hoodlum Priest To Be Featured Without Hoods

The Rev. Harmon Mills is Addison's version of the hoodlum priest. The only thing missing is the major crime and the thugs that go along with it.

Mills has been riding around with Addison police for the past several weeks. He wants to get the feel of the community, see what people are like from behind the badge and help those that need extra assistance.

Mills is an example of an Addison resident who wants to become involved, pitch in and help improve the community in which he lives.

For a look at Rev. Harlan Mills, a Baptist minister, and his contribution to Addison and its inhabitants, read "Profile," an exclusive feature presented each Monday in the Register.

Choir To Sing Easter Cantata

John W. Peterson's Easter Cantata, "No Greater Love," will be presented by the 30-voice choir of Medinah Baptist Church at 7 p.m. Sunday.

The entire community has been invited to hear this presentation of Peterson's best known work which is a sweeping story of Christ's unparalleled love for mankind.

Peterson is widely known in the evangelical world for his outstanding composing and arranging of new works and grand old hymns of the church

The Medinah Baptist Church choir is directed by Alan Henrickson. Soloists for this cantata will be Carol Few, Colin Few, Joan Calderone and James Weir.

The choir will appear for the first time in new robes and the 60-minute presentation will be made in candlelight.

The church is located on Foster Avenue at Sycamore Street in unincorporated Medinah. Foster Avenue can be reached from Medinah Road or Roselle-Bloomingdale Road

Dad Won't Be Home 'Til Baby's Year Old

Jon A. Matthies of Roselle and his wife, Terri, are expecting their first child in July, but he won't be home to play with the baby until it's about a year old.

Jon, the eldest child and only son of Mr. and Mrs. William Matthies, Rt. 1 Box 334, Nerge Road, is currently stationed in Korea. He is a specialist with the 199th Personnel Supporting Company in Yong Sang.

His wife is residing with her father Albert S. Aiello, 21 W. 560 Irving Park Road, Medinah.

Addison Board OKs Movie Site

Addison's village board Monday night cleared the way for the construction of a new movie theater on Lake Street by unanimously passing an ordinance providing for the rezoning of the property for such use.

In okaying the site, located east of the Lutherbrook Children's Home and west of Kennedy Drive, the board agreed that the new theater was sorely needed for the village and it should be built as quickly as possible.

They then passed the rezoning ordinance which specifies that a special use, planned development should be constructed on the land.

Gust Fredrickson Inc., is planning to build a movie theater-office complex and allow a Florida firm to handle the operation of the movies.

Bold Growth Plan Charted

Addison took a bold step toward the 21st century Wednesday night when a study commissioned by the village board two years ago was formally presented to officials by Thomas Dykes planning consultant

But the proposal which charts the course of Addison's future growth through 1990 did not go unquestioned by those attending the hearing which resulted in the threat of legal action by a representative of the Continental Illinois National Bank

Dykes, a representative of Harland Bartholomew Associates called the study a 'flexible plan one that represents a guideline for future growth for the village which is subject to change over a period of time"

The proposal, which cost the village $16 000 of Bartholomew's fee of $50 000 (state and federal government agencies paid the balance) was broken into five areas by Dykes to help explain what the village had to do to accommodate the estimated population of 78 000 persons by 1990

THE MULTI-MILLION dollar program, complete with the construction of high rise complexes and the deployment of industrial land to employ 15 000 should be completed in separate stages according to Dykes the first of which is five years from the time the plan is adopted

The cost of this stage, he said, would be about $14 million of which Addison taxpayers would pay about $6 million The five year plan would include the development of a community park a high rise office and apartment complex a new post office a new shopping center, a new fire station, an addition to the new sewage treatment plant, the extension of Fullerton Road to Swift Road and Diversey Avenue to connect with Villa Avenue and Addison Road

ALSO, THE construction of several elementary schools the widening of Route 53 from two to four lanes and a new well site at Lombard Road and Lake Street to serve the northwest portion of the village

The money needed for the next 15 years of the plan could not be estimated according to Dykes in an interview with the Register recently He said an estimate would depend on how well the five-year plan was progressing and how high costs rise by that time

Other proposals in Dykes' report include a major, regional shopping center at Route 53 and Lake Street a Forest Preserve site at Swift Road beginning about one mile south of Army Trail Road to North Avenue, a golf course and public park south of Lake Street and west of the new Route 61 and a vocational college at Mill Road and Army Trail Road

WHEN THE MEETING was opened to public statements Willis Collins a representative of the Continental Illinois National Bank, said the proposed extension of Kennedy Drive through the Green Meadows Shopping Center to connect with Addison Road would destroy the value of the shopping center property and lessen the revenues for the village through the loss of sales tax because of lost business

Collins, who said he represents the bank, The Lullo Estate, which owns the shopping center, Goldblatt's Department Store and Zayree Department Store, said such an extension of the street could result in "a legal complaint or action"

He said Green Meadows has plans for future expansion of the shopping center

OTHER SPEAKERS included Leonard Borisof, local builder, who commended Dykes for his study, said a master plan was necessary for a village to grow in the right direction and added that it should be used as a guideline and not a bible

But, said Borisof, 'I don't think it's possible for anyone to do a study of this type without forgetting things or making mistakes"

Borisof said a major hospital should be included in the plans because of the projected large population and that some of the plans for road construction and extension should be modified He said some of the roads should be altered to redirect traffic in a better manner.

A representative of school Dist 15 spoke to the gathering, telling of the major financial problems of his school district and asked that some of the plans be modified to help pour needed money into the district's coffers

Dist 15 is located mostly in Bloomingdale with portions of it in Addison, mainly west of Route 53

ANOTHER SPEAKER was Harold Barnes who described himself as 'just a taxpayer who has lived in Addison for ten years and whose taxes have doubled in that time"

Barnes complained that his taxes were going up and that he wanted to know exactly how he would be affected financially by the new plan He also wanted to know if the people were going to be able to approve or disapprove of the study to which Bernie Hanlon Plan Commission chairman said, "you're doing that right now"

The three-hour meeting adjourned until next Wednesday night About a month from then a special meeting will be held to discuss the question of rezoning village property in accordance with the plan The next meeting will begin at 8 p m. at the village hall.

Gun Law Backers Plan To Reload

by SYD JAMIESON

A News Analysis

Addison's proposed firearms ordinance had rough sledding Tuesday night as the village public safety committee held an open meeting to air the controversial document

When the smoke had cleared away after 2½ hours of debate between committee members and those in attendance, Village Trustee Peter Callahan said the proposed ordinance would be "redrafted' based on this week's airing before a packed house in the Addison Municipal Building

Spearheading the attack against Police Chief Vic Maul and committee members was attorney Charles Ricci who reportedly was representing Phil Mallegni and Vince Scoleri, co-owners of Pucinni's Gun Shop, Addison

Ricci in arguing against the proposed text of the ordinance as presented Tuesday night, said the village, in its attempt to regulate the sale of firearms and registration has gone beyond the powers delegated to it due to the fact the state has preempted the field

RICCI TOLD MAUL during one exchange "What I am arguing about is the reasonableness of the law and attempting to clarify it You are making up a law to enforce a law — it doesn't make sense'

He also took issue with certain language in the proposed ordinance and particularly at Maul about police powers of an individual officer

But Maul struck back at Ricci with 'We are not asking for registration of firearms We are talking about an individual we would like to have the opportunity to check out

"What I am seeking is clearance to records in the gun shop I want to be in the position to tell the shop owner whether or not he can sell a weapon to his customer"

MAUL SAID A thorough check of the individual could be accomplished within a 72-hour period He explained that with modern technical equipment there is "no reason why we can't have a report within that time"

Yet it wasn't all Maul's show or Ricci's concerning the proposed gun law for Addison Several individuals — one who brought his wife and six kids to prove a point about family safety — asked questions of Maul, Callahan and Trustee Arthur Hurley, Jr

Another was Walter Schmidt, an eighth-grade teacher at St Paul's Lutheran School, who told the committee he was teaching the U S Constitution to his class "and would like to go back and give some honest answers"

Mallegni claimed if the proposed ordinance was passed by the village board of trustees, "I'll have to close my business tomorrow"

CALLAHAN CONCEDED to deletion of certain language in the proposed text and Hurley pushed for elimination of the word "barter" stating he didn't feel this was necessary

But efforts of Callahan and the committee to draft a specific gun ordinance for Addison apparently didn't settle too well with the public in attendance

What it really boiled down to was a request for the committee to recommend the village adopt the state code by reference and to improve procedures in providing the local police force with copies of gun applications for checking

"Let's throw out all this garbage in the ordinance" as one resident commented

The meeting ended with Callahan saying he would give his recommendations to Village Atty Hubert "Bud" Loftus for further study and revision of the present text of the proposed code

RICCI ASKED Callahan, as chairman of the public safety committee, if he (Ricci) could meet with Loftus and Maul to discuss the revisions prior to presenting the new draft to the village board for possible action

Callahan didn't lean too favorably on Ricci's suggestion, but did say he would request that Ricci be given a copy of the revised draft "in advance' of the board meeting

Thus it would appear that the village of Addison will soon get a firearms ordinance, but probably verbatim to the state code with some modifications to improve local access to gun shop records

As one resident commented "Our whole objection is the vehicle (ordinance) as written is inadequate and wrong and can be interpreted many ways — it should be completely rewritten"

The committee appeared to compromise, yet stood firm in its conviction that it intends to pass legislation to provide for investigation and that existing state statutes will be enforced

THE BATTLE may not be over yet — another packed house may be in evidence when the village board holds its next meeting in about three weeks

It all started when the state requested various municipalities to pass local gun shop ordinances to assure that the wrong persons, such as criminals and mental patients, do not obtain firearms.

As for Police Chief Maul, "All we want is a precautionary measure It's immaterial what they do around us, it's what we do in Addison that concerns me"

A SMILE IS worth 10,000 words! The face of four-year-old Anne Berleman, of 530 Moreland, Addison, tells all as she listens intently to Mrs. Helen Bingaman during story telling session for Addison youngsters at the public library. The sessions, held Wednesday and Thursdays at 235 N. Kennedy Drive, provide both entertainment and learning lessons for the children.

AND THEN, AND THEN . . . Mrs. Helen Bingaman, an active member of Addison's involved citizenship, lends some time to a story telling program being conducted by the Addison Public Library, 235 N. Kennedy Drive. The sessions are held several times a week.

Vets Enjoy Dinner Dance

Most of the Vietnam veterans who attended a dinner-dance for them at the Addison VFW last Thursday night were of the same opinion

"When will it happen again?"

That's the response filtering in to Ensign M W Wayland, chief of the special services division at the Great Lakes Naval Hospital in Glenview, where about 70 enlisted men came by bus and automobile for the evening

In a telephone interview with the Register this week, Wayland said several of the men who attended the affair have come into his office to express their happiness about the event which featured food, liquid refreshments and local girls for dancing company

"The people in Addison were just outstanding," said Wayland "This was the nicest evening the men have had since I've been at the base They have all told me they enjoyed the evening very much"

It is difficult to get to talk to any of the men who are staying at the hospital according to Wayland, so he spoke for the patients

He said most of the men were Vietnam casualties Some are permanently disabled and are receiving treatment before one day being released from the service Others at the hospital, are temporarily disabled Wayland said, and are going back to the service when they are able to do the same job they were doing before being wounded

Wayland said the dinner-dance would help speed up the recovery of the men because their morale needs a boost whenever possible

The party began at 7 30 p m and lasted until about 11 p m When it was over a bunch of happy soldiers went back to the hospital, hoping for another such affair

THINK, BLACK SMOKE billowed from a site just east of York Road on Irving Park Road outside Bensenville last week. Village officials are becoming concerned over recent air polluters who "blatantly" disreguard local, county and state pollution ordinances concerning open burning. Village Pres. John Varble has drafted a letter to Cook County seeking action against such violaters. Varble said if the county won't help the village fight pollution he will go to the state where he's "certain they (state officials) will help out."

Trash Fire Halt Sought

by LINDA VACHATA

Where there's smoke, there's fire. Unfortunately for the Village of Bensenville the smoke is pouring over the area, but the fire is just out of reach.

Last week thick, black smoke billowed over the eastern section of the village. The smoke was coming from a rubbish fire east of York Road on Irving Park Road. For some time the village has attempted to bring action against the owners of this property for violation of pollution ordinances, but the area is located just outside the village limits in Cook County.

According to village officials, the company that conducted the burning last week has numerous other times "blatantly violated" various pollution ordinances.

"We are preparing a letter to Cook County (officials) asking them to issue an injunction against the parties involved and I will personally present it to county officials," Village Pres. John Varble said this week."The people who are open burning are committing a brazen dereliction of statutes."

Village Atty. Steve Nagy said the letter would urge county officials to check the ordinances to bring action against the parties involved. He said he thought the owners were in violation of Cook County ordinances.

"I'VE BEEN TOLD we won't get to first base with the county. If not we are going to take this to the state and I'm sure we'll get some action there," Varble said.

It has been reported that the O'Hare Control Tower has occasionally complained about the dense pollution mist in the area. Smoke from Clow Pipe Corp., and from the open burning has apparently hampered the visibility of pilots landing at the airport, according to Varble.

He said he could not effectively work against air and noise pollution from airplanes until he cleans up pollution in his own village.

Village officials have been under the impression that the property involved is owned by P. Zaccari of Zaccari Rubbish Removal. Zaccari told the Register this week the open burning was not coming from his property. He said the incident of rubbish burning last week occurred on property on the east of his.

"THE VILLAGE should check into this more before they go blame someone." Zaccari said. He added that he thought the fire was probably not set intentionally, but by accident.

Village Administrator Harold Koehler said the village "will find out who the owner of the property is and then go after that individual."

I hope someone in Cook County will make an honest effort to correct the situation," Koehler said. "If there was ever a violation in regard to pollution, the owner of that property should certainly take first prize."

The village administrator said Bensenville residents constantly complain about the dense smoke, but the village has to tell them the area is out of Bensenville's jurisdiction.

"When the wind is right, the pollution is blowing right over area residences," he said.

"We, like the citizens, would like to see some action," Koehler said.

Last night, the newly drafted pollution ordinance for Bensenville was scheduled to be presented for a first reading. Although village officials contend the ordinance is extremely comprehensive, it wouldn't affect areas outside the village such as the one in question.

Fenton Choir Recognized

The Fenton High School Concert Choir of Bensenville was one of four groups selected nationally to perform at the Music Educator's National Convention held in Chicago recently

The concert choir, with James Skomer as director, performed for an afternoon program which was followed by a clinic session. Dr Charles Hurt of California came to Fenton the week preceding the convention to rehearse with the choir.

The concert choir program for the convention performance included "Domine Fac Mecum" by Morley; "Cantato Domino" by Schutz; "O Lovely May" by Brahms; "Life's Joy" by Schubert; "Mohacs" by Kodaly; "Let the People Praise Thee" by Monhardt and "Will Ye Go Lassie, Go?" arrangement by Bune.

A LETTER OF congratulations from Gov. Richard Ogilvie was sent to Skomer prior to the concert.

"I am pleased to send my congratulations to the Fenton Concert Choir on being invited to perform for the Music Educator's National Convention," Ogilvie said in his letter.

"The Fenton Choir deserves the praise of all the citizens of Illinois for achievement in music, citizenship and enthusiasm in representing the youth of this state. I congratulate the music department, the school and the community that have made this type of commendable participation a possibility and a reality for talented young people."

The concert choir is one of seven performing groups in the Fenton music department. In addition to the 55-member concert Choir, there are two training choirs, the Mixed Chorus and the Treble Choir, a Concert and Cadet Band, a stage band and the Fenton Singers, a 16 member "pop" vocal group.

Twenty-five per cent of the Fenton student body is in some aspect of the music program.

FENTON HIGH SCHOOL has developed a reputation as having one of the most widely traveled high school music departments in the country. The concert choir and concert band have made extensive tours of the Unitead States biextensive tours of the United States biannually for the last 16 years.

Last year the Music department completed a successful tour of Germany and Switzerland. This tour, financed entirely by the student participants, as are all concert tours, brought outstanding reviews from local audiences in Plochingen, Munich and Wurzburg, Germany, as well as Zurich, Lucerne and Montreaux, Switzerland.

Plans for a concert tour of Southern California for the spring of 1971 are presently being considered.

Locally, the Concert Choir participates in concerts, assemblies, clinics and was recently featured on a Christmas Special presented by WLS-TV.

Two Works Officials Quit

John G. Morris, DuPage County superintendent of public works has resigned.

Morris' resignation submitted March 7 to Paul Ronske, chairman of the DuPage County Board of Supervisors, was made public Wednesday along with the resignation of Edgar Preissner, assistant superintendent of public works.

Speaking of both his and Preissner's resignationin relation to the defeated $105 million bond referendum and the recent shake-up on the county board's public works committee Morris said, "They were just a series of unrelated events and had nothing to do with either resignation."

Morris said the resignations were withheld until after the referendum so as "not to confuse the election with other issues."

He said se felt he had done "about all he could to initiate change in the county's program," and was going on to another government job where he knew he would be able to do more in the area of environment control.

Morris, whose resignation is effective Monday March 23, will announce what his exact plans are today but he did say he would still be in Illinois and it would be "a significant professional change." He added he would be concerned with environment on all levels, water, air and noise.

Many believe Morris may be taking over as the new Coordinator of Environmental Quality or Director of State Department of Conservation.

Morris said he had begun contemplating the change since February.

He had been with DuPage County for four years. Before that Morris was Superintendent of Public Works for Lake County.

He received his bachelors degree in civil engineering at the University of Minnesota where he graduated with honors.

Morris received a masters degree in sanitary engineering from the University of Wisconsin. He has done graduate studies in public administration in Northern Illinois University.

He has served as the Assistant Superintendent of Environmental Sanitation for Milwaukee, and was the Director of Environmental Health.

Preissner submitted his resignation March 17 and it will be effective April 17.

He will take a position as project manager with a Division of the Universal Oil Products Co.

2nd Wood Dale Bomb Threat Told

For the second time in as many weeks, Wood Dale's police department received an anoymous bomb threat.

The latest bomb scare came Sunday night at approximately 8:04 when Phyllis LaFarge, police dispatcher, received a phone call from a middle-aged man who stated there was a bomb in the Grove Apartments on Irving Park Road that would ignite at midnight.

Less than an hour later the caller phoned in another threat indicating the bomb would explode in about three hours.

Wood Dale police and fire department officials investigated the bomb threat but discovered nothing. Some apartment residents were asked to vacate the premises while other preferred to stay at home disregarding the threat.

MRS. LaFARGE stated the man on the phone talked clearly without nervousness.

"He is definitely not the same person who made the bomb threat at Highland School last week," said the police dispatcher.

Both bomb scares were phoned in by adult males and both resulted in investigations by police and fire authorities who found nothing.

The caller apparently knew the apartments were in more than one building because of the plural use of the word buildings.

Arthur Christy, Wood Dale police chief, obviously irritated by this recent bomb scare, stated that if the bomb caller is caught he will be charged with making false police reports.

Christy warned that the DuPage County State's Attorney Office initiates harsh action on persons involved with bomb threats.

Parks Announce Job Openings

The Bensenville Park District is seeking applicants to fill approximately 40 summer full time positions.

"A rewarding summer of challenge and personal satisfaction can be experienced by working in recreation with the Bensenville Park District," said Dan Plaza, superintendent of recreation.

Positions available include: playground directors and leaders, arts and crafts specialists, drama and music specialists, tennis instructor, teen program directors, snack bar personnel, life guards (WSI and Senior Life Saving), park maintenance personnel and cashiers.

Interested applicants should go to the Park District Office, 181 N. Church Road, to apply.

Deadline for application is April 15.

Service Station Hit By Thieves

More than $125 was reported stolen from the Clark Service Station, 109 W. Irving Park Road in Wood Dale, Saturday afternoon, according to station manager Tom DiLillo.

DiLillo said it was the second such theft in a month but he failed to report the other incident to village police authorities. No reason was given for his actions.

The $125 was taken from a cupboard in the back room after DiLillo left counting the money to assist an attendant servicing cars. The station manager told village police that he was gone only 10 to 15 minutes and when he returned the money was gone.

The theft occurred between 3 and 4 p.m. and station employes indicated that two men driving an Edison Truck were in the building prior to the theft.

Wood Dale CD Course To Start March 31

The Wood Dale Civil Defense will sponsor a radiological-monitoring course starting March 31 from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Wood Dale Fire Station.

The course will run five weeks with classes being held every Tuesday night under the supervision of instructor E. Nelson Bowser.

Civil Defense, police and fire officials may attend but the course is also open to any interested citizen.

Board Cancels Meet

Monday's regular meeting of the Wood Dale Library Board has been canceled.

A special meeting held this week took the place of the regular meeting, according to a library spokesman, because one of the board members will be out of town next Wednesday.

Anyone wishing to bring business before the library board may do so at next month's meeting.

Bridge Near Completion

The Route 83 bridge over Irving Park Road in Bensenville should be able to resume handling a normal traffic load next week, according to Sigmund Ziejewski, state highway engineer.

Last month a 12-ton limit was placed on the bridge and heavier trucks were rerouted. Recently state crews began the repair work.

Traffic is reduced to one lane in both directions with the use of temporary signal lights. Bridge repairs are causing traffic bottlenecks during peak periods of the day between Thorndale Avenue to the north and Grand Avenue to the south.

"We are putting in a new concrete deck to strengthen the carrying ability of the bridge," Ziejewski said. "We have had to peel off the old asphalt and pour a new concrete deck."

The bridge was in "pretty poor" condition, but the load restrictions should be taken off Monday or Tuesday, according to the state highway engineer, as work progresses.

Dad Won't Be Home 'Til Baby's Year Old

Jon A. Matthies of Roselle and his wife, Terri, are expecting their first child in July, but he won't be home to play with the baby until it's about a year old.

Jon, the eldest child and only son of Mr. and Mrs. William Matthies, Rt 1, Box 334, Nerge Road, is currently stationed in Korea. He is a specialist with the 198th Personnel Supporting Company in Yong Sang.

His wife is residing with her father Albert S. Aiello, 21 W. 560 Irving Park Road, Medinah.

Costume Judges Are Named

Four local judges have been selected to judge the costume competition for the Bensenville Park District's First Annual White Pines Masque Mardi-Gras to be held April 4 at the White Pines Country Club.

Ralph Becker of Tioga Toggery, Eleanor Reid of Reid's Dress Shop, Helen Huarut of the Hill and Dale Dress Shop and Ron Hacker from Beeline have been named to be judges. They will award prizes to the costumes that best represent King Rex, Queen Venus, King Zulu, and the Queen's Handmaiden.

The dance is being patterned strictly after the renowned New Orlean's Mardi Gras. A sumptuous buffet including lasagna, beef, chicken, salad, desserts and Louisiana coffee plus a bottle of champagne per couple are included in the price of $7.50 per person.

Costumes for the gala affair are preferred, but optional.

The Bensenville Park District has asked the Bensenville Boys Athletic Association to cooperate in this venture with the understanding that the proceeds derived may be used by the Park District to benefit the BBAA.

Deadline for making reservations is Friday, March 27. For reservations call the Park District at 766-7015.

Tomorrow Is Big Day For Harper College

by TOM WELLMAN

Tomorrow the voting-age registered citizens of the Harper College district will decide how much money the three-year-old community college can count on in the next several years.

Residents will act to approve or reject an 11-cent increase in the education fund tax rate and a six-cent hike in the building (maintenance) fund tax rate.

Polling places will be open from noon to 7 p.m. Saturday at 43 different locations, mostly schools, throughout the four-township area of Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Palatine, as well as in parts of the cities of Des Plaines, Barrington and Carpentersville.

The vote totals from the polling places will be brought into the business office of the community college, located at the intersection of Algonquin and Roselle roads in Palatine, to be recorded.

AND NO ONE at the college is overly optimistic about passage of both tax hikes.

Various college officials have pointed out a lack of positive interest from the community about the referendum. A series of public appearances by officials has been held to explain the referendum, but a large outpouring of vocal public support has not materialized.

Polling places for Harper College referendum are on Page 3.

However, there is no apparent organized opposition at this time, either. The Herald has received perhaps three or four calls objecting to the referendum.

College officials and outside observers believe a recent series of Sunday open houses may aid passage tremendously. The six open houses drew more than 3,000 persons to the campus to take guided tours and to see a film strip on the college's achievements.

But it's the lack of public response that bothers college officials. They have watched as a McHenry County referendum for a junior college was defeated recently and as a $105 million sewer bond referendum in DuPage referendum was decisively rejected this week.

THEY ARE concerned, too, that area taxpayers will be feeling the squeeze of inflation too much to vote additional funds for the college. They feel the recent success of candidates on anti-inflation platforms may be a bad sign.

They also fear voter apathy, and there is an old maxim that a small turnout means that only the "no" voters have turned out.

If the two tax hikes are defeated, it won't be the last chance to raise the tax rate. The college could go for another try for the tax rate this fall. However, they would prefer passage Saturday.

At stake in the referendum vote is not only the financial future of Harper College but also possibly the reelection chances of two incumbent board members and three independent candidates. Another person, active in the pro-referendum campaign, will file for the Harper board this afternoon.

College officials and others interested in the referendum's success are, understandably, walking around on eggshells. They are encouraging registered students over 21 to vote and carefully watching to see that Harper's best foot goes forward prior to the election.

HARPER OFFICIALS and others have several primary arguments for the referendum. First, they point out that the college's growth to approximately 5,000 students in three years of operation has outstripped an enrollment projection by a consulting firm of 3,000 this year and

Family Housed In Church

FORMER HOME for Mrs. Santos Lopez and her three children is located near Route 72 and Busse Road in Elk Grove Township. Family moved Monday into a church basement in Arlington Heights when electricity and water were turned off recently because of unpaid bills. Elk Grove Village Community Services Director Thomas E. Smith said attempts are being made to get the family another trailer inside a trailer court. Smith met yesterday with the woman's caseworker from the Cook County Department of Public Aid.

A church in Arlington Heights is providing a temporary home for a family that was moved recently from a decrepit house trailer at 2118 E. Higgins Road, near Route 72 and Busse Road in Elk Grove Township. Since Monday, Mrs. Santos Lopez and her three children have been living in a basement room at the Congregational United Church of Christ, 1091 W. Kirchoff Road.

The Lopez family is the second to have been provided shelter by the church in recent months.

Mrs. Lopez has been living in a mobile home that is "grossly beyond repair," said Thomas E. Smith, director of Elk Grove Village Community Services.

"LIVING CONDITIONS in the trailer are very inadequate," continued Smith, "The floor boards are rotted out and water and electricity were turned off recently because of unpaid bills."

Mrs. Lopez, who is not living with her husband, has been living in the trailer for about three years. For two months this winter another couple was living with her family.

Smith said she receives $90 a month from the Cook County Department of Public Aid, not nearly enough for her to live on. It is her only source of income, he said.

He added she has difficulty communicating because she speaks mostly Spanish.

Tow of her children, students at Mark Hopkins School in Elk Grove Village, are driven to school by some friends. The other child is of pre-school age.

"I don't know how they could get along under those conditions," said Mrs. Diane Greenholdt, a member of a housing task force formed by Jack Pahl, Elk Grove Village president, to find homes for some 17 families in addition to developing a long-range plan for housing.

OF THE FAMILIES in need of housing, the Lopez family is the most in need of help, said Mrs. Greenholdt. Smith agreed.

Smith said Mrs. Lopez was supposed to be paying about $50 a month to park the trailer on the lot but that was more than a year behind in payments.

According to Smith, she had been told many months ago by the Maywood-Proviso State Bank, acting in behalf of a trust, that she must leave but that she could not find a place to go.

A spokesman for the bank said her husband had not made payments for more than a year. "We wanted her to leave because of the bad living conditions," said the spokesman.

The problem reached a head only recently, Smith said, when the water and electricity were turned off. Water was obtained from a nearby house but the family lived in virtual darkness, until school authorities told of the situation.

Smith said the family is one of the original of housing since a housing problem gained attention with the death of three children in November.

PRIOR TO THE shutting off of utilities, it had been hoped the family could live in the trailer until the task force found it alternate housing, Smith explained.

A meeting last Friday between individuals concerned about the housing of minority groups resulted in the church basement being made available through the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

The Benito Gonzalez family previously occupied the church basement for several weeks after having been evicted in December from a dwelling Cook County authorities said was substandard.

County Building Commissioner Raymond Welsh agreed to let the family move back into their home near Arlington Heights and Algonquin roads "at their own risk" when it could not find another place to live.

Another family living in a church is that of Santana Gonzalez. He has been living in a room at the Elk Grove Wesleyan Church for almost 7 weeks while friends attempt to find a place to put a trailer parked at the rear of the church.

Seniors Hear Homosexuality Talk

by JUDY COVELLI

As part of a sociology program for seniors at Elk Grove High School, six persons spoke on homosexuality Wednesday.

Speakers from several organizations have been invited to the class to acquaint the students with problems in society related to the class topics, dating, marriage, the family and human sexuality.

The speakers, members of the Gay Liberation and most of them university students in Chicago, are publicly acknowledged homosexuals

They were invited to speak, according to Joseph Wellman, team-teacher, to provide the students the opportunity to ask questions of a segment of people upon whom the public looks strangely.

"I WANTED them to find out that they at least don't have three arms," Wellman said. "I wanted to dispel some of the myths around the idea of homosexuality."

Wellman explained that the topic arose when the classes began discussing attitudes toward the opposite sex.

"Among other things, we discussed the "Playboy Philosophy" and the growing feminist movement," he said.

He and Mrs. Sue Kaineg, who teamteach the classes in sociology, stressed that only senior sociology students were presented the speeches and that background had been given on the topic.

One of the members of the Gay Liberation, which is a united brotherhood of homosexuals, explained, "We're not here to recruit people, but to show that we are human beings and want to be respected as such."

WELLMAN EXPLAINED that the speakers were approved by the administration, pointing out that when speakers of a somewhat controversial nature are wanted by instructors they must be cleared through the division heads, who this time received permission from the principal.

Representatives from the National Organization of Women (NOW), termed a moderate feminist organization by Mrs. Kaineg, spoke to the sociology classes recently.

"The students had a more hostile reaction to NOW," Mrs. Kaineg said.

Other speakers, such as representatives from Women's International Terrorist Conspiracy from Hell (WITCH) have also been invited. This is a radical women's rights group, Wellman said.

A PHYSICIAN has been requested to speak relative to another aspect of the class.

The members of the Gay Liberation, somewhat poised and at times quite humorous, explained how they lived, what they felt, and how they wish society would react toward them.

In brief, this is what some of the members of the Gay Liberation had to say.

Richard: a graduate student at the University of Chicago, "You don't know what it's like to walk around and know that society says that what you are feeling inside you is wrong. Because many homosexuals are oppressed, they develop a neurosis and can really become sick, although they weren't before."

Shelley: a taxicab driver who lives with a male homosexual, "There are no traditional guidelines for this kind of relationship. You make it what the two of you want it to be.

"THINK OF why you like someone. It's usually because that person is nice, or honest, or sincere, or pleasant to be with. It doesn't have to do with whether they are male or female."

Henry: "I have to accept myself as a valid human being. If I want to hold another guy's hand, I am free to do it. I have to deal with a society, though, that doesn't accept that view."

Sue, who spoke on women's liberation: "If a woman wants to go out and make it on her own, she'll have to go through a lot and probably won't make it.

"If a woman is 'gay' she doesn't have a man to rely on. She has to go out and make it on her own. She is oppressed, ignored and rejected by people."

She also pointed out that homosexuality has been accepted by many civilizations and that the need to reproduce, a tradition which necessitaged marriage, has lessened.

Art Show Hit With Kids

"Strawberries and Marshmallows," the work of contemporary artist Sherry Vilas, is drawing the greatest attention from youngsters at the State Art Resources Traveler (mobile unit) located at Larkin High School, Elgin.

Through arrangements made by the art education department of Elgin School District U46, the art mobile will be in Elgin from now through March 22 and April 2-10.

The contemporary artisits represented present diverse form of original art from hard edge painting, charcoal and paint to base relief and sculpture.

Due to the size of the district the tour program is limited to fifth graders and to art students in the junior and senior high schools.

Crane Won't Talk

A scheduled speech tonight by U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-13th, to the Elk Grove Village Republican Club has been cancelled and club leaders are putting the blame on Township GOP Committeeman Carl Hansen.

Crane was to have addressed the club at 8 p.m. in the Holiday Inn, Elk Grove Village.

Last Friday, however, club officials received a telegram from the congressman saying he would have to attend another function tonight and that he was sorry he would have to cancel the Elk Grove speech.

In a letter to club members this week, Joe Jennings, club president, said Hansen apparently had brought pressures against Crane not to speak to the club since it is not a recognized arm of the Regular Republican Organization of Elk Grove Township.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, Hansen told the Herald he knew nothing about the cancellation and said it was a matter between the club and the congressman.

"I'm sure when Crane says he's busy, he's busy," Hansen said. "He's a hard-working congressman and his schedule is subject to change, just as Donald Rumsfeld's schedule was when he was congressman."

Crane was unavailable for comment Thursday, but his administrative assistant in Washington, Jerry Harkins, told the Herald that Crane did have another commitment for tonight and that was the reason for the cancellation.

Harkins also explained that speeches by Crane to political organizations within the district are handled through the local township committeemen and that they are generally made only to recognized Republican organizations.

ACCORDING TO Jennings, the Republican Club had explained to Crane what it was and that Crane should have known that the club was not an official arm of the township GOP unit when he accepted the invitation to speak on Feb. 18.

"We had sent out 500 invitations and had rented a hall," Jennings said. "The unfortunate thing is that it makes Crane look bad and I don't think he's the one to blame."

Okay Given for Salt Creek Flood Plans

An authorization that will make treacherous, unpredictable Salt Creek into a recreation-oriented friend of the Northwest suburbs has been announced to the area Salt Creek Watershed Steering Committee.

The Soil Conservation Service (SCS) of the U S Department of Agriculture has given Illinois the go-ahead for planning work that will lead to an estimated $3 million in federal funding to halt Salt Creek flooding. The estimated $65,000 in planning, to be done by the local SCS, is expected to be completed by Aug. 1 and presented to Congress in January.

Permission for planning extends only to the Cook County portion of Salt Creek which has a local government sponsor in accordance with federal requirements Total cost of the Cook County project is estimated at $8 million, with approximately $3.1 million to be contributed locally through acquisition of land for reservoirs and easements.

Richard Duesterhaus, SCS technician on the Salt Creek watershed project, expressed confidence the Salt Creek project would be included in the 1971 Congressional appropriation to Public Law 566 for small watersheds.

Duesterhaus said Thursday the actual improvement project would be going on for several years. When completed, it will knock annual flood damages from $700,000 a year to $6,000 a year, Duesterhaus said

DuPage County was considered for improvements in the preliminary investigation of improving Salt Creek but has not provided the necessary local sponsor and can not be considered for further federal grants.

The Chicago Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) is acting as the Cook County project sponsor and has already acquired two reservoir sites, both in Palatine Another reservoir site is being acquired on the Arlington Heights branch of Salt Creek.

The Cook County Forest Preserve District is acting as sponsor for the Busse Woods lake near Elk Grove Village, a project that will provide water recreation for local boating and swimming enthusiasts.

Announced Thursday by Congressman Philip Crane, the authorization for planning will be for a work plan which can serve as a basis for funding. Duesterhaus said when this plan is approved by Congress, design planning and actual construction can begin.

The 1968 preliminary flood control report on Salt Creek, prepared by the Salt Creek Watershed Steering Committee, calls for five structures in Cook County and three in DuPage County, plus channel improvements

Communities in the watershed area to benefit from the improvements are Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Hoffman Estates, Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Roselle and Inverness in Cook County and Bensenville, Addison, Elmhurst Wood Dale, Villa Park and Oak Brook in DuPage County.

Tom Hamilton of Elk Grove Village, chairman of the Salt Creek Watershed Steering Committee, began in 1965 the "cost-benefit ratio" study of Salt Creek that indicated the waterway could be improved under the U S Department of Agriculture's Public Law 566.

COMET INDUSTRIES vice president J. Edward Kostur recently gave the Elk Grove Village Fire Department a $600 check in appreciation for coming to the aid of the firm last fall. Fireman pumped 200,000 gallons out of the factory near Elmhurst and York roads when a water main erupted. It took them five hours to do the job. Despite their work more than $180,000 in damage was done to the building and its contents. "It could have been much worse," said Kostur. Check will be used to purchase a video tape recorder and tape unit.

Filing Deadline Is 4 p.m. Today

Today at 4 p m is the deadline for all School Dist. 59 candidates to file their nominating petitions for the April 11 election to the board of education.

There are two 3-year terms and one 2-year term open on the seven-member board.

Those whose terms will expire in April are Harry Peterson, Al Domanico and Paul Neuhauser

SEVEN PEOPLE from Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect and Des Plaines have filed their petitions for the three-year terms Neuhauser has filed for reelection to the two-year term.

The final date for withdrawing names from the ballot is March 24.

Dissent...And Our Society

by MARY REIFSCHNEIDER

"What pain is to the body, dissent is to the body politic," Jay Miller, executive director of the Illinois division of the American Civil Liberties Union, said Wednesday.

Miller spoke at the Beth Tikvah Temple Men's Club in Hoffman Estates on civil liberties, moral law and dissent

Discussing civil disorder, demonstrations and riots, led by minorities and the new left, which have become increasingly frequent in this country, Miller said: "Dissent reflects problems in society "

Government reacts to civil disorder and dissent in two ways It finds the underlying problem and creates order or it suppresses the disorder. "Historically societies suppress the disorder," Miller said

DURING LYDON Johnson's administration, the federal government tried both ways, but "since then there's been a unanimity in government that points to suppression," he said.

Congressional reaction to dissent is reflected in the 1968 anti-riot act that the Conspiracy 8 defendants were indicted under. The present attorney general "proposes almost weekly a new law that would violate constitutional rights." Miller said

Laws that would permit arresting and holding persons on a "suspicion" without making an actual charge "are anger creating and humiliating situations," too often used against minorities by police, he said

The situation often leads to a more serious charge and police brutality, he said.

"NEARLY EVERY riot in this country started with an incident between a policeman and a private citizen But it would be stupid to think or charge police with causing riots Underlying social problems are the cause," Miller said

The country not only has suppression to contend with now, but also polarization, the speaker said. The polarization ratio now is 80-20, with "80 per cent wanting dissenters silenced," Miller said.

In talking about the Conspiracy trial, Miller said the "demonstrators who came to Chicago (for the 1968 political convention) were never permitted their constitutional rights."

The 1968 law making it illegal to cross state lines to incite a riot, for which the Conspiracy 8 defendants were tried, is considered unconstitutional by the ACLU.

Miller said inciting refers to speech, a guaranteed right in the First Amendment.

"THOSE OF us who believe and work FASCISM STARTED with Hitler and Trial," he said.

The trial didn't deal with the problems. "The judge and prosecutors were so unfair, that the trial was a caricature of what society is about," he said.

Referring to the defendants, Miller said, "Maybe you don't like them, but defending their rights is what constitutional democracy is about."

If the defendants had gone to the court room shaved and with prestigious attorneys, they probably would have been acquitted, Miller said.

The government hasn't learned much from the trial, he added. "To them, the only mistake was allowing the defendants to speak to the press."

He agreed that a real danger arising from civil disorders caused by the new left (Students for a Democratic Society Weatherman faction, etc.) is government suppression that finally cause the silent majority to rise-up.
within the system, lost in the Conspiracy Mussolini being elected, he said.

"Those who want to see constitutional democracy continue, must deal with the underlying problems," Miller said. The present system is still viable, he said pointing to examples of conclusions reached in the establishment oriented Eisenhower and Kerner reports that social problems cause riots.

He had a bright note on today's youth. "For the first time since 1776, we're raising a generation that understands and is committed to constitutional rights," he said.

Miller has been the Illinois ACLU director since 1965.

He previously served as director of the Peace Education Program of the American Friends Service Committee in Illinois and Wisconsin. He has worked closely with the civil rights movement as a consultant and organizer.

munity Action, a local Elk Grove Village group, hosting the program for women of surrounding communities.

"We would like to stress that housework is a woman's job, just as bricklaying, newspaper reporting, accounting or whatever is her husband's job, but it doesn't have to take all the time and there are other rewarding things to do," Mrs. Diane Greenholdt said.

Mrs. Greenholdt is co-chairman of Girl Talk with Mrs. Irene Mayernick of Elk Grove Village

SHE ADDED, "For instance, my house is clean, my children are well taken care of, I do my own sewing, and was last year's cook of the week, but I'm still interested in helping my community and improving myself in the process.

"We are getting people mad, at home where it really hits They think we're against motherhood, the flag, and apple pie, but that's not true. We're not feminists, but, we think, feminine women interested in things around us as well as our homes."

Their program highlights this point, featuring a panel of women in the area who will tell their own stories of women in action.

"They will tell how they got there, how they manage to keep involved in community activities as well as maintain their roles as housewives and mothers, and how other women can follow their paths if they so desire," Mrs. Greenholdt explained.

WOMEN INCLUDED on the informal panel are, Mrs. Eugenia Chapman, a Democratic third district state representative: Mrs. Kathy Ward of the Regular Republican Organization of Elk Grove Township and a member of School Dist. 59 Community Council; Mrs. Kay Muller of the League of Women Voters; Mrs. Lois Moore, former executive director of the Volunteer Bureau; and Mrs. Madeline Schroeder, former Con-Con candidate on the independent ticket.

There will also be short addersses by Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl and Community Services Director Thomas E. Smith

Mistress of Ceremonies for the evening will be Mrs. Nanci Vanderweel.

Approximately 20 displays will be set up by women's organizations, civic and specialized groups, showing the contributions local women have made to their communities.

LITERATURE WILL be available and women from the various groups to answer questions.

"Women for Community Action is a nonpartisan group, taking no sides in politics but still trying to encourage an interest in local politics," Mrs. Greenholdt said.

"Its members are attempting, through this experiment, to be all-encompassing. It is attempting to give directives to women seeking an outline for their talents. It can steer them to the right places or people, along lines that would be most profitable to themselves and their communities," she explained.

Price of admission is to bring along one friend or neighbor.

The program will begin at 8 p.m. in the school cafeteria at Elk Grove Boulevard and Arlington Heights Road.

Tomorrow Big Day for Harper

that it has outstripped the tax base.

They point out that the growth means there is less taxable assessed valuation per student, so there is less revenue available. In effect, they point out Harper is too well filling an educational gap in the northwestern suburbs.

Also, they state that chargeback revenue — out-of-district tax money contributed by out-of-district students — will decline sharply this fall with the opening of the Niles-Maine Township community college.

William Mann, vice president of financial affairs, projects about $64,000 in chargeback revenue in 1971-72 The college this year gained more than $860,000 in chargeback revenue.

THE OVERRIDING argument for the referendum, of course, is that Harper College has produced a quality two-year educational program, and the additional tax funds will cover the anticipated losses during the next few years.

According to a fact book prepared by Mann, the college will face a $1 million deficit in the educational fund this coming academic year if the tax rate increase is not approved. In the building fund this year money has been transferred in from the education fund to cover a loss.

The loss will grow more severe in the coming years, said Mann, unless the tax hike is granted. If the money is not available, the college may be forced to cut programs, close buildings, and generally reduce all but basic programs.

Dr. Robert Lahti, president of the college, has pointed out the full tax rate will have to be levied next year just to meet expenses, assuming the voters approve it.

The principal argument against passage of the tax hike is, of course, financial. Some voters feel another tax increase is one increase too many.

HARPER OFFICIALS argue that the increase, although it may sound large, is relatively small. Harper gets only 3 cents out of a tax dollar, and passage of the two fund increases would mean an additional $17 tax bill on a home assessed at $10,000.

Another argument is that Harper has not raised tuition enough. It is argued that the college should have asked more than the present $8 per credit hour rate (using current projections, Harper could have set the rate at $10 or $12).

Harper officials counter that they couldn't project the number of students last fall, so they had to set the rate in advance (they can gain only one-third of expenses through tuition) and that they wanted low-tuition education. And they point out that their projections show a $10 tuition rate in 1971-72, while holding the rate steady this fall at $8.

Those are some of the basic arguments and, of course, there are others. Today, the Harper officials and interested citizens will relax momentarily then begin the vigil until the final results are posted on Mann's bulletin board.

A rejection by the voters would not mean that the college's buildings would be leveled and the college's 218-acre campus turned into Chicago's third airport. But action on the referendum will determine whether Harper continues to expand at its present rate.

Harper Polling Places

Voting on the Harper College referendum to raise the education and building (maintenance) fund tax rates a total of 17 cents will take place tomorrow from noon to 7 p.m.

Harper will use the same polling places and precinct boundaries that were used in the April 12, 1969 school board elections in respective elementary district. For information, call the Harper business office at 359-4200, extension 220.

The Chaplain Wore Bars

by TOM ROBB

The middle-aged man stood before a group gathered to hear him speak.

He told them about a man who grew up in 8 foster homes and 4 penal institutions, who once threatend to kill one of his many foster parents, who witnessed another foster parent sexually ruin his two sisters, who turned to a world of crime and confusion.

His voice grew louder and his listeners fidgeted in their seats and tried to look unaffected by this man's words, as he asked them who they thought he was talking about.

"Richard Speck," someone said.

The man smiled, for he knew Richard Speck and many others who were once inmates of Cook County Jail where he is prison Chaplain.

"NO, HE SAID, that man is me — Rev. John Irwin, and my two sisters are prostitutes today. What the hell can you expect?"

Rev. Irwin has been the Protestant Chaplain of Cook County Jail for the last 15 years and he was addressing the men's club of the First Methodist Church of Palatine Wednesday night.

Rev. Irwin was autobiographically making the main point of his talk: men behind bars are men. They are human and they wanted to be treated accordingly.

"It is wrong to portray to the public an image of murders and sex maniacs standing behind bars. They are men, not animals, down there in Cook County Jail," he said.

TO ILLUSTRATE his point, Rev. Irwin said he was the 13th child born into a family of 14, that when he was three his father died, and at six he and two sisters were sent to the first of a series of foster homes, as his mother could not support the large family.

This upbringing aleinated him from society, led to a variety of trouble and caused frequent "run-ins with the law," Rev. Irwin said.

It wasn't until he was drafted into the Korean War, and "became scared of dying that I got religion," he said. At 22 he was "converted and ordained."

"What changed my life was a warm man who showed he cared and that he wanted to help me and be my friend. This is what it's all about."

AND THIS IS what Programmed Activities for Correctional Education (PACE) at the Cook County Jail, which he came to explain to the men's club, is all about.

PACE was started by Rev. Irwin about three years ago. It is a not-for-profit corporation designed to aid convicted criminals in classroom and vocational training.

"We have been 70 per cent successful with those who have been in PACE institute," he said. "These men are now working steadily and some are even putting themselves through school."

Rev. Irwin said that PACE now needs evening volunteers to help the men in their vocational and classroom training.

"Such work, getting in and being around these men, can transform your life and their lives. I know, because someone who cared transformed mine."

Palace Gets Face Washed

LONDON UPI — thousands of tourist photographs show otherwise, but Buckingham palace is really cream colored.

The palace has been getting its face washed for the first time in decades. And as the layers of London grime are scoured off by British government workmen — lo and behold — the brown old palace isn't brown at all.

6 Towns In Transit Study

Six communities in the Northwest Municipal Conference were counted Wednesday as definite or likely participants in a proposed comprehensive transportation study for the northwest suburbs.

Ten other communities were directed to bring to the next meeting a definite decision on participation in the study. From these tallies, conference representatives are to decide the next step in implementing a transportation goal adopted a year ago last March.

Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect were the only two communities who got "yes" votes on study participation. Mount Prospect trustees stipulating that all communities must agree to the study before it will join.

Wheeling and Schaumburg representatives said money for participation had been included in next year's budgets. And Rolling Meadows and Des Plaines officials indicated their mayors and boards looked favorably upon the study and would likely approve the expenditure.

ELK GROVE Village Pres. Jack Pahl, who is handling the transportation study for the conference, was the only mayor present who said his board had turned him down on the request, stating he was "embarrassed" to have to report in the negative.

Hoffman Estates, not represented at Wednesday's conference meeting, reportedly first turned down the request to take part in the study but trustees later reportedly decided to be open-minded about possible participation.

Communities still to ask local boards to enter the study are Buffalo Grove, Palatine, Hanover Park, Streamwood, Barrington, Barrington Hills, Des Plaines, Park Ridge and Rolling Meadows.

Meeting Wednesday in the new Buffalo Grove Village Hall, conference representatives reviewed the major transportation problems in each community.

PROBLEMS LISTED reflected that the suburbs' chief means of travel, the automobile, burdens highways and commuter parking lots and creates inconveniences for the elderly and non-car owners.

Lack of adequate north-south transportation routes and lack of inter-city and inter-suburban public transportation were pointed out as serious deficiencies in area suburbs.

At one point, Arlington Heights Village Pres. John Walsh criticized a tendency to discuss transportation in terms of providing for railroad commuters, stating the study must be conducted in a broader scope than hauling commuters to and from railroad tracks. He said railroad communities could handle this type of problem by themselves by simply getting money to build parking lots and commuters were only one facet of an overall problem.

Walsh further said railroad towns are subsidizing other municipalities' commuters since the cost to provide parking far exceeds revenues produced from meters.

BUFFALO GROVE Village Pres. Donald Thompson, conference president, said he intends to sell his board on the transportation study by pointing out the unfairness of railroad towns having to provide parking for out-of-town commuters.

Palatine Village Mgr. Berton Braun said Palatine's major problem is lack of an internal transportation system to transport people around subdivisions geared to automobiles. He said Palatine's parking lots are occupied by non-residents and agreed with Walsh that parking lots are a financial drain on communities.

Rolling Meadows City Mgr. James Watson said the industrial division of his city's Chamber of Commerce is considering a transportation study for industry which needs a system to bring in labor from Chicago.

"THERE IS ALSO a need for inter-city transportation between homeowners and shopping centers but how extensive that demand is, we don't know," Watson said.

Schaumburg Public Works Director Edwin Denman said his village would finance its participation in the transportation through motor fuel tax funds, subject to the approval of the Illinois Division of Highways.

Des Plaines Aldermen Corvin Wagner and Bob Hinde said their city is thinking of setting up a transportation committee. Wagner said Des Plaines has a tremendous parking problem, with 25 per cent of vehicles coming from out of town.

Barrington Hills Village Engineer William Renshaw admitted his community creates a traffic problem for Barrington but said his local board feels it has no transportation problem of its own.

About 300 persons are expected to attend Saturday an all-day conference on establishing nature trails in urban areas.

Sponsored by the Open Lands Project and the Council of Governments of Cook County (COG), the "Trails in an Urban Setting" conference will be at the University of Illinois Chicago Circle Campus.

Stuart P. Davey, division chief for resource area studies, Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, U. S. Department of the Interior, will be luncheon speaker. Davey is to discuss federal legislation for the creation of a nationwide system of hiking trails.

Inquires about the conference may be made by calling the Open Lands Project in Chicago. The session is open to the public but advance registration is necessary.

GUNNAR PETERSON, executive director of the Open Lands Project, said the conference grew out of recognition that trails offer important recreational opportunities in and near urban areas.

"We already have seen the success of the 27-mile Illinois Prairie Path in DuPage County and the Green Bay trail north of Chicago, both of which have been developed along abandoned railroad right-of-ways," Peterson said.

"A similar development is being sought along the Fox River east of Chicago with enthusiastic local support."

Peterson said federal legislation has called for a nationwide system of trails, but these are intended for the most part, to be large trails, such as the Appalachian, the Rocky Mountain and the Lewis and Clark.

In Cook County, the planning and recreation committee of the COG is hoping to establish a countywide system of trails, linking local parks with forest preserve districts with the help of a Commonwealth Edison Co. right-of-way. The council's project is being looked to as a national model for similar ventures in other metropolitan areas.

Good News for Small Property Owners

by P. J. CULLERTON
Cook County Assessor
(Last of a series)

While I would not want to go so far as to predict that real estate taxes will drop, I can report some encouraging news for the small property owner in this last article of my series.

First as the result of the Cullerton bill passed by the 1969 session of the General Assembly a tremendous amount of property owned by churches hospitals and schools which had never before yielded a tax now will contribute its fair share to the cost of government.

The law, which took effect Jan. 1, provides that tenants whose owners enjoy tax exempt status (schools churches, hospitals etc will be billed by the state for an amount equal to the real estate tax if the property were on the tax rolls.

Thus a tenant cannot hide behind the tax exemption of the property's owner. Nor can private corporations get institutions enjoying tax exempt status to buy land and erect a building and then lease the structure to the private corporation to avoid taxes.

THE LAW WAS proposed when numerous instances were discovered in which so-called charitable institutions were erecting buildings for the use of private concerns for the sole purpose of by-passing taxes.

In one case the land and building erected under such an arrangement was valued at over $800,000 and would have yielded a tax of about $85,000. In another example an institution put up seven buildings costing over $2 million and representing about $200,000 in taxes.

Now the practice is outlawed. It is not possible to determine at this time how much additional revenue will accrue to the county as a result of this law, but it will be considerable.

The elderly will benefit from the homestead exemption passed by the legislature last year which grants a $1,500 exemption of the equalized value to property owners 65 years or older. The exemption applies to sole or joint owners of property in which they are residing.

TO OBTAIN THE advantage of this exemption property owners must file a form with the assessor's office. The exemption will not appear on the bill that will go out shortly as it did not take effect until 1970. It is expected that the exemption will mean about a $100 allowance in tax money for the average property owner 65 years or older.

Everyone will benefit from a reduction in the personal property tax which removes one automobile and household furniture from the tax rolls of every taxpayer. Here again it is reminded that this exemption will not be reflected on the tax bill received this year, which is actually for 1969 taxes.

In concluding this series, I would urge that every taxpayer makes sure the bill he receives is accurate. This can be done by checking the figures on the bill, making certain that they refer to his property and that the computations are accurate. Since most of the work is done by electronic machines, mistakes rarely occur, but for his own satisfactino the taxpayer should check all figures.

Second, a taxpayer has every right to assure himself that his property is evaluated at the same level as that of his neighbor. If he feels this is not the case, he will benefit both himself and the assessor by making his feelings known.

IT CAN BE appreciated that the opportunity for omission or error is very great in a county as large as Cook containing over 1,200,000 parcels of real estate. The assessor welcomes this opportunity to correct his records. It is one of the important sources of information relied upon to keep record cards accurate and up to date.

The place to start in making such an inquiry is the public information division of the assessor's office located in Room 312 of the County building.

An appeal also may be lodged with the board of appeals, which publishes a notice in the newspapers as to the dates when it will hear complaints. This occurs after the assessor has completed the assessment in a township and is usually four to ten months prior to receipt of the bill. The period for complaints covers about two weeks.

The board of appeals only considers complaints referring to factual errors in the determination of value. For example, a building that has been damaged by fire for which no depreciation has been shown or an apartment building with vacancies, which may entitle it to a lower assessment.

THE BOARD OF appeals does not have anything to do with the tax rate, the state equalization factor or the amount of your tax bill. It is concerned only with factual errors as explained above.

After the board of appeals has completed hearings on a township the rolls are returned to the assessor for the recording of any changes in valution ordered by the board. At this point the assessor's role in the taxation process is completed. No further changes can be made in the valuation of any parcel of property in the township.

After the assessment roll is completed it goes to the county clerk, who certifies it to the state department of revenue which examines the figures and issues the equalization factor. At the same time the county clerk gets the budget of each taxing body in the district.

The county clerk then divides the total valuation of property in each district — contained in the rolls delivered to him by the assessor — into the budget of each taxing body in the district.

The result of this calculation is the tax rate that will be charged against each parcel of property in the district to produce the revenue for each public body.

Thus, it is clear that if any of the assessment figures — or the budget requests — were changed after the county clerk received the figures the tax rate would be affected. The various branches of government would not receive revenue sufficient to meet their budgets and chaos would result.

It Isn't All Book-Learning Here...

by TOM WELLMAN

College education used to be limited to book-learning and exam-taking. Today, if you visit Harper College in Palatine, you'd find that community colleges regard education as a physical, participatory experience.

You would find students leaning over dental chairs and learning to become dental hygienists. You'd find them baking bread to become bakers. You'd find them learning physical and mental skills to gain a future job.

And, if you crossed Algonquin Roads and headed west you would find 35 students learning firsthand about social science at Little City, a 120-child center for the treatment of emotionally disturbed mentally retarded children.

This school year those Harper students enrolled in the social science program are working with the children at Little City.

JIM McDONOUGH OF Mount Prospect, a long-haired, soft spoken student who spends three hours a week at Little City, is such a student.

Others such as Judy Gray from Arlington Heights spends three hours a week at Little City, and works under the same conditions as McDonough.

The two students are involved in a practicum to observe and modify childhood behavior through behavioral conditioning. McDonough, a freshman, entered the program through an introductory social science course taught by Michael Ostrowski, an assistant professor in psychology. Miss Gray, a sophomore, entered the program through a course in the psychology of the exceptional child.

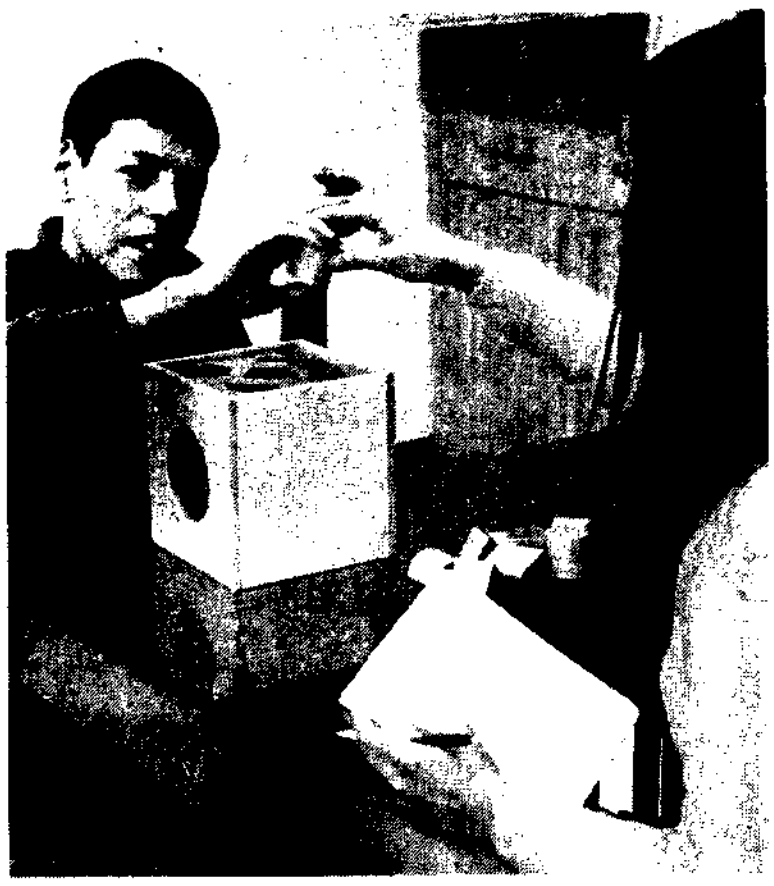
The two students follow a set of guidelines on what to do. For example, McDonough works with Mrs. Betty Baum, an educational therapist. He is taking "baseline data" on several children (that is, he is observing what they are doing at a particular time).

LATER, McDONOUGH will confer with Mrs. Baum and decide what behavior in the child should be changed. Then, he'll probably try to modify some act of behavior of the child through conditioning.

For example, Johnny attacks the children around him. McDonough may work with rewards to teach Johnny to control his aggressions. Little City's philosophy centers around conditioning children to change portions of their behavior.

But Little City is not built upon cold, indifferent conditioning. D. R. Becker, clinical psychologist and the frank, aggressive and friendly superintendent, stresses that much of Little City's achievement comes from a climate of love and understanding.

Becker is emphatic when he stresses that the program, as well as helping children, is a commentary on the Harper students. "Just because you have long hair doesn't mean you don't love people," he says.



CLARA BASCH, a Harper student from Mount Prospect, works with Wayne Meyer of Little City to help him develop eye and hand coordination. Clara is one of 35 Harper students involved in the social science program at Little City.

HE STRESSES THAT what is important is what is under the long hair. "The students are an indication that society is not as rotten as you'd think," he says.

McDonough and Miss Gray are also happy about the experimental practicum. McDonough is in the program to learn more about social work and because "it is one way I could help."

"It's really great to be included in the program," he says. Before he entered the program, he was afraid it might turn out to be only "busy work," but he finds that he's doing much of his work directly with the children.

Miss Gray says the program offers a big challenge and a chance of major accomplishment. She says that she looked at several different careers before entering Harper. At Illinois State College at Normal, she was in a similar program, but didn't get a chance to work with children.

SHE WAS AT FIRST interested in becoming a special education teacher. Now, she is more interested in Little City's program. She says that the other 33 students from Harper enjoy the participation, too.

She'll have to turn in a paper to Ostrowski before the course is over, and she has regular class work, as does McDonough.

And Mrs. Baum and Mrs. Kathryn Bush, an educational therapist, say they are satisfied with the student participation. They are both experienced veterans of working with mentally retarded, but educable children.

Mrs. Baum says the program has yielded "no traumas" for Little City. She says simply that the 33 students from Harper have "approached it professionally" — and that is a compliment.

BEST SELLING ORIGINAL

Throughout the World, an original Picasso is indeed a priceless treasure.

But in these parts, the No. 1 print in the home is the Paddock Publications "HERALD."

Every edition is an "original" . . . fresh, new, unmistakingly genuine . . . and created by masters of suburban journalism.

The HERALD carries only genuine news . . . all the facts . . . properly presented in a way that makes for good reading.

The "HERALD" does wonders for advertisers too, because readers go looking for buys and go buying where they're looking.

Put a local masterpiece in your home today . . . read the HERALD . . . a treasure of news, advertising . . . and local knowledge.

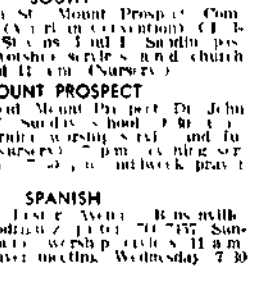
The Power of High Expectation



Do We Have A Choice?

"JOIN THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE,"

say some preachers. This expression is contrary to God's word. There are a number of things in Christianity about which there can be no difference of opinion. Paul names seven of them in EPH 4 4-5.

ONE BODY which is the ONE church. Eph 1 22. It is the Church of Christ. Rom 16 16. For he bought it. Matt 16 18 and purchased it with His blood. Acts 20 28. You have no more choice of churches to be a member of, than of God's to believe in.

ONE SPIRIT that dwells in the heart of every saved person. Rom 8 9.

There is ONE HOPE. The same hope is held before all men. It is heaven and an eternal life therein. John 14 3.

ONE LORD JESUS CHRIST. He only can save you.

ONE FAITH or system of doctrine that must be accepted, believed and followed. This faith is the Word of God which is able to save our souls. Jas 1 19. There is but one source of the ONE FAITH, the Bible. Romans 10 17. Hence there can not be different creeds and beliefs to choose between. We must accept the scripture as the only authority in Christianity.

ONE BAPTISM which is a burial in water. Rom 6 3 4. John 3 23. For the remission of sins. Acts 2 38. There being only one baptism, then we can not choose concerning sprinkling or pouring or holy ghost baptism.

ONE GOD. You must believe in Him as divinely.

Do we really have a choice? There is only one way to heaven. John 14 6. Our ONLY choice is to accept Christ and obey His commands, or refuse Him, thus choosing hell.

Visit the CHURCH OF CHRIST near you. There you can worship GOD as IT IS WRITTEN IN THE HOLY BIBLE.

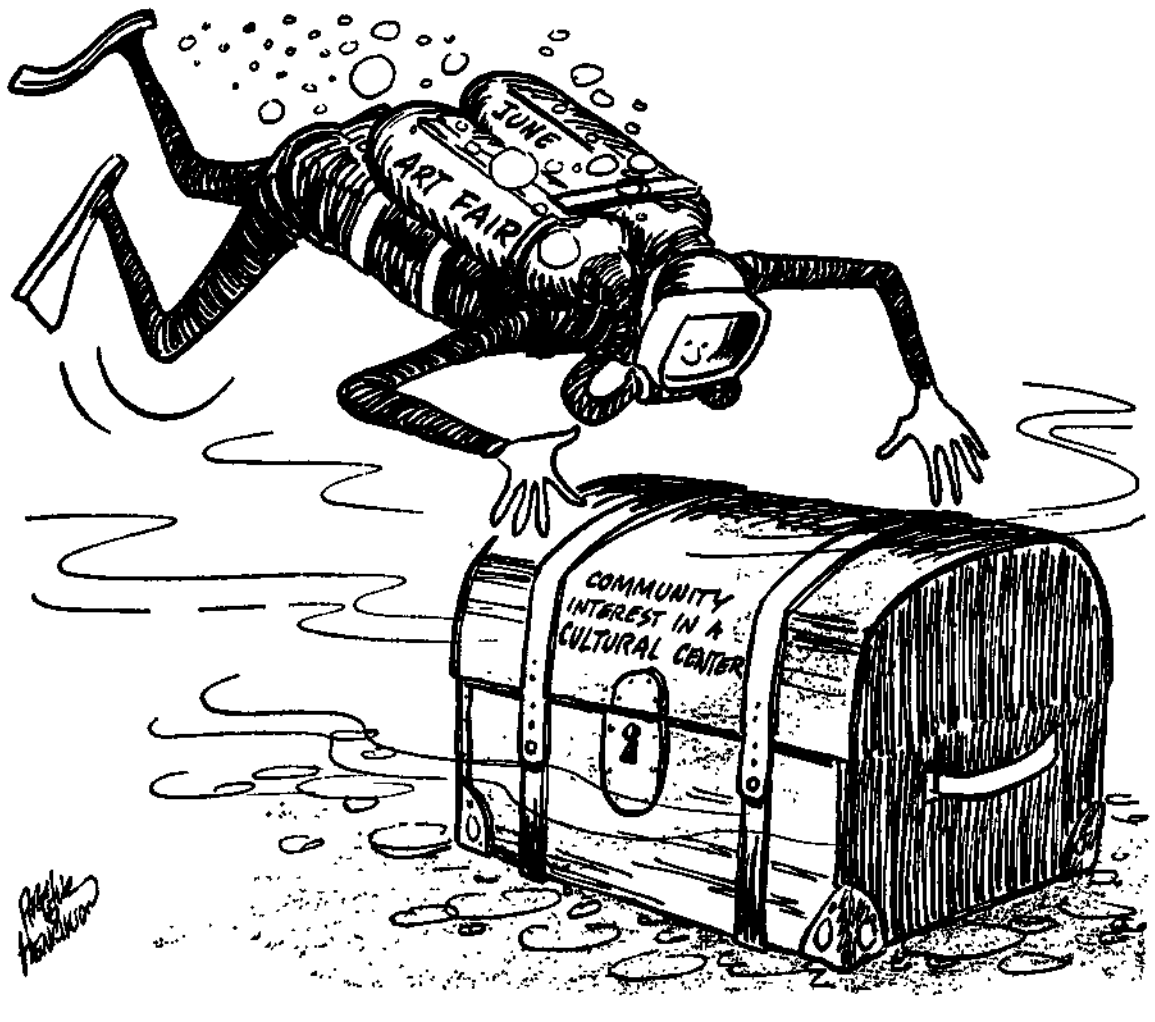
See if There's Anything in It



The Way We See It

A Good Beginning

Leadership by the new Arlington Heights Cultural Commission is providing a stimulus to cultural interest throughout the Northwest suburban community.

The commission has been aggressive and imaginative in pursuing its job of investigating the role and scope of a major cultural center in Arlington Heights. Its plans for a summer art fair will focus interest in art on the community from a wide area. The one-day show, under brightly striped tent, will be on the site of the pl ed cultural center in downtown Arlington Heights.

This event will spur interest, but more important it will give those planning a center a gauge of potential interest in the community and area.

The commission is exploring other cultural and performing arts centers, meeting with community groups and researching local needs through the services of a full-time staff member.

The commission's planning is a sound start and deserves a "thank you" from the community.

Housing Project Romance

by RICK FRIEDMAN

Low and moderate income housing have become a topic of study in our suburbs in recent months

Reading the pros and cons have reminded me of an experience I had in New York City some years ago

I was walking through the Lower East Side near Second Avenue when I heard this beautiful song cutting through the warm Spring air as a sad-lovely voice sang from up over my head somehwere:

YOU LOOKED so sharp and gay, my darlin'
In superintendent gray, my darlin'
The night they were playin'
The Lower Middle Income Housing Project Waltz.

"THAT'S LOVELY," I thought. Spotting an old man sitting on a bench, I asked him, "Sir, do you know where that sad-lovely song is coming from? And who is singing it?"

"Sure," he said, lighting his pipe. "That there sad-lovely voice you hear is coming from Apartment 10-D."

He pulled out his pocket watch. "She sings the same song every Tuesday night at this time about when everybody else in her apartment section is down having fun at the weekly dance. Been singing that ever since he got transferred."

"Who was HE?" I asked.

The old man paused to listen to the sad-lovely voice above us.

YOU CAME into the rec, my darlin'
A time clock around your neck, my darlin'

Rick Friedman

The night they were playin'
The Lower Middle Income Housing Project Waltz.

"He was the housing project supe'rintendent," the old man said. "They were madly in love, him and that young girl tenant in Apartment 10-D. Might even have gotten married someday. But the city upped and transferred him to a middle middle income housing project. He wasn't super of that other project more than two weeks when he married one of the female tenants there."

The old man paused again to listen.

OH, IT WAS planned recreation,
The lemonade bowl was my station,
At Tuesday night's D Section Dance
The Super and I found romance.

"We got our own Cinderella and Prince Charming stories up there in them lower middle income housing project apartments," the old man said. "And plenty of heartbreak, too. The girl never stopped loving him."

The old man and I sat on the housing project mail bench, staring up at the window of Apartment 10-D as that sad-lovely voice sang into the Spring night:

NOW, I WILL dance through life, my darlin'.
A super's lovin' wife, my darlin'
On nights they are playin'
The Lower Middle Income Housing Project Waltz.

The Political Beat

Rentschler: Just a Start

by CHARLES HUGNAGEL

Anyway you look at the results of the Republican primary Tuesday, the contention has to be made that there is a strong conservative trend running in GOP party affairs having less to do with political personalities than with tax raising and tax spending — and party control. It is a trend running anti-Ogilvie leadership and it cannot be mistaken.

As can be plainly seen now the William H. Rentschler candidacy for the U.S. Senate was attempted onthe belief that there was enough GOP dissent beneath the surface not only to warrant such a campaign but enough to make it successful. As it turned out the assessment was not quite correct vote-wise but it was necessary to make that test.

ONE HAS TO MAKE the surmise that Rentschler began the campaign on a shoestring and was operating not much beyond that at the end. His judgment was correct in appraising the primary campaign as picking up if he would pursue it vigorously (on the issue of anti-Ogilvieism) and stay the course.

The Ogilvie people threw everything in the organization book against him (including Spiro Agnew who came to Illinois to endorse Sen. Smith.) Even the President hastened to this state with concern for the polluted environment. All this in the midst of an Illinois GOP primary campaign that resents "outside interference."

Seldom has a Republican primary candidate running for a major office received the cold indifference and even disdain than didCandidate Rentschler. For some reason, certainly not his credentials or background, he was not fit to circulate in "recognized" Republican circles. He was anti-Ogilvie from the start. He refused to pull out of the race and this was political heresy.

But this Republican pariah in Illinois played some of his cards astutely and this brought him votes. He accepted these rebuffs and even turned them into assets. He pointed out that he had given his all as Nixon's Illinois chairman to win the state's 26 electoral votes which helpec put the GOP across in a presidential squeaker.

THIS TENDED TO take the sting out of Washington support for Smith and was the cue for the Ogilvie 1968 opposition to take up the campaign cudgels in his behalf. The fact is that the Rentschler support accumulated in the final two weeks of the primary.

The record shows that he ran ahead in big GOP counties such as Knox, Peoria, Winnebago and lost by an eyelash in the biggest of all-DuPage County. Here the difference was 1000 votes.

But in this DuPage County contest Governor Ogilvie saw his majority leader in the House defeated by the favored candidate of Elmer Hoffman, retiring anti-Ogilvie county chairman. Other races saw Hoffman backers successful.

So in assessing the Ogilvie victory with his candidate Sen. Ralph T. Smith some thought has to be given to deficits that took place along the way.

THESE DEFICITS (the anti-Ogilvie areas) that surfaced in this primary campaign represent major GOP vote strength. In terms of beating the Democrats, alias the Daley-Stevenson sworn unity, in November the question is how is it going to be brought to serve the wishes of the Governor.

Can he dictate the terms of any marriage of convenience to support his candidate Sen. Smith? Or will he have to make concessions to get that support? The conservative Republicans he has to deal with are hard bargainers. This will be interesting to watch.

Rentcchler with a certain charisma has shown that he has it by coming up the hard way. Therefore there might not be a willingness to come to terms. What about Rentschler confronting Ogilvie in 1972 for governor?

In a no-major-contest in their primary Democrats exhibited their punch in outvoting the GOP in nominating Adlai Stevenson to face Senator Smith in November. The Illinois Democrats served notice early that they had buried their divisive hatchet for 1970. The old maestro, Mayor Daley, has maneuvered public opinion in such a way as to indicate leadership, unity and vigor in the Illinois Democracy this year.

If Governor Ogilvie is going to do what he has threatened, to dismantle the Demos from top to bottom, this is the year of decision.

IN THIS MUCH celebrated contest to come, the Chicago mayor accomplished in a low voice what the GOP governor tried to do in a loud voiced primary. Daley put on his hat and went more than half way to quiet his party opposition. Did he assure success with this unexpected humility?

The Fence Post

Housing, Weinglass: Coverage Mislead

I have been present at two events within the past 60 days which were subsequently "reported" in the Herald, and in both instances the coverage has been, in my opinion, deliberately incomplete and inaccurate.

The first event was the city council meeting at which the fair housing ordinance was defeated.

YOUR COVERAGE of the council meeting completely ignored the wealth of remarks made by the mayor and various councilmen, any one of which would have given your readers some idea of the atmosphere that pervaded during consideration of the ordinance. The hostility, contempt and righteousness exhibited that evening never quite reached your readers. Your new reporter seemed much more interested in cultivating the city council than covering it.

The second event was the appearance of Leonard Weinglass.

The "Sings a Song of Sorrow" article was utterly irresponsible reporting. Not one quotation was accurate. Not one of the major arguments so thoroughly presented by Mr. Weinglass was reported. The very nature of his remarks was misrepresented. He did not "sing a song of oppression in American courts." He unequivocably endorsed the rule of law, taking exception to the process by which judges are selected. He also took exception to particular rulings of Julius Hoffman which prejudiced a reasonable opportunity for defense. Neither did he "sing a song of sorrow." Your reporter heard civility and labeled it contrition, probably because he expected fiery, outraged and outrageous rhetoric and was disappointed when he heard none. The last paragraph of quotes in the article was a hodgepodge of three sentences taken out of context, each spoken far removed from the others, completely unrelated.

MR. WEINGLASS spoke with humor, logic, conviction, and a quiet sense of indignation. The article was humorless, inaccurate, sarcastic and naive. It was "Dick and Jane journalism" at best, or intentional distortion at worst.

I also cannot believe that you could "find no room" to report his scheduled appearance in an edition which had to use satisfaction with garbage removal for a headline.

Now, the "Gas Chamber Rhetoric" article openly flaunts any sense of responsibility to readers. Mr. Skipper, may I ask a question or two of you? Why was that quote the only one reported? Why was Mr. Bonds' answer to the question not reported? Why only Mr. Valentine's response, which was his only remark? Mr. Bonds responded to dozens of questions, with civil, intelligent answers. Many of the questions were very interesting and pertinent.

The point is you missed the point completely. The Herald had the chance to report some of the dialogue which might have helped to "straighten out naive Whitey and do the cause some good," but reported instead only one sensational comment.

WHO BLEW IT, baby?

By the way, what perverse logic leads you to conclude that the Hampton question relates to the Kennedy assassinations? Are you suggesting that occasional political assassinations by police are as inevitable as assassinations from any other quarter? Now what was that about "teenie-bopper irresponsibility?"

In a community which has no need for a fair housing ordinance, but requires published and disseminated manifestos on the penalties for improper care and handling of garbage, perhaps the Herald is appropriate.

'No Benefit'

I am opposed to the so-called progress which would involve the annexation of 16 acres to the Village of Roselle and the construction of an apartment complex containing 252 units plus a swimming pool and recreation area to be used by the occupants of the apartments. I do not believe that the tax benefits derived from these apartments would cover the cost involved in increasing police and fire protection, public utilities, parking facilities, and traffic control which the increase in population would require. As a taxpayer of Roselle, I would be faced with an increase in my taxes. I fail to see any worthwhile benefits to be gained by the citizens of Roselle should the project be approved and the above increase in taxes become a reality.

Publicity Breeds Outrage

Your editorial of Tuesday, March 3 (As Outrage Breeds Outrage), surely bears out what it says, but not the way you see it. The more I studied it, the more I began to see the magnitude of ridicule being spewn on our public officials. It seems to me, if there is any one person or persons who should keep their jaws firmly closed, it should be the "Publicity 7" . . . and I mean "publicity" in every sense of the word

Weinglass and Kunstler seem to be doing a good deal of "jawin' " around the country and whenever they get through, mob rule follows. Is this what you want? Is this the ideology for our children and your children? There are a large number of us who are not as eloquent as you with words and are not in the position to bandy words with the intellectuals, but we read a lot and think a lot.

GEORGE WASHINGTON did not run around the country in ragged clothes and spit obscenities at the King of England. At the age of 21 he was commissioned Lt. Colonel; at 23 was appointed colonel and commander-in-chief of all Virginia militia. Can you say the same for any one of the "7"?

As for your steady stream of outrages, I have a few I would like to mention, (if I may open my jaws):

The outrage of the "Publicity 7" spewing filth and obscenity in our courts. The outrage of the North Viet Nam Delegation in Paris demanding "immediate release of these loudmouths," and at the same time suppressing the truth about our prisoners of war. The outrage of infamy brought upon the judicial court system. The outrage of referring to Judge Hoffman as a "vindictive old man." (This is very sad, as I had a mother of 72 who became a U. S. Citizen and cried when she took the oath of allegiance to the Flag.)

IN CONCLUSION please, let's not talk through both sides of our mouths. The "Publicity 7" have one goal: destroy the system. You know it, and I know it. All the antics of the trial are now on record. The noise and rabble of the last five months took me back through the ages to a similar scene from the Holy Bible:

"Release Barrabas," rose the cry of the mob.

Only today it is "Release the '7' ."

Loss of Quality

In the very near future, the village board of Roselle has a tremendous decision to make concerning the future of multi-family dwellings in Roselle, or retaining the beautiful country-like tranquility of single-family dwellings

I was raised in the country and moved to Chicago, only to find that I couldn't wait to move back to a smalltown. Now that I've lived here for five short, happy months, they want to build a city around me.

If the property south of Irving Park and east of the city limits gets zoned for apartment complexes, it is possible that other plans will start in other parts of Roselle and my family along with many other families will be looking for a new country village to live in while Roselle becomes a city.

She Cares

In answer to Mr. Friedman's article, "Political Oppression Evil Grows," it was asked . . . "Does anyone care?"

Yes, some of us do.

Having read the article about Sheriff Woods and the meeting with the Elk Grove Republican Organization, I feel compelled to respond.

I WAS ANGRY and frustrated to see an elected official and members of the Republican party acting in much the same manner as the "Conspiracy 7" they were ridiculing. That is calling names, laughing and applauding. The "7" were given contempt sentences for their antics. Was this not on the part of the members of the Republican organization present, contempt for the personhood of a fellow human being.

Concerning the sidewalk academy held at Forest View High School, I have read with great interest the accounts of what the speakers have said. The forums presented the opportunity to gain knowledge of many views. Those attending were not asked to follow any particular view, but just to listen and be exposed to such views.

FREEDOM of speech is one of our basic freedoms. Let us not through fear or ignorance lose any of our freedoms. To close our public institutions to such forums would be repressing a precious freedom.

Basketball's greatest show!

That's what they call the electrifying state finals in Illinois, and it's hard to dispute such lavish praise.

This is what every high school team dreams about: a spot in the Elite Eight, state-wide attention, a shot at the biggest prize in schoolboy sports in Illinois.

The giant project of attrition first reduced the field of over 700 starters to the fabled Sweet Sixteen, and now to the final eight.

They'll stage the 63rd edition of this basketball headliner at the monstrous mushroom, the University of Illinois Assembly Hall, and the excitement is building toward that dramatic windup Saturday evening.

It starts today with four games, and the pressure is tremendous.

These youngsters live in fear of the bad night . . . the early foul trouble . . . the layup that just won't fall. But even when you don't win, when you have that bad game, you learn something.

For the winners and the losers, it's an experience you never forget.

Entire student bodies and communities channel all their interest and enthusiasm in the direction of this sports spectacular, and gaily-decorated cars with horns blaring and banners waving have already begun the trip to Champaign-Urbana.

By noon today, the campus at the University of Illinois will be alive with excitement, the frenzy that annually accompanies this basketball extravaganza.

The uniqueness of the Illinois tournament series is that one tourney structure applies to all schools regardless of size. While many states have adopted a classification system which separates schools according to size and awards championship titles to winners in each class, Illinois permits all schools to vie for a single title as a true state champion.

When you get this far, you have the tools to take it all, bring home that precious first place hardware.

Could it be an Okawville with only 260 students or a LaGrange with 4,800? Or Effingham St. Anthony with 250 or East Moline with 3,100?

When you win the state tournament in Illinois, you know you've reached the highest ideal of hundreds of teams and coaches and thousands of players.

There's only one true state champion.

What team will reign as king of Illinois basketball? As a guide to help your watching of the state finals, we've talked to the coaches involved, carefully examined the season and tourney performances, and have come up with these brief scouting reports and some predictions.

Now, sit back and enjoy basketball's greatest show!

ST. ANTHONY VS. LA GRANGE
12:15 p.m. Friday

For a club that's lost only two games, St. Anthony of Effingham was cruising along in surprising obscurity until Tuesday night. Granted, the Bulldogs don't play that classy a schedule, but there isn't a higher scoring team in Illinois.

And then came Tuesday and that 85-79 overtime shocker over touted Collinsville and now everybody is asking, "Can they knock off another giant in LaGrange?"

Kickin' It Around

by BOB FRISK
Sports Editor

"Sure, there's a chance," says head coach John Keller. "We have one outstanding boy (All-Stater Mike Wenke) and four good ones. And, remember, they didn't think we could beat Collinsville either. We have the confidence now."

Wenke obviously is the key boy for this club that has averaged 89.9 points per game over the season, has topped 100 eight times, and once beat a club 121-29. Mike is a strong 6-7 workhorse who scores at 22.5 per game and also collars about 14 rebounds for each outing.

Wenke had 33 Tuesday in the win over Collinsville, can work well underneath or outside, hits 80 per cent from the line and 55 per cent from the field.

Everybody else on the team is capable of scoring indouble figures although 5-5 Billy Martin, an alternate starter at one guard, is primarily a go-go-go youngster who sparks the team just with his presence.

The biggest surprise for St. Anthony, a school of 280 students, is 6-1 forward Hank Stephens, who didn't even start on the jayvees last winter but who hit 25 in a sectional win over touted Lawrenceville.

Top-ranked LaGrange comes into the Elite Eight with a spotless record in 28 games, size and muscle underneath, and two excellent guards.

Head man Ron Nikcevich, who took over the Lions' job after several fine years at Riverside-Brookfield, has a well-meshed club that has been a slow starter in recent games but which has exploded in the closing minutes.

"The key expression that characterizes this team," says Nikcevich, "is togetherness and unity. I don't like to think of us as a bunch of individuals. Everyone contributes.

"That's what we've worked on since the beginning of the year. We had to undergo a period of adjustment, like any team would under a new coach, and I like to feel that we're reaching that point of consistency now."

LaGrange has an excellent big man in 6-8 Owen Brown, only a junior but already in his third year with the varsity. He scores at an 18.0 clip and is a strong rebounder and defensive player.

Complementing Brown beautifully is lightning-fast guard Marcus Washington, a 6-1 tricky, high-jumping senior who really likes to challenge his opponent. Scott Shaw, another 6-1 senior, teams with Washington to give LaGrange what many observers call the finest set of guards in the state.

If LaGrange has a weakness, it may be in the outside shooting game and the sometimes erratic play of the forwards.

THE BEST IN Sports
the AUTO MART

But they can kill a club on the boards, and that's how they took care of Sterling Tuesday.

FRISK'S PICK: St. Anthony has escaped two straight overtimes in getting this far, has the talented pivot man that is so important, but doesn't appear to have the backcourt strength or muscle underneath to upst LaGrange. We'll say the guards make the difference here as LaGrange advances, 68-61.

OKAWVILLE VS. JOLIET CENTRAL
1:45 p.m. Friday

"This town is going nuts," says ecstatic coach Dave Luechtefeld as he prepares his Okawville Rockets for their Elite Eight assignment.

"It's just unbelievable. Every place has been closed since the regionals started and that win over Mt. Vernon Tuesday . . . well . . . this is just fantastic, unbelievable."

State tourney fans have a couple Little Davids to cheer for in the 1970 finals, and Okawville certainly will draw tremendous support at the Assembly Hall.

The Rockets are gigantic under the basket, and that's why they've advanced this far. They go 6-5 at both forwards with 6-11, 235-pound Gail Wolff, an All-Stater, in the pivot.

The big boy has a great outside touch, can mix it up underneath, but must avoid foul trouble.

"Wolff is averaging about 24 points per game but could be averaging 35," says his coach. "But I have felt all year long that we have to go with the other kids."

Okawville, which clamps on a sticky man-to-man defense, is quicker than most people expect, and the junior forwards both average in double figures.

Wolff had 32 in the Super-Sectional win over Mt. Vernon, but the Rams' center only stood 6-2 and there still seems to be some question about the Rockets' ability to cope with a physical team.

Okawville has ousted a couple big names in Illinois basketball in Centralia and Mt. Vernon, and they kept Centralia from winning its 24th straight regional championship.

Joliet Central has come a long, long way for a club that wasn't expected to make a big splash until next winter.

"We're at our peak now," says their enthusiastic coach Dale Glenn. "I won't be surprised by anything that happens from here on. We've won a lot of our games in the second half this year because of our strong bench and good conditioning. When we beat Thornton, the boys executed perfectly."

Beating Thornton, as expected, has given the Steelmen exceptional confidence in their abilities and this is vital to a young club, a club that starts two juniors and a soph.

"At the start of the year," the coach continued, "we knew Jones (6-6 junior Jeff) could do the job and we knew Powell (6-3 Roger) was a phenomenal sophomore, but the other kids have really come through too."

Powell, the soph, has been sensational.

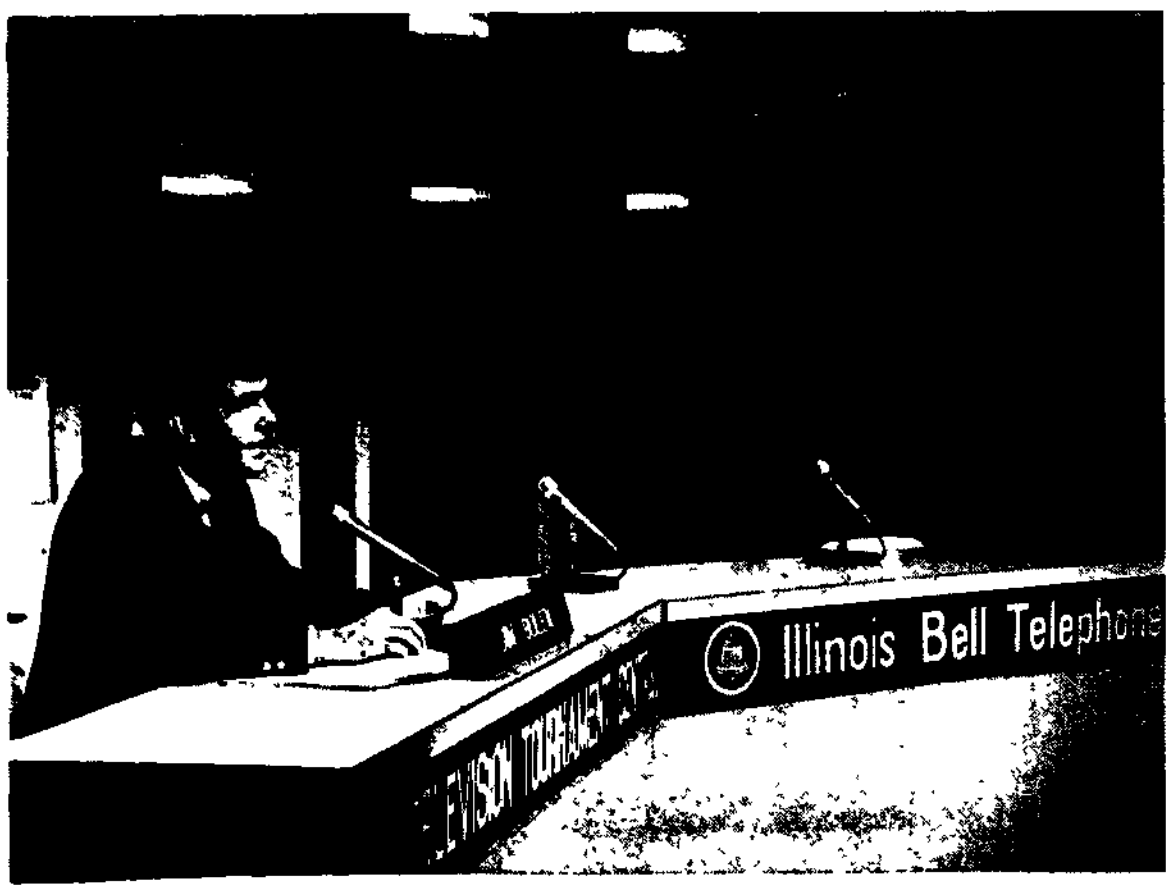
After Weeks of Preparation

Live and in Color . . . A TV Spectacular!



TOURNAMENT CENTRAL is the nerve-center of the television coverage of the Illinois high school basketball finals. An estimated 5 million viewers will watch the 1970 championship today and tomorrow.

by HERB CARL

It's January 1970, almost 10 weeks before state tournament time.

Harry Fitzhugh, Executive Secretary of the Illinois High School Association, is preparing to draw eight tiny wooden pellets from an old leather bottle to determine the pairings for the Elite Eight in the University of Illinois Assembly Hall.

This is also the signal for television men to go to work preparing one of the biggest events in our state's TV coverage. Ten weeks before tournament time, but lots of work to be done . . . commercials written and taped, interviews arranged, engineering planned, scripts written and edited.

To the sports fan, it's just a matter of reaching over and turning on the television set . . . there's the picture.

Sure, there must be a cameraman and a play-by-play announcer. Yes, maybe we'd better have an engineer too, just in case. So what's the big deal 10 weeks before tournament time?

Channel 9 (WGN-TV) sends a crew of 30 to Champaigne very year for the exciting state finals.

In addition, the advertising agency producing the show sends their own crew of 15.

Writers, producers, camera crews, directors, sound and video engineers converge on the University of Illinois campus Monday of tourney week.

TV trucks set up at the north end of the Assembly Hall are tied in via huge cables with facilities inside. The control room is actually built then and hopefully, by Friday morning they're ready to roll.

Ten weeks of detailed preparation now boils down to six days of concentrated hard work.

The 300-page production book covers all assignments in detail. Reams of cue cards are unpacked. Commercials have been carefully prepared on color videotape.

WGN-TV uses five color cameras for the tourney, including a 50-pound portable "back-pack" unit for candid shots of cheerleaders and spectators. All cameras feed their picture to the remote truck where Director Jack Jacobsen decides which one will go out to viewers.

Tournament Central is the nerve-center of the TV show. A bare concrete room on the lower level of the Assembly Hall bristled with activity.

There's even a makeup man for on-camera appearances of announcers and guests. Rick Hawley of the N.W. Ayer & Son Advertising Agency has served as Executive Producer of the tournament telecasts since the games were first televised.

Jack Drees, well-known sportscaster, is back doing the play-by-play after an absence of two years. This will be Drees' 16th year as state tourney sportcaster, and he was at the microphone for the first television coverage of a state tourney, Hebron's dramatic climb to the title.

Lou Boudreau of WGN, recently elected to the Hall of Fame in baseball, who played in three straight Illinois basketball title games as a prep at Thornton of Harvey, will work with Drees. In addition, there will be several veterans of tournament telecasts on hand to assist in the coverage.

WGN's Jack Rosenberg feeds names and game statistics into a new $20,000 gadget that prints out a superimposed message moving across the bottom of your TV screen. The devise also has a memory bank and will hold 11,000 separate items for play-back at the push of a button.

Assistant directors, producers, and stage managers always seem to be moving about, giving hand signals, whispered messages and sometimes slightly worried or pleased expressions.

In 1952 Illinois became the first state to televise its state basketball tournament. Several states, including Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota and Iowa have copies the Illinois program in recent years.

The two-day Illinois telecast has grown frm a $15,000 operation to a $200,000 bonanza and is still growing. This year, for the first time, the IHSA permitted local TV stations to cover first round games at some Super-Sectionals, and the opening games in Champaign also will be televised around the state.

This year 11 TV stations in Illinois will carry the Assembly Hall games live to an estimated 5 million viewers. Illinois Bell Telephone Co. is sponsoring the telecast for the 19th straight year.

But it didn't just happen.

Dozens of professionals worked for more than 10 weeks to give you the picture. So, go ahead fans, turn on your TV set and enjoy the tournament!

It's always quite a show.

A WIN FOR BEN. Elk Grove's Bennie Fernandez shows off an L-lever, one of the moves that helped him gain the highest rating of any performer in any event during the finals of the state gymnastics meet at Prospect last Saturday night. The 8.95 average netted him the Illinois prep still rings championship. (Photo by Mike Seeling)

Stanley Takes Boylan Position

ROCKFORD, Ill. UPI — Dolph Stanley, head basketball coach at Auburn High Scool since 1960, has accepted a similar post at Boyan Central Catholic High School, it was announced today.

Stanley, whose teams compiled a 10-year record of 161 wins and 93 losses, was forced to make the switch because he reached his 65th birthday in January, the compulsory retirement age in Rockford's public school system.

Stanley's coaching career began in 1930 at Equality High School. He also coached basketball teams at Mount Pulaski High Schoot and later at Taylorville where his 1944 team became the first to win the state basketball champhionship with an unbeaten record 45-0.

As basketball coach at Beloit College, he took his squad to the National Invitation Tournament in 1949. In 1957 he accepted a post as athletic director at Drake University, and in 1960 became Auburn's coach.

Stanley's lifetime coaching record is 792-231.

Nine Area Pupils Receive Honors

Nine area students have been honored for academic achievement during the first semester at Rockford College.

Three were named "distinguished scholars" with a 3.75 out of a possible 4.0 average. They are Susan Becton of 507 W. Palatine Road, Arlington Heights, a sophomore; Steward Shepherd of 1120 E. Patten Drive, Palatine, a senior; and Ernie Troutman of 2305 Oak Lane, Rolling Meadows, a junior.

Named to the dean's list with a minimum 3.25 average are James Curtis of 200 N. William St., Mount Prospect, a senior; Christine Ebert of 616 Hawk Lane, Palatine, a freshman; Patricia Hayward of 1532 N. Belmont, Arlington Heights, a freshman; John Macior of 2502 Central Road, Rolling Meadows, a sophomore; Denise Mayer of 1347 Carlisle Ave., Elk Grove Village, a freshman; and Pamela Von Wiegand of 415 E. Lincoln, Mount Prospect, a senior.

It's a Tough Life

Harry Heilman, a Hall of Famer, probably wondered what a guy had to do to hold on to a starting job. Heilman batted .344 for the Detroit Tigers in 1929 and that winter was released on waivers.

Traveling Man

Rogers Hornsby was Grade 'a' trade bait in the 1920's. In 1926 he hit .317 for the Cardinals and was traded to the Giants. He hit .361 for the Giants in 1927 and was traded to the Braves. He hit .387 for the Braves in 1928 and was traded to the Cubs. He hit .380 for the Cubs in 1929.

Pirates Capture Triangular Meet

Palatine took first place in five events and nabbed five seconds as the Pirates defeated Glenbard North and Wheaton North in a triangular indoor track meet at Glenbard North.

Palatine scored 59 points, Glenbard North 44 and Wheaton North 35.

Fred Miller won the two-mile in 10:02.3, Guy Zajonc took the pole vault at 12-6, Henry Schniepp was first in the shot put with a throw of 46-6, Reed Jacobsen won the mile in 4:38 and Tom Patch, Ed Meyer, J. Dubiago and Schniepp combined to win the four-lap relay.

Meyer was second in the pole vault, Patch was runnerup in the 50-yard dash, Joe Camp took second in the 880, Charley Phillips was second in the 400 and Paul Davenport finished second behind Jacobsen in the mile.

Pitt Wins Three Events

A cinder-style hat trick paced Wheeling to a second place showing in a triangular indoor track meet hosted by the Wildcats Tuesday.

Basketball standout Jon Pitt chalked up blue ribbon performances in the high jump, long jump and pole vault to head up the 'Cat attack. Niles North still edged the home team 57-51 while a New Trier West contingent placed a distant third at 22.

Pitt went 19-10 in the long jump, 5-8 in the high jump and vaulted 10 feet. In the meantime teammate Sam Romano established a new school indoor shot put mark with a 47-5½ thrust worth another blue ribbon.

Gary Hildebrandt captured Wheeling's only other first of the afternoon, clicking off the two-mile course at 2:03.5.

Pulling in second for the 'Cats were Frank Savage in the two-mile runoff and Joel Olson in both hurdles races. Wheeling's four-and 12-lap relay units also both carded seconds.

Coach Jerry Parson's club turned the tables on the Viking in the frosh-soph phase of the gathering, nudging them 47-44 while the Cowboys again placed third at 43.

Fremd Falls at Maine South Oval

Maine South was billed as a strong indoor track team and the Hawks lived up to their advance advertising

They hosted the Vikings of Fremd and easily defeated them, 75-37, Wednesday afternoon.

Coach Pat Brogan's boys could record just four first places against the Central Suburban League powerhouse — Wally Spiniolas in the two-mile (9:44.6), Mike Menick in the 50-yard dash (5.5), Bill Jarocki in the half-mile (2:01.3) and the mile relay (3:38.9). The latter was made up of Bill Jarocki, Jim Jarocki, Mike Pitchell and Mike Menick.

Taking seconds for Fremd were Dan Pittenger in the mile (4:34) and Chuck McGuinn in the pole vault (12-0).

Posting thirds were Chuck Porter in the two-mile (10:02), Jon Hodge in the 50-yard high hurdles (6.9), Steve Bruce in the 50-yard dash (5.8), Jim Jarocki in the half-mile (2:04.7), Menick in the 400-yard dash (54.4), Hodge in the low hurdles (6.5), Dan O'Brien in the long jump (19-1) and Rick Gaare in the shot put (45-10)

The Fremd sophomore team also fell by the wayside before South, 73-54.

The Vikings travel to the Blue Demon Relays at Maine East on Saturday with the first events beginning at noon.

At Beverly Lanes

Winkelman's picked up one game on first place in the Arlington Heights Women Keglers League by taking two games from Persin & Robbin with a 2122 series . . . Doll Beebe continues to bowl well and led her team with a 478 series while Tom LaBant had a nice 454 . . . For Persin & Robbin, Jan Andrich bowled a 509 and Barbara Obst had a big 536 with a 212 game. Both teams had 800 games . . . Landwehr's Television upset Beauty Bar by two games with excellent bowling by Helen Moore. She had a 541 series and a 201 game . . . Lou Dohe also bowled well over her average with a nice 464 while Dot Geisler chipped in with a 450 . . . Arlington Furniture, with the help of Evie Japp's 562 series and a 235 game took three from Sele Floor . . . Ann Sele had a 504 series and Joan Hunsberger had a 508 . . . Doris Engle had a 496 to help her Doretti Pharmacy team take two from Sullivan Pontiac.

Hersey Trackmen Falter

Hersey thinclads arrived a few days early for the Blue Demon relays and tackled Maine East in a dual as a tuneup Tuesday.

The hosts responded by turning back the Huskies 69-40.

Gary Gardell, Skip Peterson and Gary Swanson were the only individuals who made it to the winner's circle for the visitors. Gardell got off a 45-0 shot put and Swanson a 12-0 pole vault while Peterson swept over the low hurdles in an even six seconds.

Leon Zasadny backed up Swanson with a 12-foot vault of his own to nail down a second and Kieffer trailed Peterson into the third spot in the low hurdles race. Other Hersey point getters included Greg Gawlik with a third in the mile, Gordon Halcrow with a second in the highs and third in the long jump, Ed Reiger with a third in the 880, Tom Gehr with a second in the quarter and Keiffer again with a third in the high hurdles.

The Demons captured the 12-lap relay after a Huskie quartet of Peterson, Keiffer, Scott Davis and Chris Kelsey had raced to victory in the four-lap affair.

Maine also captured the frosh-soph portion of the clash, 59-50.

Forest View Honors Varsity

The Forest View athletic program awarded 37 varsity letters recently at the winter awards banquet.

Basketball naturally led the list with 14 monograms:

Ed Bansfield, George Bauer, Pete Cavallaro, Mark Ennes, Dave Long, Don Martin, Wayne Meier, Fred Lelone, Rich Olson, Keith Phillips, Greg Shevell, Gary Werner and managers Chris Conley and Bill Oberhardt.

Wrestling awards numbered eight:

Mark Bowe, Bruce Brod, Tom Moore, Mike Pirron, Don Reid, Greg Swanson, John Walker and manager George Poman.

Gymnastics tied wrestling in number of letters awards:

Robert Berglund, Jeffrey Brown, Joseph Conroy, Mike Conte, Norman Olsen, Bruce Pierce, Mike Sullivan and Donald Tosby.

The swimmers were just one behind with seven letter winners:

Mark Bailey, Jim Johnson, Pete Lenkeit, John Mate, Scott Patience, Norb Polacek and Fred Westdale.

Tomorrow Is Big Day For Harper College

by TOM WELLMAN

Tomorrow the voting-age registered citizens of the Harper College district will decide how much money the three-year-old community college can count on in the next several years.

Residents will act to approve or reject an 11-cent increase in the education fund tax rate and a six-cent hike in the building (maintenance) fund tax rate.

Polling places will be open from noon to 7 p.m. Saturday at 43 different locations, mostly schools, throughout the four-township area of Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Palatine, as well as in parts of the cities of Des Plaines, Barrington and Carpentersville.

The vote totals from the polling places will be brought into the business office of the community college, located at the intersection of Algonquin and Roselle roads in Palatine, to be recorded.

AND NO ONE at the college is overly optimistic about passage of both tax hikes

Various college officials have pointed out a lack of positive interest from the community about the referendum. A series of public appearances by officials has been held to explain the referendum, but a large outpouring of vocal public support has not materialized.

Polling places for Harper College referendum are on Page 3.

However, there is no apparent organized opposition at this time, either. The Herald has received perhaps three or four calls objecting to the referendum

College officials and outside observers believe a recent series of Sunday open houses may aid passage tremendously. The six open houses drew more than 3,000 persons to the campus to take guided tours and to see a film strip on the college's achievements.

But it's the lack of public response that bothers college officials. They have watched as a McHenry County referendum for a junior college was defeated recently and as a $105 million sewer bond referendum in DuPage referendum was decisively rejected this week.

THEY ARE concerned, too, that area taxpayers will be feeling the squeeze of inflation too much to vote additional funds for the college. They feel the recent success of candidates on anti-inflation platforms may be a bad sign.

They also fear voter apathy, and there is an old maxim that a small turnout means that only the "no" voters have turned out.

If the two tax hikes are defeated, it won't be the last chance to raise the tax rate. The college could go for another try for the tax rate this fall. However, they would prefer passage Saturday.

At stake in the referendum vote is not only the financial future of Harper College but also possibly the reelection chances of two incumbent board members and three independent candidates. Another person, active in the pro-referendum campaign, will file for the Harper board this afternoon.

College officials and others interested in the referendum's success are, understandably, walking around on eggshells. They are encouraging registered students over 21 to vote and carefully watching to see that Harper's best foot goes forward prior to the election.

HARPER OFFICIALS and others have several primary arguments for the referendum. First, they point out that the college's growth to approximately 5,000 students in three years of operation has outstripped an enrollment projection by a consulting firm of 3,000 this year and INTERIOR SECTIONS of Schaumburg High School like this one have served to shelter from wintry weather the 150 to 180 men who have been on the job daily since construction began in 1969. Although it looks as if workmen are still faced with much to do, officials expect the new school to open in September 1971. Special features of the school include large-group instruction areas and a centralized science laboratory material preparation area.

Candidates: Today Is It

Today at 4 p.m. is the deadline for candidates to file for the Dist. 54 school board election April 11.

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 voters will fill three board terms of 3 years and a 1-year term in April's balloting.

Candidate petitions must be submitted with 50 signaures at the Dist. 54 administration center, 804 W. Bode Road.

So far, five township residents have filed for the three full terms up for election, and two candidates have filed for the one year term.

Listed in their ballot order, the five candidates to date for 3-year terms are: Gerald Lewin, an incumbent, 613 S. Springinsguth Road, Schaumburg; Donnie Rudd, 213 Flagstaff Lane, Hoffman Estates; Raymond F. Wehrs Jr., 110 S. Lela Lane, Schaumburg; Daniel A. Netzel, 404 W. Hickory Lane, Schaumburg; and Mrs. Mychalene Mandel, 1921 W. Schaumburg Road, Schaumburg.

TWO CANDIDATES have filed for the one year board term so far. They are: Mrs. Connie Schoeld, 674 Parkview Lane, Hoffman Estates; and Bruce S. Campbell, 662 Parkview Lane, Hoffman Estates.

Present board members whose terms expire in April are: Edward Bedard, school board president; Elmer Linden, Mrs. Eleanor Thorsen, and Gerald Lewin.

Although Mrs. Thorsen took out a candidate petition for the April 11 and school race, she has not yet filed to be on the ballot. March 24 is the last day that candidates can withdraw from the race and remove their names from the ballot.

Mrs. Virginia Hayter, a former board member and board president, also took out a candidate petition for the Dist. 54 race, and she will apparently decide whether to file before the deadline today Mrs. Hayter is presently a village trustee in Hoffman Estates.

"I WANT TO see who make application for candidacy for the school board," she explained.

All of the Dist. 54 school board candidates have been invited to appear at a "Candidates Night" program sponsored by the Schaumburg Area PTA Council 8 p.m. April 8 in Jane Addams Junior High in Schaumburg.

Dissent...And Our Society

by MARY REIFSCHNEIDER

"What pain is to the body, dissent is to the body politic." Jay Miller, executive director of the Illinois division of the American Civil Liberties Union, said Wednesday.

Miller spoke at the Beth Tikvah Temple Men's Club in Hoffman Estates on civil liberties, moral law and dissent.

Discussing civil disorder, demonstrations and riots, led by minorities and the new left, which have become increasingly frequent in this country, Miller said: "Dissent reflects problems in society."

Government reacts to civil disorder and dissent in two ways: It finds the underlying problem and creates order or it suppresses the disorder. "Historically societies suppress the disorder," Miller said.

DURING LYDON Johnson's administration, the federal government tried both ways, but "since then there's been a unanimity in government that points to suppression," he said.

Congressional reaction to dissent is reflected in the 1968 anti-riot act that the Conspiracy 8 defendants were indicted under. The present attorney general "proposes almost weekly a new law that would violate constitutional rights," Miller said.

Laws that would permit arresting and holding persons on a "suspicion" without making an actual charge "are anger creating and humiliating situations," too often used against minorities by police, he said.

The situation often leads to a more serious charge and police brutality, he said

"NEARLY EVERY riot in this country started with an incident between a policeman and a private citizen. But it would be stupid to think or charge police with causing riots Underlying social problems are the cause," Miller said.

The country not only has suppression to contend with now, but also polarization, the speaker said. The polarization ratio now is 80-20, with "80 per cent wanting dissenters silenced," Miller said.

In talking about the Conspiracy trial, Miller said the "demonstrators who came to Chicago (for the 1968 political convention) were never permitted their constitutional rights."

The 1968 law making it illegal to cross state lines to incite a riot, for which the Conspiracy 8 defendants were tried, is considered unconstitutional by the ACLU.

Miller said inciting refers to speech, a guaranteed right in the First Amendment.

"THOSE OF us who believe and work FASCISM STARTED with Hitler and Trial," he said.

The trial didn't deal with the problems. "The judge and prosecutors were so unfair, that the trial was a caricature of what society is about," he said.

Referring to the defendants, Miller said, "Maybe you don't like them, but defending their rights is what constitutional democracy is about."

If the defendants had gone to the court room shaved and with prestigious attorneys, they probably would have been acquitted, Miller said.

The government hasn't learned much from the trial, he added. "To them, the only mistake was allowing the defendants to speak to the press."

He agreed that a real danger arising from civil disorders caused by the new left (Students for a Democratic Society Weatherman faction, etc.) is government suppression that finally cause the silent majority to rise-up.
within the system, lost in the Conspiracy Mussolini being elected, he said.

"Those who want to see constitutional democracy continue, must deal with the underlying problems," Miller said. The present system is still viable, he said pointing to examples of conclusions reached in the establishment oriented Eisenhower and Kerner reports that social problems cause riots.

He had a bright note on today's youth. "For the first time since 1776, we're raising a generation that understands and is committed to constitutional rights," he said.

Miller has been the Illinois ACLU director since 1965.

He previously served as director of the Peace Education Program of the American Friends Service Committee in Illinois and Wisconsin. He has worked closely with the civil rights movement as a consultant and organizer.

Art Show Hit With Kids

"Strawberries and Marshmallows," the work of contemporary artist Sherry Vilas, is drawing the greatest attention from youngsters at the State Art Resources Traveler (mobile unit) located at Larkin High School, Elgin.

Through arrangements made by the art education department of Elgin School District U46, the art mobile will be in Elgin from now through March 22 and April 2-10.

The contemporary artisits represented present diverse form of original art from hard edge painting, charcoal and paint to base relief and sculpture.

Due to the size of the district the tour program is limited to fifth graders and to art students in the junior and senior high schools.

Progress On School Told

Builders, architects and High School Dist. 211 administrators seem to agree there is a very good chance Schaumburg High School will open in September 1971.

According to a progress report presented to the board earlier this month, work on the new school is slowly, but surely, being completed ahead of the scheduled time. Earlier, school officials did not expect Schaumburg to be ready for use until second semester next year

With 150 to 180 men on the job each day, the interior masonry on the first and second floors is nearly completed and men are working to finish exterior brick work on the gym, the east and west end of the building

INSIDE, ONE THIRD of the partitions are up in the basement, most of the walls on the first and second floors have been primed with paint, electricians are presently installing light fixtures, ceiling and frame work is more than 50 per cent complete, nearly all window frames have been installed, and all the stairways have been set in place.

With 800 students scheduled to attend the new school when it opens, Schaumburg will need at least the essential light, heat and water systems in order to operate, according to John O'Dell, administrative assistant.

Elgin YMCA Slates Instruction in Yoga

Yoga for beginners starts April 8 at the Elgin YMCA, 111 N. Channing St. The class will run for eight weeks from 7 to 8 p.m. in Room North A.

Mrs. Ceil Wormley of Streamwood will be the instructor. She will teach hatcha, which is yoga of physical well being.

"Yoga is an excellent way of relaxing and toning your body," Mrs. Wormley said. "The exercises will work on muscles and internal organs of the body and will help to improve the breathing and posture of those taking the course."

The class is open to both men and women 15 years of age and older.

Who Stole the Door?

Reports that a burglar or burglars removed the front door from its hinges at a house on Redwood Lane in Schaumburg was received Thursday by police from Mor-Well Builders.

The house is under construction and nothing was taken . . . except the door.

Estimated value of the natural stain wood door is $100.

Testimony Clouded at Zoning Hearing?

by PAT GERLACH

The credibility of testimony delivered by an "expert" witness appeared shadowed during cross-examination by attornies representing several local homeowners groups during a Hoffman Estates Zoning Board hearing observed by a group of more than 250 persons Wednesday night.

Involved is a proposed change in zoning from commercial to planned residential development for a 78-acre tract of land just north of the primarily undeveloped Howie-In-the-Hills subdivision.

Approval of the requested alteration in zoning would permit construction of a 1,352 unit apartment complex and convenience shopping center along Palatine Road.

The $25 million development would consist of 28-four story elevator buildings and would have an overall mix of 60 per cent one-bedroom units and 40 per cent two-bedroom apartments.

THIS WEEK Robert Haskins, an attorney representing the publicly undisclosed developer, presented Philip Zeitlin, a paid consultant and planning and zoning expert, who attested to the fact that the highest and best use of the land involved, in his opeinion, is the proposed apartment development.

In his experience as assistant commissioner of planning and zoning for the city of Chicago, Zeitlin, who holds a degree in architecture from Illinois Institute of Technology and a masters degree in city planning from Harvard University, said he has had extensive work to his credit to qualify him as an expert in these fields.

Although he has been primarily involved in Chicago zoning matters he has also served as a paid consultant to developers planning projects in Deerfield, Glenview, Rolling Meadows, Alsip, Waukegan and Orland Park.

ON QUESTIONING from Village Atty. Edward Hofert, Zeitlin admitted that his involvement in the Rolling Meadows project, known as Fairfax Village, was in excess of two years ago and he could not remember the location of the 20-acre townhouse complex.

Responding to questions from Hofert, Bill Weaver, a zoning board member, and several attornies representing homeowners, Zeitlin could not fully explain the reasoning which led him to make the highest and best usage judgment.

He said that this opinion was formulated, to a great degree, through information presented to him by others serving as witnesses in the hearings who were experts in other fields.

Zeitlin said that the rolling terrain of the land involved in this proposal gave it a character adaptable to multiple family zoning but could not give an opinion on other land surrounding the subject parcel which has similar contour.

WEAVER REPEATEDLY asked Zeitlin if, when engaged in the project by the petitioner, the consultant was given various choices to work from in making a decision regarding land use.

It was subsequently revealed that Zeitlin had been retained as a consultant by a petitioner, whose identity the planning expert says is unknown to him, to come to the conclusion attested to in this week's hearing.

After lengthly questioning of Zeitlin by attornies representing homeowners in Inverness and unincorporated areas of Barrington and Palatine townships which abut the land involved, Haskins asked Board Chairman Robert T. Valentino to rule on the cross-examination methods being used. Haskins claimed that Zeitlin was being ridiculed.

"I HAVE BEEN here for four hearings and I hope that I am welcome to come back a fifth or sixth time if necessary and be treated in a gentlemanly manner," he said, quickly adding, "and, maybe I'll be seeing you people in the courts."

Valentino asked that attornies and others questioning the witness confine their activities to questions pertinent to Zeitlin's testimony.

Hearings are attracting a large number of homeowners in the area of the development who do not wish to see the land developed as an apartment complex.

They also feel that there are potential water run-off problems as well as a possible water shortage.

Testimony is scheduled to continue at the next scheduled hearing which has been set for Wed., April 22 at 7:30 p.m. at Hoffman School.

'No Thank You,' Hoffman-Rosner

Thank you, but no, is what the Hoffman Estates Park District will tell Hoffman-Rosner on the developer's offer to give the district three unbuildable park sites.

The sites include two retention ponds, commonly called the Twin Lakes, and another expanse further west near the Northwest Tollway off Parkview Lane in the Highlands West subdivision.

At a recent meeting with Lowell A. Siff, senior vice president of Hoffman Rosner, park officials said the three sites would be taken if the developer installed flood lighting and a warming shed for the north lake, and planted trees around both the north and south lakes.

IN A LETTER to the park district, Siff said, "Beyond the contribution of the building and moving expenses, Hoffman-Rosner Corp. is unwilling to make additional improvements to those we are already committed to, i.e., overall finish grading and seeding of both sites."

Hoffman Rosner is willing to donate a former sales office that now sits at the Golf-Rose Shopping Center when new office quarters are completed, probably by June, 1971, according to Siff.

The park district, though would have to provide utility connections and a foundation.

"We are not willing to convey one or two of the three (of the unbuildable land) without the others," Siff said.

Commissioner George Seaver said the three sites are inaccessible to most village residents. The Twin Lakes are easily available only to homeowners whose property borders them.

"THIS IS NOT an attractive offer to the people of Hoffman Estates," Seaver said.

Commissioners agreed that Hoffman Rosner will be notified that the offer is "unacceptable." The village will also be informed that the district doesn't intend to accept the offer.

Residents living adjacent to the lakes were led to believe that the lakes would be developed into park sites, commissioners said.

"This is an unpopular move, but grass cutting is so costly and few residents could use these sites," Seaver said.

The sites all contain a great deal of peat, limiting their use.

District officials expect to hear from residents living near the sites, criticizing their actions.

Annual Music Festival Set at Conant Saturday

More than 1,700 young musicians will be participating in the eighth annual Dist. 54 Music Festival Saturday at the Conant High School gym beginning at 2 p.m.

Approximately 3,000 parents and friends are expected to attend the festival. There is no admission charge.

This year the Dist. 54 music festival is being divided into two parts, with the elementary pupils performing at 2 p.m. and the junior high segment of the program starting about 3 p.m.

A combined 6th grade chorus of about 800 pupils will perform during the 45-minute elementary program. In addition, the beginner band group, junior orchestra, and senior band group will also participate in the elementary program.

DURING THE junior high musical program, the Dist. 54 senior orchestra, combined junior high chorus, and combined junior high band will perform.

All of the musical groups performing Saturday afternoon will rehearse Saturday morning at Conant.

A flute trio featuring three girls from MacArthur Elementary School, Vallery Armistead, Holly Aspy, and Brenda Stansfield, will also be featured in the elementary program Saturday. The three 6th graders will perform the "Minuet for Orpheus."

The combined junior high band and chorus will perform "Hail, Land All Glorious" Saturday, while the combined intermediate band and sixth grade chorus will present "America the Beautiful."

The entire musical program will last about two hours.

Oops! One More Day

Around election time almost everybody is anxious to get things over with. But the Herald mistakenly tried to speed things up in Thursday's edition.

Those who have taken petitions out for the April 11 school elections in Dist. 211 have until 4 p.m. today to file, instead of yesterday as we reported.

Tax Collector Appeal Is Likely

Township tax collectors in Cook County bounced back fast from a Tuesday Illinois Supreme Court ruling abolishing their jobs and planned to file for a review of the high court's decision.

The petition for a re-hearing will be filed within the next 21 days, the time period before a Supreme Court decision becomes final. Joseph W. Smith, attorney with the Cook County States Attorney's Office representing tax collectors, said the rehearing request is normal procedure.

Larry Gunnels, attorney for the intervenors supporting the township tax collector's case, said he would file the petition jointly with the States Attorney's Office, probably today or Monday.

"The petition will point out reasons why we believe the decision of the court does not apply to facts in the case," Gunnels said.

SUPREME COURT judges will review their decision hopefully before April 14, the date of annual township meetings, Gunnels said.

The Supreme Court Tuesday ypheld a Dec. 2 ruling of Cook County Circuit Court which prohbitied suburban Cook County townships from retaining two per cent of tax collections. The courts also held all taxes are to be collected by the Cook County treasurer's office, thus eliminating the need for the office of township tax collector.

Smith said he had no idea if the rehearing could be resolved before the April 14 annual meetings of townships. Local townships have been awaiting the Supreme Court decision on their appealed case so the question of alternate financing could be decided April 14.

A REHEARING WILL keep open the questioned constitutional right of townships to keep commissions for operating expenses. Smith said attorneys for tax collectors will probably not present new arguments before the Supreme Court but would put greater emphasis on certain past testimony.

Kevin Forde, attorney filing the suit for plaintiffs, said the court decision on township commissions has brought about an efficient and fair system in tax collection. Though only part of the plaintiffs' case was ruled upon, Forde said his clients might not go back for hearings on other complaints.

In the original suit, Cook County Treasurer Edmund Kucharski was also named as a defendant since the county treasurer's office also keeps commissions. The county office keeps a commission of 1.5 per cent on all taxes levied by schools and one per cent on those levied by municipalities and special districts. These commissions go into the county general fund.

Forde said these commissions will be equitable since they will fall equally on Chicago and suburban residents. A complaint in the original case stated Chicago residents are penalized by the township excess fee system since no comparable commissions were kept for Chicago residents.

Tomorrow Big Day for Harper

that it has outstripped the tax base.

They point out that the growth means there is less taxable assessed valuation per student, so there is less revenue available. In effect, they point out Harper is too well filling an educational gap in the northwestern suburbs.

Also, they state that chargeback revenue — out-of-district tax money contributed by out-of-district students — will decline sharply this fall with the opening of the Niles-Maine Township community college.

William Mann, vice president of financial affairs, projects about $64,000 in chargeback revenue in 1971-72 The college this year gained more than $880,000 in chargeback revenue.

THE OVERRIDING argument for the referendum, of course, is that Harper College has produced a quality two-year educational program, and the additional tax funds will cover the anticipated losses during the next few years.

According to a fact book prepared by Mann, the college will face a $1 million deficit in the educational fund this coming academic year if the tax rate increase is not approved. In the building fund this year money has been transferred in from the education fund to cover a loss.

The loss will grow more severe in the coming years, said Mann, unless the tax hike is granted If the money is not available, the college may be forced to cut programs, close buildings, and generally reduce all but basic programs.

Dr. Robert Lahti, president of the college, has pointed out the full tax rate will have to be levied next year just to meet expenses, assuming the voters approve it

The principal argument against passage of the tax hike is, of course, financial Some voters feel another tax increase is one increase too many.

HARPER OFFICIALS argue that the increase, although it may sound large, is relatively small. Harper gets only 3 cents out of a tax dollar, and passage of the two fund increases would mean an additional $17 tax bill on a home assessed at $10,000.

Another argument is that Harper has not raised tuition enough It is argued that the college should have asked more than the present $8 per credit hour rate (using current projections, Harper could have set the rate at $10 or $12).

Harper officials counter that they couldn't project the number of students last fall, so they had to set the rate in advance (they can gain only one-third of expenses through tuition) and that they wanted low-tuition education. And they point out that their projections show a $10 tuition rate in 1971-72, while holding the rate steady this fall at $8.

Those are some of the basic arguments and, of course, there are others. Today, the Harper officials and interested citizens will relax momentarily then begin the vigil until the final results are posted on Mann's bulletin board.

A rejection by the voters would not mean that the college's buildings would be leveled and the college's 218-acre campus turned into Chicago's third airport. But action on the referendum will determine whether Harper continues to expand at its present rate.

Harper Polling Places

Voting on the Harper College referendum to raise the education and building (maintenance) fund tax rates a total of 17 cents will take place tomorrow from noon to 7 p.m.

Palace Gets Face Washed

LONDON UPI — thousands of tourist photographs show otherwise, but Buckingham palace is really cream colored.

The palace has been getting its face washed for the first time in decades. And as the layers of London grime are scoured off by British government workmen — lo and behold — the brown old palace isn't brown at all.

Choir To Sing Easter Cantata

John W. Peterson's Easter Cantata, "No Greater Love," will be presented by the 30-voice choir of Medinah Baptist Church at 7 p.m. Sunday.

The entire community has been invited to hear this presentation of Peterson's best known work which is a sweeping story of Christ's unparalleled love for mankind.

Peterson is widely known in the evangelical world for his outstanding composing and arranging of new works and grand old hymns of the church.

The Medinah Baptist Church choir is directed by Alan Henrickson. Soloists for this cantata will be Carol Few, Colin Few, Joan Calderone and James Weir.

The choir will appear for the first time in new robes and the 60-minute presentation will be made in candlelight.

The church is located on Foster Avenue at Sycamore Street in unincorporated Medinah. Foster Avenue can be reached from Medinah Road or Roselle-Bloomingdale Road.

'Invested Funds' Weren't: Redker

Tax Anticipation Warrants (TAWs) taken out by Hoffman Estates last November included $50,000 worth that were to be invested in order to pay interest on $25,000 worth put into the village's general fund.

When asked yesterday how much of the money was invested, Treasurer Elmer Redker said, "none."

"We haven't invested it because it has been needed right along," Redker said.

Trustee Bill Cowin was chairman of the village's finance committee at the time the TAWs were taken out.

Redker said Cowin recently asked him why the funds were never invested.

Redker answered he was never told the money was to be invested when he became treasurer in January replacing Mrs. Laura Reedy.

"WE'RE NOT in bad financial shape now, we're paying our bills regularly," Redker added.

TAWs are loans taken out on taxes to be received the following year. The current TAWs are due in June. The difference between funds remaining from the current TAWs will have to be paid from revenues the village will receive in June.

"I hope the village will not have to take out TAWs next year," Redker said.

"If we do take them out it will not be until late in the next fiscal year," he added

Cowin said the $50,000 was not invested because the village paid a couple of large bills sooner than intended.

"The board is working on a more current cash basis. We're not any worse off," he explained.

"I don't know that there is a better way. We're still recovering from financial problems from over a longer period," he added.

"YOU DON'T make corrections overnight that developed over so long a period," Cowin said.

"We're spending cautiously," he added.

Curiousity arose over village spendings when Trustee James Kopp, current finance committee chairman, Monday voted "no" on money approved for the police and streets departments.

Spendings have to be more carefully watched, Kopp maintained.

"Taxes (coming) will pay off the TAWs," Kopp said. "But what will be left?

"The general fund is what you have to watch. We lost ground because we had to pay bills from the previous administration, but we are catching up," Kopp said.

"The state income tax is helping," he added.

"ALL APPROPRIATIONS were given approval Monday. All I'm asking is that the board take a closer look. It's not that they're not good expenditures, but maybe they could be put off for six months," Kopp said.

Appropriations Kopp voted against Monday included $500 for the village's 10-man clean up force from Conant High School, and LEADS (Law Enforcement Agencies Data System).

Both items passed. The clean-up force will work the week of March 30. LEADS will be installed at the police department in three or four months for $68 plus a monthly fee of $97.50.

Other money items that passed included $2,000 for 115 copies of the village's master plan. The copies are needed so they can be recorded with the county and sold to interested developers.

A $6,500 expense for an audit of village books was also approved. It is to be done by Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co., Chicago.

Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission dues of $300 and Council of Government dues of $192 were other expenses.

Seniors Hear Homosexuality Talk

by JUDY COVELLI

As part of a sociology program for seniors at Elk Grove High School, six persons spoke on homosexuality Wednesday.

Speakers from several organizations have been invited to the class to acquaint the students with problems in society related to the class topics: dating, marriage, the family and human sexuality.

The speakers, members of the Gay Liberation and most of them university students in Chicago, are publicly acknowledged homosexuals

They were invited to speak, according to Joseph Wellman, team-teacher, to provide the students the opportunity to ask questions of a segment of people upon whom the public looks strangely.

"I WANTED them to find out that they at least don't have three arms," Wellman said. "I wanted to dispel some of the myths around the idea of homosexuality."

Wellman explained that the topic arose when the classes began discussing attitudes toward the opposite sex.

"Among other things, we discussed the "Playboy Philosophy" and the growing feminist movement," he said.

He and Mrs., Sue Kaineg, who teamteach the classes in sociology, stressed that only senior sociology students were presented the speeches and that background had been given on the topic.

One of the members of the Gay Liberation, which is a united brotherhood of homosexuals, explained, "We're not here to recruit people, but to show that we are human beings and want to be respected as such."

WELLMAN EXPLAINED that the speakers were approved by the administration, pointing out that when speakers of a somewhat controversial nature are wanted by instructors they must be cleared through the division heads, who this time received permission from the principal.

Representatives from the National Organization of Women (NOW), termed a moderate feminist organization by Mrs. Kaineg, spoke to the sociology classes recently.

"The students had a more hostile reaction to NOW," Mrs. Kaineg said.

Other speakers, such as representatives from Women's International Terrorist Conspiracy from Hell (WITCH) have also been invited. This is a radical women's rights group, Wellman said.

A PHYSICIAN has been requested to speak relative to another aspect of the class.

The members of the Gay Liberation, somewhat poised and at times quite humorous, explained how they lived, what they felt, and how they wish society would react toward them.

In brief, this is what some of the members of the Gay Liberation had to say.

Richard: a graduate student at the University of Chicago, "You don't know what it's like to walk around and know that society says that what you are feeling inside you is wrong. Because many homosexuals are oppressed, they develop a neurosis and can really become sick, although they weren't before."

Shelley: a taxicab driver who lives with a male homosexual, "There are no traditional guidelines for this kind of relationship. You make it what the two of you want it to be.

"THINK OF why you like someone. It's usually because that person is nice, or honest, or sincere, or pleasant to be with. It doesn't have to do with whether they are male or female."

Henry: "I have to accept myself as a valid human being. If I want to hold another guy's hand, I am free to do it. I have to deal with a society, though, that doesn't accept that view."

Sue, who spoke on women's liberation: "If a woman wants to go out and make it on her own, she'll have to go through a lot and probably won't make it.

"If a woman is 'gay' she doesn't have a man to rely on. She has to go out and make it on her own. She is oppressed, ignored and rejected by people."

She also pointed out that homosexuality has been accepted by many civilizations and that the need to reproduce, a tradition which necessitaged marriage, has lessened.

Only Two More HEAA Baseball Sign-ups

The two final registration periods for Hoffman Estates Athletic Association (HEAA) baseball leagues will be held tonight and tomorrow at Helen Keller Junior High School.

Registration will be taken tonight from 8 to 10 p.m. and tomorrow from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Boys and girls, 9 through 16 years of age are eligible for baseball teams provided they live within Hoffman Estates.

All fees, determined by specific leagues, are payable on registration and parents must accompany their children to registration.

HEAA president Dryle Rathman said youngsters will not be accepted for league play after registration closes Saturday.

For additional information contact Rathman at 894-6345.

The Theft Is All Over, Too

Construction equipment with a $3,000 estimated value was stolen from the Woodfield Mall site in Schaumburg.

Between Wednesday night and Thursday morning, hand saws, drills, radios, sanders and other equipment was taken from the Corrigan Construction Co. storage area at Woodfield, said Martin Conroy, Schaumburg Chief of Police.

"They have watchmen at the center, but not all over," Conroy said. "They will tighten up security all over."

The case is being investigated by Officer Fred Schmidt.

Obernkirchen Choir Will Perform Here

Two years ago the Obernkirchen Children's Choir from Germany performed in Carnegie Hall in New York and next fall the group will come to Wheeling for a performance.

The renowned group, who has sung for television viewers several times on the Ed Sullivan show, is coming here as part of a concert series sponsored by the Northwest Community Concert Association.

The 1970-71 concert series is the third sponsored by the association. Besides the Obernkirchen Children's Choir, the association has also booked the Lee Evans Trio, a pops music group, and Addiss and Crofut, a pair of folk and classical music singers. A fourth concert is scheduled but the performers have not yet been selected.

THE ASSOCIATION works with Columbia Artists of New York to bring the performers here explained Tom Shirley, principal of Wheeling High School and this year's association president. "Columbia Artists is a booking agent that secures performers for us."

Each spring, in advance of the next fall's concerts, the association holds a week-long membership drive in Buffalo Grove, Wheeling and Prospect Heights. "Most members of the association come from those three communities, but we have some from the surrounding areas too," he said.

This year's membership drive will begin Monday and end March 28. "We hope to have about 700 join this year," Shirley said. Memberships cost $10 each, and for that, the members receive tickets to all four concerts. Student-memberships are also available at $5 each.

"WE HAVE A membership drive only a week long, so that we know how much money we can spend on the concerts," explained Shirley. He said the association was expecting to have a budget this year of about $6,000.

"The acts have been selected by the association's executive committee and its board of directors," Shirley said. Sometime after the membership drive ends, the association will select the program for the fourth concert.

The acts are selected, said Shirley, "keeping community interests in mind. Among the most popular acts we've had was the Fiesta Mexicana, an Indian folk dancing group. Another was the Cleba-noff Strings, a pops orchestra similar to the Boston Pops."

Shirley said no exact dates for the concerts had been set as yet: "The first of the concerts will be held sometime next fall. They stretch into early spring. We try to hold them on various nights of the week."

THE ASSOCIATION got its start in 1968. It was one of the ideas suggested by TORCH (The Organization to Realize Community Hopes.) "A nucleus formed, and pretty soon we were ready to organize the association," said Shirley. The first year, about 500 joined the association. In its second year the association's membership list grew by about 100.

Shirley, who is one of the group's originators as well as its current president is a great believer in the concerts. "A community is known by what goes on in the area. When we have things like this, it can't help but enhance the area."

And he believes the concerts have been successful. "The community has accepted the concerts quite well. It has supported them better than I expected." As to why the series was successful he said, "It's because there's a need for this kind of entertainment in this area."

Variety Show Set At WHS

"It Happens Every Year" is coming.

The Wheeling High School Community Scholarship Foundation variety show will be presented at 8 p.m. tonight and tomorrow night in the WHS Little Theatre.

A variety of skits, songs and dances will be featured on the program, which will involve both community residents and WHS students.

Scholarsship foundation members hope to raise $2,000 this year to benefit graduating seniors at the high school.

Proceeds from the show's program booklet will be put into the scholarship foundation fund. So far $1,500 has been raised for this fund.

The WHS Community Scholarship Foundation was formed five years ago to raise money for deserving WHS students who wish to continue their education.

The foundation has awarded 31 scholarships to WHS graduates in the past five years.

Splitting Of Dist. 21 Is Proposed

Is School Dist. 21 too big?

At a meeting of village, park district and school district officials from Wheeling Wednesday the subject of splitting up the school district along village lines was proposed.

The suggestion came after a general discussion by government officials about the lack of cooperation between Wheeling and Buffalo Grove officials.

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill strongly opposed any such division of his district.

"It would not be in the best interest of the children of the district," Gill told the other officials. Gill said that any such division would be "legally impossible," because of state regulations.

He pointed out that the district has made all its future plans "on the basis of the area we now have." He also pointed out that any existing debt in the district would be the responsibility of all taxpayers now in the district even if the district were split.

"We might save a few bucks for taxpayers in Wheeling and wreck the education of their children," Gill warned.

Discussion ended after Gill pointed out to the Wheeling officials that if the district were split, the Arlington Industrial and Research Center would probably be annexed to School Dist. 25.

A DANCE ROUTINE by Marilyn Raedel, Wheeling High School senior and Illinois' Junior Miss, will be one of the highlights of "It Happens Every Year." The WHS Community Scholarship Foundation variety show will be presented tonight and tomorrow night in the WHS Little Theatre. Several other WHS students will be featured in the show, along with many local residents.

Tax Rehearing Request Planned

Township tax collectors in Cook County bounced back fast from a Tuesday Illinois Supreme Court ruling abolishing their jobs and planned Wednesday to file for a review of the high court's decision.

The petition for a re-hearing will be filed within the next 21 days, the time period before a Supreme Court decision becomes final. Joseph W. Smith, attorney with the Cook County States Attorney's Office representing tax collectors, said the rehearing request is normal procedure.

Larry Gunnels, attorney for the intervenors supporting the township tax collector's case, said he would file the petition jointly with the States Attorney's Office, probably today or Monday.

"THE PETITION will point out reasons why we believe the decision of the court does not apply to facts in the case," Gunnels said.

Supreme Court judges will review their decision hopefully before April 14, the date of annual township meetings, Gunnels said.

The Supreme Court Tuesday upheld a Dec. 2 ruling of Cook County Circuit Court which prohibited suburban Cook County townships from retaining 2 per cent of tax collections. The courts also held all taxes are to be collected by the Cook County treasurer's office, thus eliminating the need for the office of township tax collector.

Development trends indicate that the northern half of Wheeling could be developed primarily as townhouses, duplexes, and apartments with more than three bedrooms apiece.

Just in case that really happens, School Dist. 21 and the Wheeling Park District are going to propose enough school park sites in the area to meet the highest possible population influx.

Members of the two boards agreed Wednesday night to propose sites if the entire northern area were to be developed as planned developments, and to present their recommendations on the sites to the village board for new public land use designations.

The two boards agreed informally with representatives of the village board, the plan commission, and the zoning board to designate enough park and school sites for "the maximum amount of youngsters who could come out of developments in the area."

TRUSTEE IRA BIRD emphasized that designating the sties "in no way states that's how the area will be developed." Bird said he did not want developers to think that because the village was preparing for possible apartment zoning in the area, it would necessarily grant zoning changes for multi-family developments.

But most of the 27 community leaders at the meeting appeared to have little doubt that builders and developers are considering exactly that kind of development for the area.

Already, proposals for four planned apartment developments have been publicly announced for that area.

In addition, village and school officials have access to a population projection and information on other unannounced developments planned for the area in a report prepared by village planner Thompson Dyke. The village is not willing to make those figures or developments known yet.

BECAUSE OF those figures and the development trends, the officials openly admit that the four existing school-park sites in the area (in addition to the area slated for Northside park and Hawthorne Elementary School currently in condemnation proceedings will not meet the needs of the northern part of Wheeling either in location or in number of sites.

Developments already proposed in the area include the Hollywood Park Apartments located along the eastern edge of McHenry Road and west of the Soo Line R.R. tracks and the Carriage Woods North development of the Denoyer property located farther northeast of the tracks and at the western end of Meadow Lane. Both of these developments already have planned development zoning from the village.

A third development is the Wheeling Royale Apartments project at 1000 McHenry Road, northwest of the Highland Glen development.

A FORTH proposed development north of McHenry Road which may include a 12-story apartment building is scheduled to come before the zoning board for a change to planned development zoning within three weeks.

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill indicated Wednesday that tentative plans for that development called for townhouses with as many as five or six bedrooms. Gill said that such a development could bring 600 children to the elementary district from a 20-acre area; enough, he said, for a separate school just to serve that development.

"If we get that kind of development all through the north area it will really pose a burden on the school district . . . I would have to object officially to any type of development like that. Realistically the district can't handle that," Gill said.

Gill expects "all of the area in the school district will probably develop within five to seven years."

HE EXPLAINED that the "new trend right now is to move away from single-family development and away from one and two-bedroom apartments to duplexes and townhouses. I think it is probably valid for them as businessmen, it gets better financing and it meets the demands resulting from the high prices of single family home," Gill said.

Gill also said he felt an existing public use designation quite close to the Hawthorne site should be removed because it would not be required for the use by the school and park districts.

Gill emphasized that he felt the village board must designate the areas for public use well in advance of any beginning of developing of the land.

He suggested that the school-park sites should be laid out "strategically" so that "every developer can make a land donation consistent with his financial situation. They can't develop at all if we take a half or a third of their land," Gill said.

Tomorrow Big Day for Harper

by TOM WELLMAN

Tomorrow the voting-age registered citizens of the Harper College district will decide how much money the three-year-old community college can count on in the next several years.

Residents will act to approve or reject an 11-cent increase in the education fund tax rate and a six-cent hike in the building (maintenance) fund tax rate.

Polling places will be open from noon to 7 p.m. Saturday at 43 different locations, mostly schools, throughout the four-township area of Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Palatine, as well as in parts of the cities of Des Plaines, Barrington and Carpentersville.

The vote totals from the polling places will be brought into the business office of the community college, located at the intersection of Algonquin and Roselle roads in Palatine, to be recorded.

AND NO ONE at the college is overly optimistic about passage of both tax hikes.

Various college officials have pointed out a lack of positive interest from the community about the referendum. A series of public appearances by officials has been held to explain the referendum, but a large outpouring of vocal public support has not materialized.

However, there is no apparent organized opposition at this time, either. The Herald has received perhaps three or four calls objecting to the referendum.

College officials and outside observers believe a recent series of Sunday open houses may aid passage tremendously. The six open houses drew more than 3,000 persons to the campus to take guided tours and to see a film strip on the college's achievements.

But it's the lack of public response that bothers college officials. They have watched as a McHenry County referendum for a junior college was defeated recently and as a $105 million sewer bond referendum in DuPage referendum was decisively rejected this week.

THEY ARE concerned, too, that area taxpayers will be feeling the squeeze of inflation too much to vote additional funds for the college. They feel the recent success of candidates on anti-inflation platforms may be a bad sign.

They also fear voter apathy, and there is an old maxim that a small turnout means that only the "no" voters have turned out.

If the two tax hikes are defeated, it won't be the last chance to raise the tax rate. The college could go for another try for the tax rate this fall. However they would prefer passage Saturday.

At stake in the referendum vote is not only the financial future of Harper College but also possibly the reelection chances of two incumbent board members and three independent candidates. Another person, active in the pro-referendum campaign, will file for the Harper board this afternoon.

Crane Won't Talk

A scheduled speech tonight by U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-13th, to the Elk Grove Village Republican Club has been cancelled and club leaders are putting the blame on Township GOP Committeeman Carl Hansen.

Crane was to have addressed the club at 8 p.m. in the Holiday Inn, Elk Grove Village.

Last Friday, however, club officials received a telegram from the congressman saying he would have to attend another function tonight and that he was sorry he would have to cancel the Elk Grove speech.

In a letter to club members this week, Joe Jennings, club president, said Hansen apparently had brought pressures against Crane not to speak to the club since it is not a recognized arm of the Regular Republican Organization of Elk Grove Township.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, Hansen told the Herald he knew nothing about the cancellation and said it was a matter between the club and the congressman.

"I'm sure when Crane says he's busy, he's busy," Hansen said. "He's a hard-working congressman and his schedule is subject to change just as Donald Rumsfeld's schedule was when he was congressman."

Crane was unavailable for comment Thursday, but his administrative assistant in Washington, Jerry Harkins, told the Herald that Crane did have another commitment for tonight and that was the reason for the cancellation.

Harkins also explained that speeches by Crane to political organizations within the district are handled through the local township committeemen and that they are generally made only to recognized Republican organizations.

ACCORDING TO Jennings, the Republican Club had explained to Crane what it was and that Crane should have known that the club was not an official arm of the township GOP unit when he accepted the invitation to speak on Feb. 18.

"We had sent out 500 invitations and had rented a hall," Jennings said. "The unfortunate thing is that it makes Crane look bad and I don't think he's the one to blame."

A TRIO OF ATTORNEYS opposed rezoning for 9½ acres in Prospect Heights from single-family to multiple-family residential zoning. Attorney Patrick Link, a River Trails Park District commissioner, left, contended the proposed complex would put a strain on the parks and on water and sewer service. Paul Hamer, center, village attorney for Wheeling, questioned the legality of the "cluster" development on less than 40 acres. And Richard Rochester, right, the attorney for the Forest River Fire Department, said the department was not equipped to fight fires in the complex.

Town Tax Considered

Wheeling Township officials may consider a tax for the township as a result of the Illinois Supreme Court's decision Tuesday declaring unconstitutional the township's practice of keeping a portion of property tax collections.

Mrs. Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said yesterday, "The only alternative is a tax levy."

Approval for the township to collect such a tax would have to come from the township's electors (registered voters). The electors' annual meeting is set for April 14. It is at that meeting that electors will consider the township's budget and appropriations ordinance for the upcoming fiscal year.

Two weeks ago at a township auditors' meeting at which Mrs. Kolerus presented the proposed budget to auditors, she said the outcome of the pending suit against the township excess fee collection system would have little effect on the township's proposed budget.

IF A TAX LEVY for the township is approved, the township would not begin to receive revenues until 1971, more than a year from now. In the meantime, said Mrs. Kolerus, "Tax anticipation warrants might be very much a consideration depending on what the entire content of the (Supreme Court) opinions is. It depends on how much money the township will be allowed to have until it could collect taxes."

Mrs. Kolerus also said that until she knew more of the details of the court opinion, "I don't know what the disposition of the $150,000 in undistributed school funds that we are still holding will be." The funds were to have been distributed last year, but were frozen when the suit against the tax collectors was filed.

The school money was part of the funds the township received as its portion of the property tax collection. Each year the electors decide how to distribute the funds that are collected but not needed by the township.

A public hearing on the township's proposed budgets will be held March 31 at the township hall in Arlington Heights. At that time electors also will consider the highway commissioner's budget. The Supreme Court decision has no effect on the highway commissioner's budget, because taxes are levied for the commissioner's budget.

Dissent...And Our Society

by MARY REIFSCHNEIDER

"What pain is to the body, dissent is to the body politic." Jay Miller, executive director of the Illinois division of the American Civil Liberties Union, said Wednesday.

Miller spoke at the Beth Tikvah Temple Men's Club in Hoffman Estates on civil liberties, moral law and dissent.

Discussing civil disorder, demonstrations and riots, led by minorities and the new left, which have become increasingly frequent in this country, Miller said: "Dissent reflects problems in society."

Government reacts to civil disorder and dissent in two ways: It finds the underlying problem and creates order or it suppresses the disorder. "Historically societies suppress the disorder," Miller said.

DURING LYDON Johnson's administration, the federal government tried both ways, but "since then there's been a unanimity in government that points to suppression," he said.

Congressional reaction to dissent is reflected in the 1968 anti-riot act that the Conspiracy 8 defendants were indicted under. The present attorney general "proposes almost weekly a new law that would violate constitutional rights," Miller said.

Laws that would permit arresting and holding persons on a "suspicion" without making an actual charge "are anger creating and humiliating situations," too often used against minorities by police, he said.

The situation often leads to a more serious charge and police brutality, he said.

"NEARLY EVERY riot in this country started with an incident between a policeman and a private citizen. But it would be stupid to think or charge police with causing riots. Underlying social problems are the cause," Miller said.

The country not only has suppression to contend with now, but also polarization, the speaker said. The polarization ratio now is 80-20, with "80 per cent wanting dissenters silenced," Miller said.

In talking about the Conspiracy trial, Miller said the "demonstrators who came to Chicago (for the 1968 political convention) were never permitted their constitutional rights."

The 1968 law making it illegal to cross state lines to incite a riot, for which the Conspiracy 8 defendants were tried, is considered unconstitutional by the ACLU.

Miller said inciting refers to speech, a guaranteed right in the First Amendment.

"THOSE OF us who believe and work within the system, lost in the Conspiracy Trial," he said.

The trial didn't deal with the problems. "The judge and prosecutors were so unfair, that the trial was a caricature of what society is about," he said.

Referring to the defendants, Miller said, "Maybe you don't like them, but defending their rights is what constitutional democracy is about."

If the defendants had gone to the court room shaved and with prestigious attorneys, they probably would have been acquitted, Miller said.

The government hasn't learned much from the trial, he added. "To them, the only mistake was allowing the defendants to speak to the press."

He agreed that a real danger arising from civil disorders caused by the new left (Students for a Democratic Society, Weatherman faction, etc.) is government suppression that finally cause the silent majority to rise-up.

FASCISM STARTED with Hitler and Mussolini being elected, he said.

"Those who want to see constitutional democracy continue, must deal with the underlying problems," Miller said. The present system is still viable, he said pointing to examples of conclusions reached in the establishment oriented Eisenhower and Kerner reports that social problems cause riots.

He had a bright note on today's youth. "For the first time since 1776, we're raising a generation that understands and is committed to constitutional rights," he said.

Miller has been the Illinois ACLU director since 1965.

He previously served as director of the Peace Education Program of the American Friends Service Committee in Illinois and Wisconsin. He has worked closely with the civil rights movement as a consultant and organizer.

Migrant Family Being Housed In Church

A church in Arlington Heights is providing a temporary home for a family that was moved recently from a decrepit house trailer at 2118 E. Higgins Road, near Route 72 and Busse Road in Elk Grove Township. Since Monday, Mrs. Santos Lopez and her three children have been living in a basement room at the Congregational United Church of Christ, 1001 W. Kirchoff Road.

The Lopez family is the second to have been provided shelter by the church in recent months.

Mrs. Lopez has been living in a mobile home that is "grossly beyond repair," said Thomas E. Smith, director of Elk Grove Village Community Services.

"LIVING CONDITIONS in the trailer are very inadequate," continued Smith, "The floor boards are rotted out and water and electricity were turned off recently because of unpaid bills."

Mrs. Lopez, who is not living with her husband, has been living in the trailer for about three years. For two months this winter another couple was living with her family.

Smith said she receives $90 a month from the Cook County Department of Public Aid, not nearly enough for her to live on. It is her only source of income, he said.

He added she has difficulty communicating because she speaks mostly Spanish.

Tow of her children, students at Mark Hopkins School in Elk Grove Village, are driven to school by some friends. The other child is of pre-school age.

"I don't know how they could get along under those conditions," said Mrs. Diane Greenholdt, a member of a housing task force formed by Jack Pahl, Elk Grove Village president, to find homes for some 17 families in addition to developing a long-range plan for housing.

OF THE FAMILIES in need of housing, the Lopez family is the most in need of help, said Mrs. Greenholdt. Smith agreed,

Smith said Mrs. Lopez was supposed to be paying about $50 a month to park the trailer on the lot but that was more than a year behind in payments.

According to Smith, she had been told many months ago by the Maywood-Proviso State Bank, acting in behalf of a trust, that she must leave but that she could not find a place to go.

A spokesman for the bank said her husband had not made payments for more than a year. "We wanted her to leave because of the bad living conditions," said the spokesman.

The problem reached a head only recently, Smith said, when the water and electricity were turned off. Water was obtained from a nearby house but the family lived in virtual darkness, until school authorities told of the situation.

Smith said the family is one of the original of housing since a housing problem gained attention with the death of three children in November.

PRIOR TO THE shutting off of utilities, it had been hoped the family could live in the trailer until the task force found it alternate housing, Smith explained.

A meeting last Friday between individuals concerned about the housing of minority groups resulted in the church basement being made available through the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

The Benito Gonzalez family previously occupied the church basement for several weeks after having been evicted in December from a dwelling Cook County authorities said was substandard.

County Building Commissioner Raymond Welsh agreed to let the family move back into their home near Arlington Heights and Algonquin roads "at their own risk" when it could not find another place to live.

Another family living in a church is that of Santana Gonzalez. He has been living in a room at the Elk Grove Wesleyan Church for almost 7 weeks while friends attempt to find a place to put a trailer parked at the rear of the church.

Big Day for Harper

in the referendum's success are, understandably, walking around on eggshells. They are encouraging registered students over 21 to vote and carefully watching to see that Harper's best foot goes forward prior to the election.

HARPER OFFICIALS and others have several primary arguments for the referendum. First, they point out that the college's growth to approximately 5,000 students in three years of operation has outstripped an enrollment projection by a consulting firm of 3,000 this year and that it has outstripped the tax base.

They point out that the growth means there is less taxable assessed valuation per student, so there is less revenue available. In effect, they point out Harper is too well filling an educational gap in the northwestern suburbs.

Also, they state that chargeback revenue — out-of-district tax money contributed by out-of-district students — will decline sharply this fall with the opening of the Niles-Maine Township community college.

William Mann, vice president of financial affairs, projects about $84,000 in chargeback revenue in 1971-72 The college this year gained more than $880,000 in chargeback revenue.

THE OVERRIDING argument for the referendum, of course, is that Harper College has produced a quality two-year educational program, and the additional tax funds will cover the anticipated losses during the next few years.

According to a fact book prepared by Mann, the college will face a $1 million deficit in the educational fund this coming academic year if the tax rate increase is not approved. In the building fund this year money has been transferred in from the education fund to cover a loss.

The loss will grow more severe in the coming years, said Mann, unless the tax hike is granted. If the money is not available, the college may be forced to cut programs, close buildings, and generally reduce all but basic programs.

Dr. Robert Lahti, president of the college, has pointed out the full tax rate will have to be levied next year just to meet expenses, assuming the voters approve it

The principal argument against passage of the tax hike is, of course, financial. Some voters feel another tax increase is one increase too many.

HARPER OFFICIALS argue that the increase, although it may sound large, is relatively small. Harper gets only 3 cents out of a tax dollar, and passage of the two fund increases would mean an additional $17 tax bill on a home assessed at $10,000

Another argument is that Harper has not raised tuition enough. It is argued that the college should have asked more than the present $8 per credit hour rate (using current projections, Harper could have set the rate at $10 or $12).

Harper officials counter that they couldn't project the number of students last fall, so they had to set the rate in advance (they can gain only one-third of expenses through tuition) and that they wanted low-tuition education. And they point out that their projections show a $10 tuition rate in 1971-72, while holding the rate steady this fall at $8.

Those are some of the basic arguments and, of course, there are others. Today, the Harper officials and interested citizens will relax momentarily then begin the vigil until the final results are posted on Mann's bulletin board.

A rejection by the voters would not mean that the college's buildings would be leveled and the college's 218-acre campus turned into Chicago's third airport. But action on the referendum will determine whether Harper continues to expand at its present rate.

Harper Polling Places

Voting on the Harper College referendum to raise the education and building (maintenance) fund tax rates a total of 17 cents will take place tomorrow from noon to 7 p.m.

Harper will use the same polling places and precinct boundaries that were used in the April 12, 1969 school board elections in respective elementary district. For information, call the Harper business office at 359-4200, extension 220

Obernkirchen Choir Will Perform Here

Two years ago the Obernkirchen Children's Choir from Germany performed in Carnegie Hall in New York and next fall the group will come to Wheeling for a performance

The renowned group who has sung for television viewers several times on the Ed Sullivan show is coming here as part of a concert series sponsored by the Northwest Community Concert Association

The 1970-71 concert series is the third sponsored by the association Besides the Obernkirchen Children's Choir, the association has also booked the Lee Evans Trio a pops music group, and Addiss and Crofut a pair of folk and classical music singers A fourth concert is scheduled but the performers have not yet been selected

THE ASSOCIATION works with Columbia Artists of New York to bring the performers here explained Tom Shirley, principal of Wheeling High School and this year's association president 'Columbia Artists is a booking agent that secures performers for us"

Each spring in advance of the next fall's concerts the association holds a week-long membership drive in Buffalo Grove, Wheeling and Prospect Heights "Most members of the association come from those three communities, but we have some from the surrounding areas too," he said

This year's membership drive will begin Monday and end March 28 'We hope to have about 700 join this year," Shirley said Memberships cost $10 each, and for that, the members receive tickets to all four concerts Student-memberships are also available at $5 each

"WE HAVE A membership drive only a week long, so that we know how much money we can spend on the concerts," explained Shirley He said the association was expecting to have a budget this year of about $6,000

"The acts have been selected by the association's executive committee and its board of directors," Shirley said Sometime after the membership drive ends, the association will select the program for the fourth concert

The acts are selected, said Shirley, 'keeping community interests in mind Among the most popular acts we've had was the Fiesta Mexicana, an Indian folk dancing group. Another was the Cleba-noff Strings a pops orchestra similar to the Boston Pops"

Shirley said no exact dates for the concerts had been set as yet The first of the concerts will be held sometime next fall They stretch into early spring We try to hold them on various nights of the week'

THE ASSOCIATION got its start in 1968 It was one of the ideas suggested by TORCH (The Organization to Realize Community Hopes) 'A nucleus formed, and pretty soon we were ready to organize the association," said Shirley The first year, about 500 joined the association In its second year the association's membership list grew by about 100

Shirley who is one of the group's originators as well as its current president is a great believer in the concerts 'A community is known by what goes on in the area When we have things like this it can't help but enhance the area'

And he believes the concerts have been successful The community has accepted the concerts quite well It has supported them better than I expected' As to why the series was successful he said "It's because there's a need for this kind of entertainment in this area'

RESIDENTS OF PROSPECT Heights and unincorporated Mount Prospect look on as city planner Rolf Campbell explains plans for a multiple-story apartment and townhouse complex. If rezoning is granted the complex will be built on a 9½-acre site near River and Euclid roads. Benefits and disadvantages of the complex were outlined for seven hours by witnesses for the rezoning applicant and local opponents.

(See pictures inside)

High Rises May Result In Problems

If rezoning for a multi-story development in Prospect Heights is approved, School Dist 26 may have to resort to use trailers for classrooms The Forest River Fire Department may have to rely on mutual aid in the other departments and issue bonds The facility at Burning Bush Trails Park may become inadequate and local problems with sewer and water service may increase

These possibilities were raised during a seven-hour hearing before the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals to review George Martin Sloan's request to rezone 9½ acres near River and Euclid roads in Prospect Heights from single family to multiple-family residential zoning

Sloan wants to build a 254 unit, six story apartment and townhouse complex costing $6 million for the site with rents ranging from $230 to $400 A recommendation will be made by the zoning board within the next few weeks to the Cook County Board The final decision on the request rests with the county board

AT THE HEARING, Dist 26 Supt Winston Harwood told the board four additional classrooms have been approved for Indian Grove School, which includes the site in its enrollment 'These classrooms will be constructed this summer to relieve an already crowded condition at the school"

In addition 125 district children are attending a school at Maryville Academy, a home for dependent children The school does not meet the standards of the state life safety code

"Since the district took over the responsibility of educating the Maryville children in 1968, the on going cost has been paid by the state" said Harwood "However, no provision has been made by the state for classroom space for the Maryville children

"The people moving into the proposed complex will feel they have first call on classroom space But no one is worried about the youngsters at Maryville," he charged

THE REVENUE ADDED to the district's assessed valuation and consequently the bonding power will be sufficient for construction of only five classrooms said Harwood Most likely we will have to condemn land on the north side of the site and erect trailers for the youngsters in the complex"

In the Forest River Fire Protection District said Trustee Leonard Felke the revenue the complex will add to the assessed valuation will not compensate for the monetary loss to the district and its residents

"THE TOTAL NET loss to the district will be over $107,000 a year" said Felke 'This amount includes an $80,000 expenditure for an aerial ladder or snorkel truck necessary to fight high rise fires and a lowering of the district's fire rating which would increase residents insurance premiums

A bond issue would be required to cover the $20,600 necessary each year to pay for the truck In addition an unknown amount would be required to build facilities for the new vehicle he said

PATRICK LINK a local attorney and member of the River Trails Park District board testified the complex would 'render the facility at Burning Bush Trails Park adjacent to the site inadequate

'Burning Bush was designated as a neighborhood park in the district's master plan, said Link If apartments are constructed on the 9½ acre site and on the nursery property to the north the park cannot accommodate the additional 2,000 people

Link also mentioned a suit he filed against Citizens Utility Co (CU) and two subsequent orders issued against the company by the Illinois Commerce Commission

One of these orders shows that CU facilities in this area are violating the law said Link The second order was issued because CU didn't comply to the first ruling

Specifically the area has had problems with flooding and the sanitary sewer backing up into the homes

Weary Crowd Views Zoning

by BETSY BROOKER

A weary and hungry crowd of Prospect Heights residents straggled out of the Wheeling Village Hall at 9:30 p.m. Wednesday

They had filled the council chambers to the brim sitting patiently through seven hours of testimony by witnesses for rezoning applicant George Martin Sloan and attorneys representing the opposition

Some of the residents worked in shifts The wife left for the hearing as soon as the babysitter arrived after school, and stayed until dinner time And the husband arrived after work to carry on during the evening session

For some it meant sitting through the entire session with no break and no supper.

WHAT BROUGHT them there was a hearing before the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals to review Sloan's request to rezone 9½ acres near Euclid and River roads in Prospect Heights, from single-family to multiple-family residence zoning

If granted, the rezoning will clear the way for a $6 million, 254-unit, six-story apartment and townhouse complex

The hearing was important to the residents because many feel that services in the unincorporated area cannot accommodate a multi-story building

Those that live close to the site fear the complex will lower their property values. Residents who live farther west and north are afraid the complex will set a precedent for the future construction in the entire Prospect Heights area

The residents, representing an assortment of homeowners associations, had no chance to speak to the board until the last half hour of the hearing

MOST OF THEIR objections had already been brought out by attorneys representing the Forest River Fire Department, the River Trails Park District and the Village of Wheeling

Chiefly, the objections centered around fire protection, sewer and water facilities, traffic congestion, juvenile population, park utilization and the effect on neighboring property

Sloan's witnesses contended that because there is a need for multi-family units in the area, the demand should be met They also said the high rental rates for the units, ranging from $230 to $400, would limit occupancy to persons without children.

Proponents of the complex said the site is suited for multi-family residences because the immediately adjacent land is not now used for single-family homes A nursery is to the north of the site, a park is on the west a forest preserve on the east, and a service station on the south

HOWEVER, OPPONENTS pointed out that 95 per cent of the surrounding acreas developed for single-family homes "Most of the residents in this area bought their homes with the knowledge that the surrounding land was also zoned R-4, (single-family) "said Paul Sellinger of the Camelot Association "Facilities in this area are already overburdened I don't feel this development serves the needs of the community," he added

Representatives of the Rainbow Ridge, Woodview, Parkview and Castle Heights homeowners associations and the Northwest Suburban Council of Associations also went on record objecting to the rezoning request Bill DeWaal, of the Euclid Lake Association, presented a petition with 1,100 signatures opposing the complex

by TOM WELLMAN

Tomorrow the voting-age registered citizens of the Harper College district will decide how much money the three-year-old community college can count on in the next several years

Residents will act to approve or reject an 11-cent increase in the education fund tax rate and a six cent hike in the building (maintenance) fund tax rate

Polling places will be open from noon to 7 p.m. Saturday at 43 different locations mostly schools throughout the four-township area of Elk Grove Wheeling, Schaumburg and Palatine, as well as in parts of the cities of Des Plaines, Barrington and Carpentersville

The vote totals from the polling places will be brought into the business office of the community college, located at the intersection of Algonquin and Roselle roads in Palatine to be recorded

AND NO ONE at the college is overly optimistic about passage of both tax hikes

Various college officials have pointed out a lack of positive interest from the community about the referendum A series of public appearances by officials has been held to explain the referendum, but a large outpouring of vocal public support has not materialized

However there is no apparent organized opposition at this time, either The Herald has received perhaps three or four calls objecting to the referendum

College officials and outside observers believe a recent series of Sunday open houses may aid passage tremendously. The six open houses drew more than 3,000 persons to the campus to take guided tours and to see a film strip on the college's achievements

Polling places for Harper College referendum are on Page 3.

But it's the lack of public response that bothers college officials They have watched as a McHenry County referendum for a junior college was defeated recently and as a $105 million sewer bond referendum in DuPage referendum was decisively rejected this week

THEY ARE concerned, too, that area taxpayers will be feeling the squeeze of inflation too much to vote additional funds for the college They feel the recent success of candidates on anti-inflation platforms may be a bad sign

They also fear voter apathy, and there is an old maxim that a small turnout means that only the "no" voters have turned out

If the two tax hikes are defeated, it won't be the last chance to raise the tax rate The college could go for another try for the tax rate this fall However, they would prefer passage Saturday

At stake in the referendum vote is not only the financial future of Harper College but also possibly the reelection chances of two incumbent board members and three independent candidates Another person, active in the pro-referendum campaign, will file for the Harper board this afternoon

College officials and others interested

Township tax collectors in Cook County bounced back fast from a Tuesday Illinois Supreme Court ruling abolishing their jobs and planned Wednesday to file for a review of the high court's decision

The petition for a re-hearing will be filed within the next 21 days, the time period before a Supreme Court decision becomes final Joseph W Smith, attorney with the Cook County States Attorney's Office representing tax collectors, said the rehearing request is normal procedure

Larry Gunnels, attorney for the intervenors supporting the township tax collector's case, said he would file the petition jointly with the States Attorney's Office probably today or Monday

"THE PETITION will point out reasons why we believe the decision of the court does not apply to facts in the case Gunnels said

Supreme Court judges will review the decision hopefully before April 14 the date of annual township meetings Gunnels said

The Supreme Court Tuesday upheld a Dec 2 ruling of Cook County Circuit Court which prohibited suburban Cook County townships from retaining 2 per cent of tax collections The courts also held all taxes are to be collected by the Cook County treasurer's office thus eliminating the need for the office of township tax collector.

A TRIO OF ATTORNEYS opposed rezoning for 9½ acres in Prospect Heights from single-family to multiple-family residential zoning. Attorney Patrick Link, a River Trails Park District commissioner, left, contended the proposed complex would put a strain on the parks and on water and sewer service. Paul Hamer, center, village attorney for Wheeling, questioned the legality of the "cluster" development on less than 40 acres. And Richard Rochester, right, the attorney for the Forest River Fire Department, said the department was not equipped to fight fires in the complex.

Town Tax Considered

Wheeling Township officials may consider a tax for the township as a result of the Illinois Supreme Court's decision Tuesday declaring unconstitutional the township's practice of keeping a portion of property tax collections.

Mrs. Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said yesterday, "The only alternative is a tax levy."

Approval for the township to collect such a tax would have to come from the township's electors (registered voters). The electors' annual meeting is set for April 14. It is at that meeting that electors will consider the township's budget and appropriations ordinance for the upcoming fiscal year.

Two weeks ago at a township auditors' meeting at which Mrs. Kolerus presented the proposed budget to auditors, she said the outcome of the pending suit against the township excess fee collection system would have little effect on the township's proposed budget.

IF A TAX LEVY for the township is approved, the township would not begin to receive revenues until 1971, more than a year from now. In the meantime, said Mrs. Kolerus, "Tax anticipation warrants might be very much a consideration depending on what the entire content of the (Supreme Court) opinions is. It depends on how much money the township will be allowed to have until it could collect taxes."

Mrs. Kolerus also said that until she knew more of the details of the court opinion, "I don't know what the disposition of the $150,000 in undistributed school funds that we are still holding will be." The funds were to have been distributed last year, but were frozen when the suit against the tax collectors was filed.

The school money was part of the funds the township received as its portion of the property tax collection. Each year the electors decide how to distribute the funds that are collected but not needed by the township.

A public hearing on the township's proposed budgets will be held March 31 at the township hall in Arlington Heights. At that time electors also will consider the highway commissioner's budget. The Supreme Court decision has no effect on the highway commissioner's budget, because taxes are levied for the commissioner's budget.

Dissent...And Our Society

by MARY REIFSCHNEIDER

"What pain is to the body, dissent is to the body politic." Jay Miller, executive director of the Illinois division of the American Civil Liberties Union, said Wednesday.

Miller spoke at the Beth Tikvah Temple Men's Club in Hoffman Estates on civil liberties, moral law and dissent.

Discussing civil disorder, demonstrations and riots, led by minorities and the new left, which have become increasingly frequent in this country, Miller said: "Dissent reflects problems in society."

Government reacts to civil disorder and dissent in two ways. It finds the underlying problem and creates order or it suppresses the disorder. "Historically societies suppress the disorder," Miller said.

DURING LYDON Johnson's administration, the federal government tried both ways, but "since then there's been a unanimity in government that points to suppression," he said.

Congressional reaction to dissent is reflected in the 1968 anti-riot act that the Conspiracy 8 defendants were indicted under. The present attorney general "proposes almost weekly a new law that would violate constitutional rights," Miller said.

Laws that would permit arresting and holding persons on a "suspicion" without making an actual charge "are anger creating and humiliating situations," too often used against minorities by police, he said.

The situation often leads to a more serious charge and police brutality, he said.

"NEARLY EVERY riot in this country started with an incident between a policeman and a private citizen. But it would be stupid to think or charge police with causing riots. Underlying social problems are the cause," Miller said.

The country not only has suppression to contend with now, but also polarization, the speaker said. The polarization ratio now is 80-20, with "80 per cent wanting dissenters silenced," Miller said.

In talking about the Conspiracy trial, Miller said the "demonstrators who came to Chicago (for the 1968 political convention) were never permitted their constitutional rights."

The 1968 law making it illegal to cross state lines to incite a riot, for which the Conspiracy 8 defendants were tried, is considered unconstitutional by the ACLU.

Miller said inciting refers to speech, a guaranteed right in the First Amendment.

"THOSE OF us who believe and work within the system, lost in the Conspiracy Trial," he said.

The trial didn't deal with the problems. "The judge and prosecutors were so unfair, that the trial was a caricature of what society is about," he said.

Referring to the defendants, Miller said, "Maybe you don't like them, but defending their rights is what constitutional democracy is about."

If the defendants had gone to the court room shaved and with prestigious attorneys, they probably would have been acquitted, Miller said.

The government hasn't learned much from the trial, he added. "To them, the only mistake was allowing the defendants to speak to the press."

He agreed that a real danger arising from civil disorders caused by the new left (Students for a Democratic Society Weatherman faction, etc.) is government suppression that finally cause the silent majority to rise-up.

FASCISM STARTED with Hitler and Mussolini being elected, he said.

"Those who want to see constitutional democracy continue, must deal with the underlying problems," Miller said. The present system is still viable, he said pointing to examples of conclusions reached in the establishment oriented Eisenhower and Kerner reports that social problems cause riots.

He had a bright note on today's youth. "For the first time since 1776, we're raising a generation that understands and is committed to constitutional rights," he said.

Miller has been the Illinois ACLU director since 1965.

He previously served as director of the Peace Education Program of the American Friends Service Committee in Illinois and Wisconsin. He has worked closely with the civil rights movement as a consultant and organizer.

Obernkirchen Choir Will Perform Here

Two years ago the Obernkirchen Children's Choir from Germany performed in Carnegie Hall in New York and next fall the group will come to Wheeling for a performance.

The renowned group, who has sung for television viewers several times on the Ed Sullivan show, is coming here as part of a concert series sponsored by the Northwest Community Concert Association.

The 1970-71 concert series is the third sponsored by the association. Besides the Obernkirchen Children's Choir, the association has also booked the Lee Evans Trio, a pops music group, and Addiss and Crofut, a pair of folk and classical music singers. A fourth concert is scheduled but the performers have not yet been selected.

THE ASSOCIATION works with Columbia Artists of New York to bring the performers here explained Tom Shirley, principal of Wheeling High School and this year's association president. "Columbia Artists is a booking agent that secures performers for us."

Each spring, in advance of the next fall's concerts, the association holds a week-long membership drive in Buffalo Grove, Wheeling and Prospect Heights. "Most members of the association come from those three communities, but we have some from the surrounding areas too," he said.

This year's membership drive will begin Monday and end March 28. "We hope to have about 700 join this year," Shirley said. Memberships cost $10 each, and for that, the members receive tickets to all four concerts. Student-memberships are also available at $5 each.

"WE HAVE A membership drive only a week long, so that we know how much money we can spend on the concerts," explained Shirley. He said the association was expecting to have a budget this year of about $6,000.

"The acts have been selected by the association's executive committee and its board of directors," Shirley said. Sometime after the membership drive ends, the association will select the program for the fourth concert.

The acts are selected, said Shirley, "keeping community interests in mind. Among the most popular acts we've had was the Fiesta Mexicana, an Indian folk dancing group. Another was the Cleba-noff Strings, a pops orchestra similar to the Boston Pops."

Shirley said no exact dates for the concerts had been set as yet: "The first of the concerts will be held sometime next fall. They stretch into early spring. We try to hold them on various nights of the week."

THE ASSOCIATION got its start in 1968. It was one of the ideas suggested by TORCH (The Organization to Realize Community Hopes.) "A nucleus formed, and pretty soon we were ready to organize the association," said Shirley. The first year, about 500 joined the association. In its second year the association's membership list grew by about 100.

Shirley, who is one of the group's originators as well as its current president is a great believer in the concerts: "A community is known by what goes on in the area. When we have things like this, it can't help but enhance the area."

And he believes the concerts have been successful: "The community has accepted the concerts quite well. It has supported them better than I expected." As to why the series was successful he said, "It's because there's a need for this kind of entertainment in this area."

Gamm Charges Utility, Village Zoning Deal

Charges of "contract rezoning" were leveled at the village board Wednesday by Plan Commissioner Larry Gamm.

Gamm charged that the village board, in a proposed contract with the Buffalo Utility Co., for the sale of the utility to the village, was agreeing to rezone land for multiple-family development.

Gamm made the charges during the village's plan commission meeting. He said, "At present there is an unsigned agreement concerning land at the utility's sewage treatment. The land is zoned R-4 (single-family). If the contract is signed, the land will go to R-9 (multiple-family)."

GAMM TERMED the agreement "contract rezoning" and called it "illegal."

He then moved that the plan commission notify the village board that, "We disapprove of the agreement for rezoning of the Buffalo Utility land on which the sewage treatment plant exists."

As a basis for the charge that the agreement would be illegal if signed, Gamm cited an article in the village's zoning code saying that public hearings were required for any rezoning considerations.

Gamm charged, "By this contract the village board has overstepped its authority, made itself subject to impeachment and an injunction."

Another plan commissioner asked whether, "it might not be better to sacrifice this (the rezoning) for better water facilities for the citizens." To that Gamm and Richard Heinrich, the plan commissioner who seconded Gamm's motion, answered, "This should be done at a public hearing not in a contract."

WALLACE BERTH, plan commission chairman, argued that the commission should wait to consider the matter until the village attorney, Richard Raysa, was consulted. "If the motion is passed, we'll have to present it to the board, but I think it's way out of order," he commented.

Berth then charged, "We have a couple of personal vendettas going, it seems." Mendenhall agreed.

The motion was turned down by a vote of 3-2, with one commissioner, Don Zitzewitz, abstaining.

The charge of contract rezoning came up in the village last Friday at the Strathmore Homeowners Association meeting, when Village Pres. Don Thompson made a speech concerning community planning.

JUST PRIOR to Thompson's speech, SHA member James Schrader told members that included in the proposed utility purchase contract was a provision that, "The village would rezone land to R-9 (multiple-family dwelling district) for the utility purchase." The SHA decided to question the village board on the matter officially.

Thompson last Friday told SHA members that the agreement included stipulations that no more than 16 units per acre be built.

Thompson told SHA members that the price of the utility had been reduced by $400,000 because of that agreement.

Tomorrow Big Day for Harper

by TOM WELLMAN

Tomorrow the voting-age registered citizens of the Harper College district will decide how much money the three-year-old community college can count on in the next several years.

Residents will act to approve or reject an 11-cent increase in the education fund tax rate and a six-cent hike in the building (maintenance) fund tax rate.

Polling places will be open from noon to 7 p.m. Saturday at 43 different locations, mostly schools, throughout the four-township area of Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Palatine, as well as in parts of the cities of Des Plaines, Barrington and Carpentersville.

The vote totals from the polling places will be brought into the business office of the community college, located at the intersection of Algonquin and Roselle roads in Palatine, to be recorded.

AND NO ONE at the college is overly optimistic about passage of both tax hikes.

Various college officials have pointed out a lack of positive interest from the community about the referendum. A series of public appearances by officials has been held to explain the referendum, but a large outpouring of vocal public support has not materialized.

However, there is no apparent organized opposition at this time, either. The Herald has received perhaps three or four calls objecting to the referendum.

College officials and outside observers believe a recent series of Sunday open houses may aid passage tremendously. The six open houses drew more than 3,000 persons to the campus to take guided tours and to see a film strip on the college's achievements.

But it's the lack of public response that bothers college officials. They have watched as a McHenry County referendum for a junior college was defeated recently and as a $105 million sewer bond referendum in DuPage referendum was decisively rejected this week.

THEY ARE concerned, too, that area taxpayers will be feeling the squeeze of inflation too much to vote additional funds for the college. They feel the recent success of candidates on anti-inflation platforms may be a bad sign.

They also fear voter apathy, and there is an old maxim that a small turnout means that only the "no" voters have turned out.

If the two tax hikes are defeated, it won't be the last chance to raise the tax rate. The college could go for another try for the tax rate this fall. However, they would prefer passage Saturday.

At stake in the referendum vote is not only the financial future of Harper College but also possibly the reelection chances of two incumbent board members and three independent candidates. Another person, active in the pro-referendum campaign, will file for the Harper board this afternoon.

Splitting Of Dist. 21 Is Proposed

Is School Dist. 21 too big?

At a meeting of village, park district and school district officials from Wheeling Wednesday the subject of splitting up the school district along village lines was proposed.

The suggestion came after a general discussion by government officials about the lack of cooperation between Wheeling and Buffalo Grove officials.

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill strongly opposed any such division of his district.

"It would not be in the best interest of the children of the district," Gill told the other officials. Gill said that any such division would be "legally impossible," because of state regulations.

He pointed out that the district has made all its future plans "on the basis of the area we now have." He also pointed out that any existing debt in the district would be the responsibility of all taxpayers now in the district even if the district were split.

"We might save a few bucks for taxpayers in Wheeling and wreck the education of their children," Gill warned.

Discussion ended after Gill pointed out to the Wheeling officials that if the district were split, the Arlington Industrial and Research Center would probably be annexed to School Dist. 25.

Dist. 21 Registrations Set for Kindergarten

Kindergarten registration in School Dist. 21 will take place Saturday. All elementary schools will be open from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 3 p.m. for registration purposes.

All children living in Dist. 21 who will be five years old by Dec. 1, 1970, will be eligible to enter kindergarten this September.

A birth certificate must accompany all children who will be registered Saturday.

A DANCE ROUTINE by Marilyn Raedel, Wheeling High School senior and Illinois' Junior Miss, will be one of the highlights of "It Happens Every Year." The WHS Community Scholarship Foundation variety show will be presented tonight and tomorrow night in the WHS Little Theatre. Several other WHS students will be featured in the show, along with many local residents.

Variety Show Set At WHS

"It Happens Every Year" is coming.

The Wheeling High School Community Scholarship Foundation variety show will be presented at 8 p.m. tonight and tomorrow night in the WHS Little Theatre.

A variety of skits, songs and dances will be featured on the program, which will involve both community residents and WHS students.

Scholarsship foundation members hope to raise $2,000 this year to benefit graduating seniors at the high school.

Proceeds from the show's program booklet will be put into the scholarship foundation fund. So far $1,500 has been raised for this fund.

The WHS Community Scholarship Foundation was formed five years ago to raise money for deserving WHS students who wish to continue their education.

The foundation has awarded 31 scholarships to WHS graduates in the past five years.

A TRIO OF ATTORNEYS opposed rezoning for 9½ acres in Prospect Heights from single-family to multiple-family residential zoning. Attorney Patrick Link, a River Trails Park District commissioner, left, contended the proposed complex would put a strain on the parks and on water and sewer service. Paul Hamer, center, village attorney for Wheeling, questioned the legality of the "cluster" development on less than 40 acres. And Richard Rochester, right, the attorney for the Forest River Fire Department, said the department was not equipped to fight fires in the complex.

Town Tax Considered

Wheeling Township officials may consider a tax for the township as a result of the Illinois Supreme Court's decision Tuesday declaring unconstitutional the township's practice of keeping a portion of property tax collections.

Mrs. Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said yesterday, "The only alternative is a tax levy."

Approval for the township to collect such a tax would have to come from the township's electors (registered voters). The electors' annual meeting is set for April 14. It is at that meeting that electors will consider the township's budget and appropriations ordinance for the upcoming fiscal year.

Two weeks ago at a township auditors' meeting at which Mrs. Kolerus presented the proposed budget to auditors, she said the outcome of the pending suit against the township excess fee collection system would have little effect on the township's proposed budget.

IF A TAX LEVY for the township is approved, the township would not begin to receive revenues until 1971, more than a year from now. In the meantime, said Mrs. Kolerus, "Tax anticipation warrants might be very much a consideration depending on what the entire content of the (Supreme Court) opinions is. It depends on how much money the township will be allowed to have until it could collect taxes."

Mrs. Kolerus also said that until she knew more of the details of the court opinion, "I don't know what the disposition of the $150,000 in undistributed school funds that we are still holding will be." The funds were to have been distributed last year, but were frozen when the suit against the tax collectors was filed.

The school money was part of the funds the township received as its portion of the property tax collection. Each year the electors decide how to distribute the funds that are collected but not needed by the township.

A public hearing on the township's proposed budgets will be held March 31 at the township hall in Arlington Heights. At that time electors also will consider the highway commissioner's budget. The Supreme Court decision has no effect on the highway commissioner's budget, because taxes are levied for the commissioner's budget.

Dissent...And Our Society

by MARY REIFSCHNEIDER

"What pain is to the body, dissent is to the body politic," Jay Miller, executive director of the Illinois division of the American Civil Liberties Union, said Wednesday.

Miller spoke at the Beth Tikvah Temple Men's Club in Hoffman Estates on civil liberties, moral law and dissent.

Discussing civil disorder, demonstrations and riots, led by minorities and the new left, which have become increasingly frequent in this country, Miller said: "Dissent reflects problems in society."

Government reacts to civil disorder and dissent in two ways: It finds the underlying problem and creates order or it suppresses the disorder. "Historically societies suppress the disorder," Miller said.

DURING LYDON Johnson's administration, the federal government tried both ways, but "since then there's been a unanimity in government that points to suppression," he said.

Congressional reaction to dissent is reflected in the 1968 anti-riot act that the Conspiracy 8 defendants were indicted under. The present attorney general "proposes almost weekly a new law that would violate constitutional rights," Miller said.

Laws that would permit arresting and holding persons on a "suspicion" without making an actual charge "are anger creating and humiliating situations," too often used against minorities by police, he said.

The situation often leads to a more serious charge and police brutality, he said.

"NEARLY EVERY riot in this country started with an incident between a policeman and a private citizen. But it would be stupid to think or charge police with causing riots. Underlying social problems are the cause," Miller said.

The country not only has suppression to contend with now, but also polarization, the speaker said. The polarization ratio now is 80-20, with "80 per cent wanting dissenters silenced," Miller said.

In talking about the Conspiracy trial, Miller said the "demonstrators who came to Chicago (for the 1968 political convention) were never permitted their constitutional rights."

The 1968 law making it illegal to cross state lines to incite a riot, for which the Conspiracy 8 defendants were tried, is considered unconstitutional by the ACLU.

Miller said inciting refers to speech, a guaranteed right in the First Amendment.

"THOSE OF us who believe and work within the system, lost in the Conspiracy Trial," he said.

The trial didn't deal with the problems. "The judge and prosecutors were so unfair, that the trial was a caricature of what society is about," he said.

Referring to the defendants, Miller said, "Maybe you don't like them, but defending their rights is what constitutional democracy is about."

If the defendants had gone to the court room shaved and with prestigious attorneys, they probably would have been acquitted, Miller said.

The government hasn't learned much from the trial, he added. "To them, the only mistake was allowing the defendants to speak to the press."

He agreed that a real danger arising from civil disorders caused by the new left (Students for a Democratic Society Weatherman faction, etc.) is government suppression that finally cause the silent majority to rise-up.

FASCISM STARTED with Hitler and Mussolini being elected, he said.

"Those who want to see constitutional democracy continue, must deal with the underlying problems," Miller said. The present system is still viable, he said pointing to examples of conclusions reached in the establishment oriented Eisenhower and Kerner reports that social problems cause riots.

He had a bright note on today's youth. "For the first time since 1776, we're raising a generation that understands and is committed to constitutional rights," he said.

Miller has been the Illinois ACLU director since 1965.

He previously served as director of the Peace Education Program of the American Friends Service Committee in Illinois and Wisconsin. He has worked closely with the civil rights movement as a consultant and organizer.

Tomorrow Is Big Day For Harper College

by TOM WELLMAN

Tomorrow the voting-age registered citizens of the Harper College district will decide how much money the three-year-old community college can count on in the next several years

Residents will act to approve or reject an 11-cent increase in the education fund tax rate and a six-cent hike in the building (maintenance) fund tax rate.

Polling places will be open from noon to 7 p m Saturday at 43 different locations, mostly schools, throughout the four-township area of Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Palatine, as well as in parts of the cities of Des Plaines, Barrington and Carpentersville

The vote totals from the polling places will be brought into the business office of the community college, located at the intersection of Algonquin and Roselle roads in Palatine, to be recorded.

Polling places for Harper College referendum are on Page 3.

AND NO ONE at the college is overly optimistic about passage of both tax hikes

Various college officials have pointed out a lack of positive interest from the community about the referendum. A series of public appearances by officials has been held to explain the referendum, but a large outpouring of vocal public support has not materialized.

However, there is no apparent organized opposition at this time, either. The Herald has received perhaps three or four calls objecting to the referendum.

College officials and others interested in the referendum's success are, understandably, walking around on eggshells. They are encouraging registered students over 21 to vote and carefully watching to see that Harper's best foot goes forward prior to the election.

HARPER OFFICIALS and others have several primary arguments for the referendum. First, they point out that the college's growth to approximately 5,000 students in three years of operation has outstripped an enrollment projection by a consulting firm of 3,000 this year and that it has outstripped the tax base.

They point out that the growth means there is less taxable assessed valuation per student, so there is less revenue available In effect, they point out Harper is too well filling an educational gap in the northwestern suburbs

Also, they state that chargeback revenue — out-of-district tax money contributed by out-of-district students — will decline sharply this fall with the opening of the Niles-Maine Township community college.

South Park Dispute Settled

THE CONTINUOUS ROUTINE of putting clothes into a washer and later transferring them to a nearby dryer goes on daily in coin-operated laundromats like the Speed Wash in Mount Prospect. Laundromats, like the corner drug store and the barber shop, has become an American institution which is often taken for granted.

by GERRY DeZONNA

It's taken more than a year for the Mount Prospect Park District to square away its $2.4 million referendum approved by the voters Feb. 22, 1969.

A lawsuit challenging the validity of the referendum, which was narrowly approved by a 56-vote margin; the controversy over the West Park site, formerlly owned by builder Salvatore DiMucci; and a condemnation suit to obtain the land for South Park have been the stumbling blocks in the realization of the park district's referendum.

The settlement over South Park, a 30-acre site south of Algonquin Road at Route 83, yesterday ended more than a year of struggle by park district officials to honor the plans outlined in the referendum.

THE SHOUTING IS all over, and now, the work begins to improve and expand park district facilities as soon as possible.

Negotiations to obtain the South Park site for $18,750 per acre were concluded yesterday by Park Dist. Atty. William Ward and the owners of the property.

Szczesny Builders of Mount Prospect own a 20-acre parcel and Mrs. Melanie Goerger and her son, Martin E Goerger, of Mount Prospect own 10 acres. The total tract will cost the park district $539,000.

"The purchase of the property will cost us about $39,000 more than appropriated by the referendum, but we already have the money for the additional expenditure. When the park district sold its bonds, we were still trying to settle West and South Parks so we invested the money in federal treasury notes until the issues were settled," Robert Jackson, chairman of the park board, explained.

"WE'VE ACCUMULATED about $40,000 in interest on the money, so we can afford to pay the additional cost for South Park without appropriating additional monies not outlined in the referendum," he said.

Condemnation suits had been filed more than a year ago against Mrs. Goerger and Goerger and Szczesny Builders for acquisition of the property, but settlements with both owners were reached out of court.

"The settlement price per acre is a compromise on the appraisals submitted to the park district, Szczesny Builders and the Goergers. I think it's a real fair price and everyone involved in the settlement seems to be pleased. We're very pleased, to say the least, since the park district has finally completed all the negotiations in the referendum," Jackson said.

Jackson said a greenhouse, which is located on the Goergers' property and owned and operated by them, will not have to be vacated for about 2 years after sale of the property "We want to give them plenty of time to transfer the business and relocate with as little trouble as possible.

"THE GREENHOUSE and the Goerger residence will not affect park district plans for the property I think it's more important they have an adequate amount of time to move and relocate the business," Jackson said.

South Park, the largest of the two new park sites, will be developed as an all-purpose community park. Facilities will include baseball diamonds, football fields, tennis courts, cycling paths, play apparatus and a shelter.

Long-range plans include the addition of a community center and swimming pool complex.

Jackson said despite delays in implementing park district plans outlined by the referendum, most park improvements will be completed on time "Construction on the Lion's Park community center is going very well, especially the facilities for the youth center, which will be located in the basement of the community center. Construction is scheduled to be completed this year.

"ALSO, KOPP PARK swimming pool is expected to open in June Construction to convert the pool to an indoor facility is scheduled to be completed in time for the summer season And improvements slated for all the parks in the district are coming along well This includes additional lighted baseball diamonds at Lions and Kopp Parks as well as general improvements," Jackson said.

"I think the park district will be in good shape this summer, and we'll all be busy putting our plans to work I'm just happy and very pleased we're finally beginning to realize all the plans and projects which we set out to do more than a year ago," Jackson said

Lo, The Lovely Laundromat

by DAVE PALERMO

Only in America can you take a handful of quarters and dimes and in an hour's time, do your entire dirty wash

With the invention of the automatic washer came the laundromat

The laundromat has become a kind of American institution. Like the corner drug store, the barber shop and the train depot.

The laundromat at the corner of Central Road and Main Street in Mount Prospect is a typical one

THERE'S A coin-changer, a soap and bleach vending machine, a few chairs and rows of washers and dryers.

Even the smell is the same in laundromats. The odor of warm, dry linen. The heat diffusing from the dryers that renders an air conditioner useless.

A laundromat also is a kind of gathering place of strangers. People with nothing in common except a lack of home washer and dryer.

There was a group of about 10 people in the Speed Wash one night this week at 7 p.m.

Going to a laundromat isn't a formal affair. Faded blue jeans, outfashioned blouses, T-shirts, levis and loafers. There's no sense "jazzing up" just to do the laundry

A young woman in her 20's was talking to an older woman as their clothes revolved around and around in the coin operated machines.

A MAN AND his wife were sitting in a corner not talking much. Killing time.

He had a full beard, a black stocking cap and a dark jacket. He looked like a merchant marine.

A young mother came in a few minutes later with her 10-year-old daughter and a baby in a basket which she placed on a metal table.

The 10-year-old was relegated to the job of baby watching while she did her homework. Her mother began taking the clothes out of the plastic basket and into one of the washers.

ANOTHER WOMAN, folding her wash, stared at the baby.

She could have been an old-looking 40 or a young-looking 60. She had dyed black hair, plastic rimmed glasses and wore a bright yellow-and-black pants-blouse combination.

A young boy and his sister, each about eight-years-old, played with a rubber ball. They would bounce it back and forth across the linnoleum floor.

They were both bored. Children are found in laundromats for the most part because there's no one to watch them at home It's a long hour for them. A wasted hour

THE "MERCHANT marine" and his wife got up and went to one of the dryers and began pulling out a green rug directly into a wire stroller.

Finally, removed, they looked down at the mass of material and began folding it.

A young girl with a green sweater and white Levis lent a hand and the three of them each grabbed a corner and folded the rug like the Boy Scouts fold the American flag. It was a group effort.

The "merchant marine" and his wife thanked the young girl and left.

Another lady, tall and big-boned and wearing a faded red dress, began sorting out her clothes and putting them into a washer.

THE TWO CHILDREN stopped chasing the ball. The girl sat down and the boy grabbed a plastic waste basket (everything's plastic nowadays) and began dragging it back and forth down one of the aisles.

The lady in the red dress left with her two loads of clean wash just as another mother with her young child came in.

The routine of putting the clothes in, adding the detergent, and dropping in the coins began once again.

He Gets Free Ride To The 'Cop Shop'

Getting there is half the fun, especially if it's a free ride.

But, that's not how the system works in Mount Prospect.

Ragner Lind, 69, of 249 E Prospect Road, was charged with theft of services by Mount Prospect police Wednesday after he refused to pay a taxi fare from the Chicago Loop to his home.

A TAXI DRIVER for the Abernathy Cab Co. of Chicago gave Lind a ride to the police station when he refused to pay the $13 fare and signed a complaint against him for theft of services.

Lind's bail is set at $1,000 and he is scheduled to appear in Mount Prospect Court April 2. He is still in jail in lieu of bond, Mount Prospect police said.

Crane Won't Talk

A scheduled speech tonight by U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-13th, to the Elk Grove Village Republican Club has been cancelled and club leaders are putting the blame on Township GOP Committeeman Carl Hansen.

Crane was to have addressed the club at 8 p.m. in the Holiday Inn, Elk Grove Village.

Last Friday, however, club officials received a telegram from the congressman saying he would have to attend another function tonight and that he was sorry he would have to cancel the Elk Grove speech.

In a letter to club members this week, Joe Jennings, club president, said Hansen apparently had brought pressures against Crane not to speak to the club since it is not a recognized arm of the Regular Republican Organization of Elk Grove Township.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, Hansen told the Herald he knew nothing about the cancellation and said it was a matter between the club and the congressman.

"I'm sure when Crane says he's busy, he's busy," Hansen said. "He's a hard-working congressman and his schedule is subject to change, just as Donald Rumsfeld's schedule was when he was congressman"

Crane was unavailable for comment Thursday, but his administrative assistant in Washington, Jerry Harkins, told the Herald that Crane did have another commitment for tonight and that was the reason for the cancellation

Harkins also explained that speeches by Crane to political organizations within the district are handled through the local township committeemen and that they are generally made only to recognized Republican organizations

ACCORDING TO Jennings, the Republican Club had explained to Crane what it was and that Crane should have known that the club was not an official arm of the township GOP unit when he accepted the invitation to speak on Feb 18.

"We had sent out 500 invitations and had rented a hall," Jennings said. "The unfortunate thing is that it makes Crane look bad and I don't think he's the one to blame."

Low-Cost Housing

by DAVE PALERMO

A group of about 25 civic-minded high school students were sprawled out in the living room at the home of Pastor Tom Howels of the Community Presbyterian Church in Mount Prospect

They were there volunteering to clean up a house in Wheeling for a Mexican-American woman who was left homeless in the Northwest suburbs They were planning how to do the job

Louis Archbold, a member of the Neighbors at Work (NAW) civic organization from Elk Grove Village told the youngsters the lack of low-cost housing in the Northwest suburbs isn't a problem restricted to minority groups such as Mexican Americans

HE TOLD them when they graduate from college they too will be forced to seek out inexpensive — sometimes sub-standard — housing

I don't know if they took Archbold seriously or gave it a second thought I would be inclined to believe that because independence is still something foreign to them something left to the vague, distant future that the youngsters didn't dwell on the idea more than a second or two

But what Archbold said was painfully true There are many recent college graduates and their wives struggling to scratch out a living in the Northwest suburbs

A month's rent shouldn't be higher than one week's salary after deductions In all reality these well-educated but inexperienced young people can't afford the cost of homes or apartments in the area

MOST ONE-bedroom apartments in the Northwest suburbs run from $160 to $200 a month. The two-bedroom apartments of course, are higher.

I don't care how many nephews or cousins you can count as exceptions. The fact is, if a recently-graduated college student is making $110 a week clear he can consider himself lucky.

A survey taken by the Mount Prospect Jaycees indicated that over 79 per cent of the people in Mount Prospect are making more than $10,000 a year. How many of these people do you think are recent college graduates?

In a way, because the cost of living is so high around here, the recent college graduate is literally poverty-stricken.

IT DOESN'T show on them They go to work in a sportscoat and tie and probably look happy and carefree. But they're going through a rugged period of their lives

As far as the college graduate is concerned, the new set of tires for the automobile will have to wait That doctor's appointment can easily be put off until next year No sense having any children until you can afford them.

A college education, once considered a definite plus, has now become a necessity which is too often taken for granted.

A YOUNG man or woman goes through four to six years of college to live a more comfortable life when they get out. They struggle to make that grade and look forward to the day when they graduate and the struggle ends.

Soon after they get out they come to the disillusioning realization that the struggle has just begun.

Court Upholds Tax Ruling

Elk Grove Township officials were in a quandary yesterday over an Illinois Supreme Court decision Tuesday upholding a lower court ruling that the township practice of keeping a portion of tax collections is unconstitutional

The decision may result in added taxes if the township decides to levy a tax to make up for the loss in excess fees.

"I don't know what we'll do," was township tax collector Arnold Scharnghausen's brief comment.

"We'll probably have to apply for a tax levy," said William Rohlwing, Township supervisor. "I don't know what we're going to do."

The town board was expected to meet to discuss the decision in conjunction with planning for the annual town meeting April 14 at which time the budget is approved by voters.

ROHLWING SAID he was a little surprised by the Supreme Court's action, explaining that he thought it would cut the amount of money the township may keep instead of eliminating it.

Cook County's 30 townships in the past have kept for their own governmental operations two per cent of taxes collected through local tax collectors

The high court ruling now holds that property taxes levied on a countywide basis and collected by local township collectors must all be turned over to the Cook County Treasurer's office for redistribution

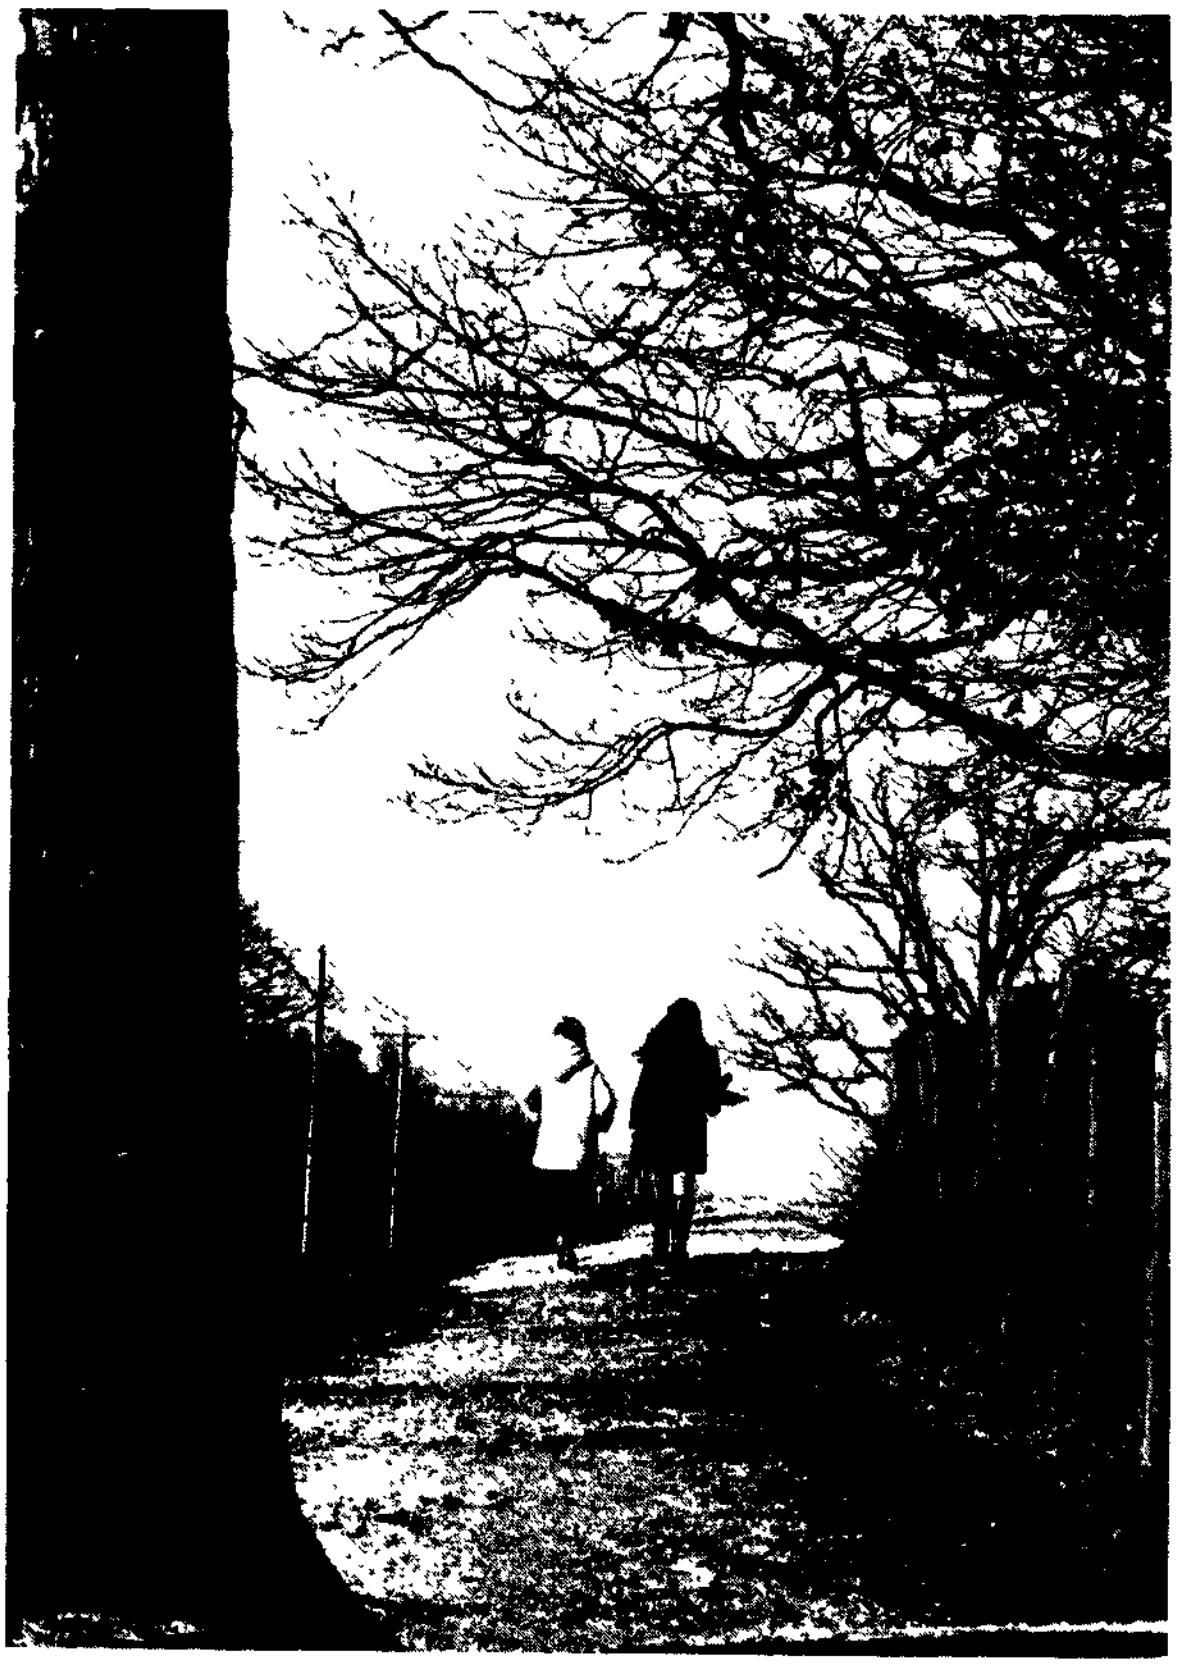
ELK GROVE TOWNSHIP had been distributing some of its commission funds to Elementary School Dists 59, 57, 25, and 15, the Northwest Mental Health Program, Clearbrook School for Retarded Children and local welfare recipients.

These services are now paid for out of the $340,000 commission turned over to the township collector when residents pay real estate and personal property taxes locally.

However, local taxing bodies now will receive their full tax levy which in the past was trimmed by two per cent which was kept by the townships under the excess fee system.

THE TOWNSHIP last year turned over $150,000 to local school districts. The largest recipient was Dist. 59 which received $116,550.

Lou Audi, director of finance for Dist. 59, said he was conservatively figuring on $80,000 for the district's next fiscal year. Now, Audi said he looked upon the $80,000 as a loss in revenue.



TOMORROW IS THE first day of Spring, but most people feel it is about two months late. Blossoms are shivering on their branches waiting for warm weather and golden sunlight to ring them into the season. Weary from a cold, damp winter people are beginning to think about such trifles as picnics, boat rides, walks, backyard barbecues and lemonade.

Village Woman Dies

Helen Wiskow, 65, of 319 E. Higgins Road, Elk Grove Village, died Tuesday in St. Alexius Hospital following an automobile accident Feb. 18 in the village

An inquest into the cause of the death was continued yesterday until March 31.

In the accident, Miss Wiskow suffered multiple injuries.

Wheeling Town Tax Considered

Wheeling Township officials may consider a tax for the township as a result of the Illinois Supreme Court's decision Tuesday declaring unconstitutional the township's practice of keeping a portion of property tax collections

Mrs Ethel Kolerus township supervisor said yesterday, "The only alternative is a tax levy"

Approval for the township to collect such a tax would have to come from the township's electors (registered voters). The electors' annual meeting is set for April 14 It is at that meeting that electors will consider the township's budget and appropriations ordinance for the upcoming fiscal year

Two weeks ago at a township auditors' meeting at which Mrs Kolerus presented the proposed budget to auditors, she said the outcome of the pending suit against the township excess fee collection system would have little effect on the township's proposed budget

IF A TAX LEVY for the township is approved the township would not begin to receive revenues until 1971, more than a year from now In the meantime, said Mrs. Kolerus, "Tax anticipation warrants might be very much a consideration depending on what the entire content of the (Supreme Court) opinions is. It depends on how much money the township will be allowed to have until it could collect taxes"

Mrs. Kolerus also said that until she knew more of the details of the court opinion, "I don't know what the disposition of the $150,000 in undistributed school funds that we are still holding will be" The funds were to have been distributed last year, but were frozen when the suit against the tax collectors was filed

The school money was part of the funds the township received as its portion of the property tax collection. Each year the electors decide how to distribute the funds that are collected but not needed by the township.

A public hearing on the township's proposed budgets will be held March 31 at the township hall in Arlington Heights. At that time electors also will consider the highway commissioner's budget. The Supreme Court decision has no effect on the highway commissioner's budget, because taxes are levied for the commissioner's budget.

'Blame Politics For Land Waste'

A picture as bleak as a smog-clouded sky and as sad as a putrefied forest was painted by William Rutherford last night, as the former head of the Illinois Conservation Department continued to wage his fight against patronage politics

Rutherford spoke before about 50 persons at the Mount Prospect VFW Hall. The meeting was called by the Wheeling Township Republican Club, and Rutherford took the advantage of his political audience to talk about the grisly facts of patronage in Illinois

Getting angrier by the minute, Rutherford ticked off the cruelties of an industrial state toward its prairie environment, and placed the blame for dead lakes and dirty skies on the lack of professionalism in government

"WE IN PUBLIC office should think of ourselves as your servants, not the victors" Rutherford said He then waded into the whole issue of patronage

"The worst price you pay is not in the lack of work under a patronage system, it is the fact that this system is a substitute for relief funds and it puts on the taxpayer's payroll the unemployables and the political hacks"

"Do you think we can meet this environmental crisis with political appointees?" Rutherford asked "The time is very late but our whole lives are at stake, and we are making a desert out of Illinois in record time"

The former conservation director sounded a roll call of diminishing species of Illinois wildlife. "The bald eagle, the canvasback duck, the plants and animals that we require for flesh and fiber are going, and we have no one to blame but ourselves"

RUTHERFORD told his audience that when he assumed the directorship of the conservation department and called a meeting of the department heads, it was the first time such a meeting had been called in the memory of any man present.

Rutherford also said that the head of law enforcement of the Conservation Department had not spent one day on the job in five months, that he was drawing a salary and that he was accountable to no one for his work.

"Each time you turned over a new rock in that department," Rutherford said, "you found a new worm."

RUTHERFORD, a slim, intense lawyer from Peoria, said there were people on the payroll involved with water safety who could not swim, that the forest rangers of the state were "underpaid and underled," and that much of the department was really a private hunting and fishing club for elite members of state government

"Equal justice under the law means equal use of government facilities," Rutherford said, pointing out that he demanded each of his employees put in a full day's work with no hunting or fishing on the job

At the end of his talk, with the fire still in his eyes and the tenseness still in his voice, Rutherford cried out for public awareness of the environmental crisis.

"By God, we can't lick it with patronage politics, and that is the message I leave with you."

Dissent...And Our Society

by MARY REIFSCHNEIDER

"What pain is to the body, dissent is to the body politic," Jay Miller, executive director of the Illinois division of the American Civil Liberties Union, said Wednesday.

Miller spoke at the Beth Tikvah Temple Men's Club in Hoffman Estates on civil liberties, moral law and dissent.

Discussing civil disorder, demonstrations and riots, led by minorities and the new left, which have become increasingly frequent in this country Miller said. "Dissent reflects problems in society"

Government reacts to civil disorder and dissent in two ways It finds the underlying problem and creates order or it suppresses the disorder "Historically societies suppress the disorder," Miller said.

DURING LYDON Johnson's administration, the federal government tried both ways, but "since then there's been a unanimity in government that points to suppression," he said.

Congressional reaction to dissent is reflected in the 1968 anti-riot act that the Conspiracy 8 defendants were indicted under The present attorney general "proposes almost weekly a new law that would violate constitutional rights" Miller said

Laws that would permit arresting and holding persons on a "suspicion" without making an actual charge "are anger creating and humiliating situations," too often used against minorities by police, he said

The situation often leads to a more serious charge and police brutality, he said.

"NEARLY EVERY riot in this country started with an incident between a policeman and a private citizen. But it would be stupid to think or charge police with causing riots Underlying social problems are the cause," Miller said

The country not only has suppression to contend with now, but also polarization, the speaker said The polarization ratio now is 80-20, with "80 per cent wanting dissenters silenced," Miller said

In talking about the Conspiracy trial, Miller said the "demonstrators who came to Chicago (for the 1968 political convention) were never permitted their constitutional rights."

The 1968 law making it illegal to cross state lines to incite a riot, for which the Conspiracy 8 defendants were tried, is considered unconstitutional by the ACLU

Miller said inciting refers to speech a guaranteed right in the First Amendment

"THOSE OF us who believe and work within the system, lost in the Conspiracy Trial," he said

The trial didn't deal with the problems. "The judge and prosecutors were so unfair, that the trial was a caricature of what society is about," he said

Referring to the defendants Miller said, "Maybe you don't like them, but defending their rights is what constitutional democracy is about"

If the defendants had gone to the court room shaved and with prestigious attorneys, they probably would have been acquitted, Miller said

The government hasn't learned much from the trial, he added "To them, the only mistake was allowing the defendants to speak to the press"

He agreed that a real danger arising from civil disorders caused by the new left (Students for a Democratic Society Weatherman faction, etc.) is government suppression that finally cause the silent majority to rise-up.

FASCISM STARTED with Hitler and Mussolini being elected, he said.

"Those who want to see constitutional democracy continue, must deal with the underlying problems," Miller said. The present system is still viable, he said pointing to examples of conclusions reached in the establishment oriented Eisenhower and Kerner reports that social problems cause riots.

He had a bright note on today's youth "For the first time since 1776, we're raising a generation that understands and is committed to constitutional rights," he said

Miller has been the Illinois ACLU director since 1965

He previously served as director of the Peace Education Program of the American Friends Service Committee in Illinois and Wisconsin He has worked closely with the civil rights movement as a consultant and organizer

Tickets on Sale

Tickets for a 2½ hour film about the work of Martin Luther King can be purchased anytime after 1 p.m. daily at the Mount Prospect Cinema, 827 E. Rand Road, Mount Prospect.

Cost for the tickets are $5 each and the film will be shown only once at 8 p.m., Tuesday.

The showing of the film in the Northwest suburbs will coincide with similar showings of the film in some 1,000 theaters in 300 cities nationwide the same night.

PRODUCED BY ELY LANDAU, the film is a historical narrative of King's work and life from 1955 until the time of his assassination.

Every facet of the film and its screening is being donated, including the use of theaters, and all monies derived from the showing will be given to the Martin Luther King Jr. special fund. No money will go to individuals or commercial ventures.

Donations for the tickets are tax deductible, according to sponsors of the film

Groups which are sponsoring the nationwide screening include the National Conference on Churches of Christ in the U.S.A., Church Women United, Synagogue Council of America, and the United States Catholic Council.

Query Witness' Testimony

by PAT GERLACH

The credibility of testimony delivered by an "expert" witness appeared shadowed during cross-examination by attornies representing several local homeowners groups during a Hoffman Estates Zoning Board hearing observed by a group of more than 250 persons Wednesday night.

Involved is a proposed change in zoning from commercial to planned residential development for a 78-acre tract of land just north of the primarily undeveloped Howie-in-the-Hills subdivision.

Approval of the requested alteration in zoning would permit construction of a 1,352 unit apartment complex and convenience shopping center along Palatine Road.

The $25 million development would consist of 28-four story elevator buildings and would have an overall mix of 60 per cent one-bedroom units and 40 per cent two-bedroom apartments.

THIS WEEK Robert Haskins, an attorney representing the publicly undisclosed developer, presented Philip Zeitlin, a paid consultant and planning and zoning expert, who attested to the fact that the highest and best use of the land involved, in his opeinion, is the proposed apartment development.

In his experience as assistant commissioner of planning and zoning for the city of Chicago, Zeitlin, who holds a degree in architecture from Illinois Institute of Technology and a masters degree in city planning from Harvard University, said he has had extensive work to his credit to qualify him as an expert in these fields.

Although he has been primarily involved in Chicago zoning matters he has also served as a paid consultant to developers planning projects in Deerfield, Glenview, Rolling Meadows, Alsip, Waukegan and Orland Park.

ON QUESTIONING from Village Atty. Edward Hofert, Zeitlin admitted that his involvement in the Rolling Meadows project, known as Fairfax Village, was in excess of two years ago and he could not remember the location of the 20-acre townhouse complex.

Responding to questions from Hofert, Bill Weaver, a zoning board member, and several attornies representing homeowners, Zeitlin could not fully explain the reasoning which led him to make the highest and best usage judgment.

He said that this opinion was formulated, to a great degree, through information presented to him by others serving as witnesses in the hearings who were experts in other fields.

Zeitlin said that the rolling terrain of the land involved in this proposal gave it a character adaptable to multiple family zoning but could not give an opinion on other land surrounding the subject parcel which has similar contour.

WEAVER REPEATEDLY asked Zeitlin if, when engaged in the project by the petitioner, the consultant was given various choices to work from in making a decision regarding land use.

It was subsequently revealed that Zeitlin had been retained as a consultant by a petitioner, whose identity the planning expert says is unknown to him, to come to the conclusion attested to in this week's hearing.

After lengthly questioning of Zeitlin by attornies representing homeowners in Inverness and unincorporated areas of Barrington and Palatine townships which abut the land involved, Haskins asked Board Chairman Robert T. Valentino to rule on the cross-examination methods being used. Haskins claimed that Zeitlin was being ridiculed.

"I HAVE BEEN here for four hearings and I hope that I am welcome to come back a fifth or sixth time if necessary and be treated in a gentlemanly manner," he said, quickly adding, "and, maybe I'll be seeing you people in the courts."

Valentino asked that attornies and others questioning the witness confine their activities to questions pertinent to Zeitlin's testimony.

Hearings are attracting a large number of homeowners in the area of the development who do not wish to see the land developed as an apartment complex.

They also feel that there are potential water run-off problems as well as a possible water shortage.

Testimony is scheduled to continue at the next scheduled hearing which has been set for Wed., April 22 at 7:30 p.m. at Hoffman School.

Big Day for Harper

cial affairs, projects about $64,000 in chargeback revenue in 1971-72 The college this year gained more than $880,000 in chargeback revenue.

THE OVERRIDING argument for the referendum, of course, is that Harper College has produced a quality two-year educational program, and the additional tax funds will cover the anticipated losses during the next few years.

According to a fact book prepared by Mann, the college will face a $1 million deficit in the educational fund this coming academic year if the tax rate increase is not approved. In the building fund this year money has been transferred in from the education fund to cover a loss.

The loss will grow more severe in the coming years, said Mann, unless the tax hike is granted. If the money is not available, the college may be forced to cut programs, close buildings, and generally reduce all but basic programs.

Dr. Robert Lahti, president of the college, has pointed out the full tax rate will have to be levied next year just to meet expenses, assuming the voters approve it.

The principal argument against passage of the tax hike is, of course, financial. Some voters feel another tax increase is one increase too many.

HARPER OFFICIALS argue that the increase, although it may sound large, is relatively small. Harper gets only 3 cents out of a tax dollar, and passage of the two fund increases would mean an additional $17 tax bill on a home assessed at $10,000.

Another argument is that Harper has not raised tuition enough. It is argued that the college should have asked more than the present $8 per credit hour rate (using current projections, Harper could have set the rate at $10 or $12).

Harper officials counter that they couldn't project the number of students last fall, so they had to set the rate in advance (they can gain only one-third of expenses through tuition) and that they wanted low-tuition education. And they point out that their projections show a $10 tuition rate in 1971-72, while holding the rate steady this fall at $8.

Those are some of the basic arguments and, of course, there are others. Today, the Harper officials and interested citizens will relax momentarily then begin the vigil until the final results are posted on Mann's bulletin board.

A rejection by the voters would not mean that the college's buildings would be leveled and the college's 218-acre campus turned into Chicago's third airport. But action on the referendum will determine whether Harper continues to expand at its present rate.

Tomorrow Is Big Day For Harper College

by TOM WELLMAN

Tomorrow the voting-age registered citizens of the Harper College district will decide how much money the three-year-old community college can count on in the next several years.

Residents will act to approve or reject an 11-cent increase in the education fund tax rate and a six-cent hike in the building (maintenance) fund tax rate.

Polling places will be open from noon to 7 p m Saturday at 43 different locations, mostly schools, throughout the four-township area of Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Palatine, as well as in parts of the cities of Des Plaines, Barrington and Carpentersville.

The vote totals from the polling places will be brought into the business office of the community college, located at the intersection of Algonquin and Roselle roads in Palatine, to be recorded.

Polling places for Harper College referendum are on Page 3.

AND NO ONE at the college is overly optumistic about passage of both tax hikes.

Various college officials have pointed out a lack of positive interest from the community about the referendum. A series of public appearances by officials has been held to explain the referendum, but a large outpouring of vocal public support has not materialized.

However, there is no apparent organized opposition at this time, either. The Herald has received perhaps three or four calls objecting to the referendum.

College officials and outside observers believe a recent series of Sunday open houses may aid passage tremendously. The six open houses drew more than 3,000 persons to the campus to take guided tours and to see a film strip on the college's achievements.

But it's the lack of public response that bothers college officials. They have watched as a McHenry County referendum for a junior college was defeated recently and as a $105 million sewer bond referendum in DuPage referendum was decisively rejected this week.

THEY ARE concerned, too, that area taxpayers will be feeling the squeeze of inflation too much to vote additional funds for the college. They feel the recent success of candidates on anti-inflation platforms may be a bad sign.

They also fear voter apathy, and there is an old maxim that a small turnout means that only the "no" voters have turned out.

If the two tax hikes are defeated, it won't be the last chance to raise the tax rate. The college could go for another try for the tax rate this fall. However, they would prefer passage Saturday.

At stake in the referendum vote is not only the financial future of Harper College but also possibly the reelection chances of two incumbent board members and three independent candidates. Another person, active in the pro-referendum campaign, will file for the Harper board this afternoon.

College officials and others interested in the referendum's success are, understandably, walking around on eggshells. They are encouraging registered students over 21 to vote and carefully watching to see that Harper's best foot goes forward prior to the election.

HARPER OFFICIALS and others have several primary arguments for the referendum. First, they point out that the college's growth to approximately 5,000 students in three years of operation has outstripped an enrollment projection by a consulting firm of 3,000 this year and that it has outstripped the tax base.

They point out that the growth means there is less taxable assessed valuation per student, so there is less revenue available. In effect, they point out Harper is too well filling an educational gap in the northwestern suburbs.

Also, they state that chargeback revenue — out-of-district tax money contributed by out-of-district students — will decline sharply this fall with the opening of the Niles-Maine Township community college.

South Park Dispute Settled

THE CONTINUOUS ROUTINE of putting clothes into a washer and later transferring them to a nearby dryer goes on daily in coin-operated laundromats like the Speed Wash in Mount Prospect. Laundromats, like the corner drug store and the barber shop, has become an American institution which is often taken for granted.

by GERRY DeZONNA

It's taken more than a year for the Mount Prospect Park District to square away its $2.4 million referendum approved by the voters Feb. 22, 1969.

A lawsuit challenging the validity of the referendum, which was narrowly approved by a 56-vote margin; the controversy over the West Park site, formerlly owned by builder Salvatore DiMucci; and a condemnation suit to obtain the land for South Park have been the stumbling blocks in the realization of the park district's referendum.

The settlement over South Park, a 30-acre site south of Algonquin Road at Route 83, yesterday ended more than a year of struggle by park district officials to honor the plans outlined in the referendum.

THE SHOUTING IS all over, and now, the work begins to improve and expand park district facilities as soon as possible.

Negotiations to obtain the South Park site for $18,750 per acre were concluded yesterday by Park Dist. Atty. William Ward and the owners of the property.

Szczesny Builders of Mount Prospect own a 20-acre parcel and Mrs. Melanie Goerger and her son, Martin E. Goerger, of Mount Prospect own 10 acres. The total tract will cost the park district $539,000.

"The purchase of the property will cost us about $39,000 more than appropriated by the referendum, but we already have the money for the additional expenditure. When the park district sold its bonds, we were still trying to settle West and South Parks so we invested the money in federal treasury notes until the issues were settled," Robert Jackson, chairman of the park board, explained.

"WE'VE ACCUMULATED about $40,000 in interest on the money, so we can afford to pay the additional cost for South Park without appropriating additional monies not outlined in the referendum," he said.

Condemnation suits had been filed more than a year ago against Mrs. Goerger and Goerger and Szczesny Builders for acquisition of the property, but settlements with both owners were reached out of court.

"The settlement price per acre is a compromise on the appraisals submitted to the park district, Szczesny Builders and the Goergers. I think it's a real fair price and everyone involved in the settlement seems to be pleased. We're very pleased, to say the least, since the park district has finally completed all the negotiations in the referendum," Jackson said.

Jackson said a greenhouse, which is located on the Goergers' property and owned and operated by them, will not have to be vacated for about 2 years after sale of the property. "We want to give them plenty of time to transfer the business and relocate with as little trouble as possible.

"THE GREENHOUSE and the Goerger residence will not affect park district plans for the property. I think it's more important they have an adequate amount of time to move and relocate the business," Jackson said.

South Park, the largest of the two new park sites, will be developed as an all-purpose community park. Facilities will include baseball diamonds, football fields, tennis courts, cycling paths, play apparatus and a shelter.

Long-range plans include the addition of a community center and swimming pool complex.

Jackson said despite delays in implementing park district plans outlined by the referendum, most park improvements will be completed on time. "Construction on the Lion's Park community center is going very well, especially the facilities for the youth center, which will be located in the basement of the community center. Construction is scheduled to be completed this year.

"ALSO, KOPP PARK swimming pool is expected to open in June. Construction to convert the pool to an indoor facility is scheduled to be completed in time for the summer season. And improvements slated for all the parks in the district are coming along well. This includes additional lighted baseball diamonds at Lions and Kopp Parks as well as general improvements," Jackson said.

"I think the park district will be in good shape this summer, and we'll all be busy putting our plans to work. I'm just happy and very pleased we're finally beginning to realize all the plans and projects which we set out to do more than a year ago," Jackson said.

Lo, The Lovely Laundromat

by DAVE PALERMO

Only in America can you take a handful of quarters and dimes and in an hour's time, do your entire dirty wash.

With the invention of the automatic washer came the laundromat.

The laundromat has become a kind of American institution. Like the corner drug store, the barber shop and the train depot.

The laundromat at the corner of Central Road and Main Street in Mount Prospect is a typical one.

THERE'S A coin-changer, a soap and bleach vending machine, a few chairs and rows of washers and dryers.

Even the smell is the same in laundromats. The odor of warm, dry linen. The heat diffusing from the dryers that renders an air conditioner useless.

A laundromat also is a kind of gathering place of strangers. People with nothing in common except a lack of home washer and dryer.

There was a group of about 10 people in the Speed Wash one night this week at 7 p m.

Going to a laundromat isn't a formal affair. Faded blue jeans, outfashioned blouses, T-shirts, levis and loafers. There's no sense "jazzing up" just to do the laundry.

A young woman in her 20's was talking to an older woman as their clothes revolved around and around in the coin operated machines.

A MAN AND his wife were sitting in a corner not talking much. Killing time.

He had a full beard, a black stocking cap and a dark jacket. He looked like a merchant marine.

A young mother came in a few minutes later with her 10-year-old daughter and a baby in a basket which she placed on a metal table.

The 10-year-old was relegated to the job of baby watching while she did her homework. Her mother began taking the clothes out of the plastic basket and into one of the washers.

ANOTHER WOMAN, folding her wash, stared at the baby.

She could have been an old-looking 40 or a young-looking 60. She had dyed black hair, plastic rimmed glasses and wore a bright yellow-and-black pants-blouse combination.

A young boy and his sister, each about eight-years-old, played with a rubber ball. They would bounce it back and forth across the linoleum floor.

They were both bored. Children are found in laundromats for the most part because there's no one to watch them at home. It's a long hour for them. A wasted hour.

THE "MERCHANT marine" and his wife got up and went to one of the dryers and began pulling out a green rug directly into a wire stroller.

Finally, removed, they looked down at the mass of material and began folding it.

A young girl with a green sweater and white Levis lent a hand and the three of them each grabbed a corner and folded the rug like the Boy Scouts fold the American flag. It was a group effort.

The "merchant marine" and his wife thanked the young girl and left.

Another lady, tall and big-boned and wearing a faded red dress, began sorting out her clothes and putting them into a washer.

THE TWO CHILDREN stopped chasing the ball. The girl sat down and the boy grabbed a plastic waste basket (everything's plastic nowadays) and began dragging it back and forth down one of the aisles.

The lady in the red dress left with her two loads of clean wash just as another mother with her young child came in.

The routine of putting the clothes in, adding the detergent, and dropping in the coins began once again.

He Gets Free Ride To The 'Cop Shop'

Getting there is half the fun, especially if it's a free ride.

But, that's not how the system works in Mount Prospect.

Ragner Lind, 69, of 249 E. Prospect Road, was charged with theft of services by Mount Prospect police Wednesday after he refused to pay a taxi fare from the Chicago Loop to his home.

A TAXI DRIVER for the Abernathy Cab Co. of Chicago gave Lind a ride to the police station when he refused to pay the $13 fare and signed a complaint against him for theft of services.

Lind's bail is set at $1,000 and he is scheduled to appear in Mount Prospect Court April 2. He is still in jail in lieu of bond, Mount Prospect police said.

Crane Won't Talk

A scheduled speech tonight by U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-13th, to the Elk Grove Village Republican Club has been cancelled and club leaders are putting the blame on Township GOP Committeeman Carl Hansen.

Crane was to have addressed the club at 8 p m. in the Holiday Inn, Elk Grove Village.

Last Friday, however, club officials received a telegram from the congressman saying he would have to attend another function tonight and that he was sorry he would have to cancel the Elk Grove speech.

In a letter to club members this week, Joe Jennings, club president, said Hansen apparently had brought pressures against Crane not to speak to the club since it is not a recognized arm of the Regular Republican Organization of Elk Grove Township.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, Hansen told the Herald he knew nothing about the cancellation and said it was a matter between the club and the congressman.

"I'm sure when Crane says he's busy, he's busy," Hansen said. "He's a hard-working congressman and his schedule is subject to change, just as Donald Rumsfeld's schedule was when he was congressman."

Crane was unavailable for comment Thursday, but his administrative assistant in Washington, Jerry Harkins, told the Herald that Crane did have another commitment for tonight and that was the reason for the cancellation.

Harkins also explained that speeches by Crane to political organizations within the district are handled through the local township committeemen and that they are generally made only to recognized Republican organizations.

ACCORDING TO Jennings, the Republican Club had explained to Crane what it was and that Crane should have known that the club was not an official arm of the township GOP unit when he accepted the invitation to speak on Feb. 18.

"We had sent out 500 invitations and had rented a hall," Jennings said. "The unfortunate thing is that it makes Crane look bad and I don't think he's the one to blame."

Low-Cost Housing

by DAVE PALERMO

A group of about 25 civic-minded high school students were sprawled out in the living room at the home of Pastor Tom Howels of the Community Presbyterian Church in Mount Prospect

They were there volunteering to clean up a house in Wheeling for a Mexican-American woman who was left homeless in the Northwest suburbs They were planning how to do the job

Louis Archbold, a member of the Neighbors at Work (NAW) civic organization from Elk Grove Village, told the youngsters the lack of low-cost housing in the Northwest suburbs isn't a problem restricted to minority groups such as Mexican-Americans

HE TOLD them when they graduate from college they too will be forced to seek out inexpensive — sometimes substandard — housing

I don t know if they took Archbold seriously or gave it a second thought I would be inclined to believe that because independence is still something foreign to them something left to the vague, distant future that the youngsters didn t dwell on the idea more than a second or two

But what Archbold said was painfully true There are many recent college graduates and their wives struggling to scratch out a living in the Northwest suburbs

A month's rent shouldn't be higher than one week's salary after deductions In all reality these well educated but inexperienced young people can't afford the cost of homes or apartments in the area

MOST ONE-bedroom apartments in the Northwest suburbs run from $160 to $200 a month The two-bedroom apartments of course are higher

I don t care how many nephews or cousins you can count as exceptions The fact is if a recently-graduated college student is making $110 a week clear he can consider himself lucky

A survey taken by the Mount Prospect Jaycees indicated that over 79 per cent of the people in Mount Prospect are making more than $10 000 a year How many of these people do you think are recent college graduates?

In a way, because the cost of living is so high around here, the recent college graduate is literally poverty-stricken

IT DOESN'T show on them They go to work in a sportscoat and tie and probably look happy and carefree But they're going through a rugged period of their lives

As far as the college graduate is concerned the new set of tires for the automobile will have to wait That doctor's appointment can easily be put off until next year No sense having any children until you can afford them

A college education, once considered a definite plus has now become a necessity which is too often taken for granted

A YOUNG man or woman goes through four to six years of college to live a more comfortable life when they get out They struggle to make that grade and look forward to the day when they graduate and the struggle ends

Soon after they get out they come to the disillusioning realization that the struggle has just begun

Court Upholds Tax Ruling

Elk Grove Township officials were in a quandary yesterday over an Illinois Supreme Court decision Tuesday upholding a lower court ruling that the township practice of keeping a portion of tax collections is unconstitutional

The decision may result in added taxes if the township decides to levy a tax to make up for the loss in excess fees

I don t know what we ll do," was township tax collector Arnold Scharringhausen's brief comment

"We'll probably have to apply for a tax levy said William Rohlwing, Township supervisor "I don't know what we're going to do "

The town board was expected to meet to discuss the decision in conjunction with planning for the annual town meeting April 14 at which time the budget is approved by voters

ROHLWING SAID he was a little surprised by the Supreme Court's action, explaining that he thought it would cut the amount of money the township may keep instead of eliminating it

Cook County's 30 townships in the past have kept for their own governmental operations two per cent of taxes collected through local tax collectors

The high court ruling now holds that property taxes levied on a countywide basis and collected by local township collectors must all be turned over to the Cook County Treasurer s office for redistribution

ELK GROVE TOWNSHIP had been distributig some of its commission funds to Elementary School Dists 59 57 25, and 15, the Northwest Mental Health Program Clearbrook School for Retarded Children and local welfare recipients

These services are now paid for out of the $340,000 commission turned over to the township collector when residents pay real estate and personal property taxes locally

However local taxing bodies now will receive their full tax levy which in the past was trimmed by two per cent which was kept by the townships under the excess fee system

THE TOWNSHIP last year turned over $150,000 to local school districts The largest recipient was Dist 59 which received $116,550

Lou Audi, director of finance for Dist 59 said he was conservatively figuring on $86,000 for the district's next fiscal year Now, Audi said he looked upon the $80 000 as a loss in revenue

TOMORROW IS THE first day of Spring, but most people feel it is about two months late Blossoms are shivering on their branches waiting for warm weather and golden sunlight to ring them into the season. Weary from a cold, damp winter people are beginning to think about such trifles as picnics, boat rides, walks, backyard barbecues and lemonade.

Village Woman Dies

Helen Wiskow, 65, of 319 E Higgins Road, Elk Grove Village, died Tuesday in St Alexius Hospital following an automobile accident Feb 18 in the village

An inquest into the cause of the death was continued yesterday until March 31

In the accident, Miss Wiskow suffered multiple injuries

Wheeling Town Tax Considered

Wheeling Township officials may consider a tax for the township as a result of the Illinois Supreme Court's decision Tuesday declaring unconstitutional the township's practice of keeping a portion of property tax collections

Mrs Ethel Kolerus township supervisor, said yesterday "The only alternative is a tax levy "

Approval for the township to collect such a tax would have to come from the township's electors (registered voters) The electors' annual meeting is set for April 14 It is at that meeting that electors will consider the township's budget and appropriations ordinance for the upcoming fiscal year

Two weeks ago at a township auditors' meeting at which Mrs Kolerus presented the proposed budget to auditors, she said the outcome of the pending suit against the township excess fee collection system would have little effect on the township's proposed budget

IF A TAX LEVY for the township is approved, the township would not begin to receive revenues until 1971, more than a year from now In the meantime, said Mrs. Kolerus, "Tax anticipation warrants might be very much a consideration depending on what the entire content of the (Supreme Court) opinions is. It depends on how much money the township will be allowed to have until it could collect taxes "

Mrs Kolerus also said that until she knew more of the details of the court opinion, "I don't know what the disposition of the $150,000 in undistributed school funds that we are still holding will be " The funds were to have been distributed last year, but were frozen when the suit against the tax collectors was filed

The school money was part of the funds the township received as its portion of the property tax collection Each year the electors decide how to distribute the funds that are collected but not needed by the township

A public hearing on the township's proposed budgets will be held March 31 at the township hall in Arlington Heights At that time electors also will consider the highway commissioner's budget The Supreme Court decision has no effect on the highway commissioner's budget, because taxes are levied for the commissioner's budget

'Blame Politics For Land Waste'

A picture as bleak as a smog-clouded sky and as sad as a putrefied forest was painted by William Rutherford last night, as the former head of the Illinois Conservation Department continued to wage his fight against patronage politics

Rutherford spoke before about 50 persons at the Mount Prospect VFW Hall The meeting was called by the Wheeling Township Republican Club and Rutherford took the advantage of his political audience to talk about the grisly facts of patronage in Illinois

Getting angrier by the minute, Rutherford ticked off the cruelties of an industrial state toward its prairie environment, and placed the blame for dead lakes and dirty skies on the lack of professionalism in government

"WE IN PUBLIC office should think of ourselves as your servants, not the victors," Rutherford said He then waded into the whole issue of patronage

"The worst price you pay is not in the lack of work under a patronage system, it is the fact that this system is a substitute for relief funds and it puts on the taxpayer's payroll the unemployables and the political hacks "

"Do, you think we can meet this environmental crisis with political appointees? ' Rutherford asked "The time is very late, but our whole lives are at stake, and we are making a desert out of Illinois in record time "

The former conservation director sounded a roll call of diminishing species of Illinois wildlife "The bald eagle, the canvasback duck, the plants and animals that we require for flesh and fiber are going, and we have no one to blame but ourselves "

RUTHERFORD told his audience that when he assumed the directorship of the conservation department and called a meeting of the department heads, it was the first time such a meeting had been called in the memory of any man present

Rutherford also said that the head of law enforcement of the Conservation Department had not spent one day on the job in five months, that he was drawing a salary and that he was accountable to no one for his work

"Each time you turned over a new rock in that department," Rutherford said, "you found a new worm "

RUTHERFORD, a slim, intense lawyer from Peoria, said there were people on the payroll involved with water safety who could not swim, that the forest rangers of the state were "underpaid and underled," and that much of the department was really a private hunting and fishing club for elite members of state government

"Equal justice under the law means equal use of government facilities," Rutherford said, pointing out that he demanded each of his employees put in a full day's work with no hunting or fishing on the job

At the end of his talk, with the fire still in his eyes and the tenseness still in his voice, Rutherford cried out for public awareness of the environmental crisis

"By God, we can't lick it with patronage politics, and that is the message I leave with you."

Dissent...And Our Society

by MARY REIFSCHNEIDER

"What pain is to the body, dissent is to the body politic," Jay Miller, executive director of the Illinois division of the American Civil Liberties Union, said Wednesday

Miller spoke at the Beth Tikvah Temple Men's Club in Hoffman Estates on civil liberties, moral law and dissent

Discussing civil disorder, demonstrations and riots, led by minorities and the new left, which have become increasingly frequent in this country Miller said 'Dissent reflects problems in society '

Government reacts to civil disorder and dissent in two ways It finds the underlying problem and creates order or it suppresses the disorder 'Historically societies suppress the disorder," Miller said

DURING LYDON Johnson's administration, the federal government tried both ways, but "since then there's been a unanimity in government that points to suppression," he said

Congressional reaction to dissent is reflected in the 1968 anti-riot act that the Conspiracy 8 defendants were indicted under The present attorney general "proposes almost weekly a new law that would violate constitutional rights Miller said

Laws that would permit arresting and holding persons on a suspicion without making an actual charge 'are anger creating and humiliating situations ' too often used against minorities by police he said

The situation often leads to a more serious charge and police brutality he said

"NEARLY EVERY riot in this country started with an incident between a policeman and a private citizen But it would be stupid to think or charge police with causing riots Underlying social problems are the cause," Miller said

The country not only has suppression to contend with now but also polarization, the speaker said The polarization ratio now is 80-20, with "80 per cent wanting dissenters silenced," Miller said

In talking about the Conspiracy trial Miller said the 'demonstrators who came to Chicago (for the 1968 political convention) were never permitted their constitutional rights "

The 1968 law making it illegal to cross state lines to incite a riot, for which the Conspiracy 8 defendants were tried is considered unconstitutional by the ACLU

Miller said inciting refers to speech a guaranteed right in the First Amendment

"THOSE OF us who believe and work within the system lost in the Conspiracy Trial," he said

The trial didn t deal with the problems 'The judge and prosecutors were so unfair that the trial was a caricature of what society is about he said

Referring to the defendants Miller said, 'Maybe you don t like them but defending their rights is what constitutional democracy is about

If the defendants had gone to the court room shaved and with prestigious attorneys they probably would have been acquitted Miller said

The government hasn t learned much from the trial, he added "To them the only mistake was allowing the defendants to speak to the press "

He agreed that a real danger arising from civil disorders caused by the new left (Students for a Democratic Society Weatherman faction, etc) is government suppression that finally cause the silent majority to rise-up

FASCISM STARTED with Hitler and Mussolini being elected, he said

' Those who want to see constitutional democracy continue, must deal with the underlying problems ' Miller said The present system is still viable, he said pointing to examples of conclusions reached in the establishment oriented Eisenhower and Kerner reports that social problems cause riots

He had a bright note on today s youth ' For the first time since 1776, we're raising a generation that understands and is committed to constitutional rights, ' he said

Miller has been the Illinois ACLU director since 1965

He previously served as director of the Peace Education Program of the American Friends Service Committee in Illinois and Wisconsin He has worked closely with the civil rights movement as a consultant and organizer

Tomorrow Is Big Day For Harper College

by TOM WELLMAN

Tomorrow the voting-age registered citizens of the Harper College district will decide how much money the three-year-old community college can count on in the next several years.

Residents will act to approve or reject an 11-cent increase in the education fund tax rate and a six-cent hike in the building (maintenance) fund tax rate.

Polling places will be open from noon to 7 p.m. Saturday at 43 different locations, mostly schools, throughout the four-township area of Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Palatine, as well as in parts of the cities of Des Plaines, Barrington and Carpentersville.

The vote totals from the polling places will be brought into the business office of the community college, located at the intersection of Algonquin and Roselle roads in Palatine, to be recorded.

Polling places for Harper College referendum are on Page 3.

AND NO ONE at the college is overly optimistic about passage of both tax hikes.

Various college officials have pointed out a lack of positive interest from the community about the referendum. A series of public appearances by officials has been held to explain the referendum, but a large outpouring of vocal public support has not materialized.

However, there is no apparent organized opposition at this time, either. The Herald has received perhaps three or four calls objecting to the referendum.

College officials and outside observers believe a recent series of Sunday open houses may aid passage tremendously. The six open houses drew more than 3,000 persons to the campus to take guided tours and to see a film strip on the college's achievements.

But it's the lack of public response that bothers college officials. They have watched as a McHenry County referendum for a junior college was defeated recently and as a $105 million sewer bond referendum in DuPage referendum was decisively rejected this week.

THEY ARE concerned, too, that area taxpayers will be feeling the squeeze of inflation too much to vote additional funds for the college. They feel the recent success of candidates on anti-inflation platforms may be a bad sign.

They also fear voter apathy, and there is an old maxim that a small turnout means that only the "no" voters have turned out.

If the two tax hikes are defeated, it won't be the last chance to raise the tax rate. The college could go for another try for the tax rate this fall. However, they would prefer passage Saturday.

At stake in the referendum vote is not only the financial future of Harper College but also possibly the reelection chances of two incumbent board members and three independent candidates. Another person, active in the pro-referendum campaign, will file for the Harper board this afternoon.

College officials and others interested in the referendum's success are, understandably, walking around on eggshells. They are encouraging registered students over 21 to vote and carefully watching to see that Harper's best foot goes forward prior to the election.

HARPER OFFICIALS and others have several primary arguments for the referendum. First, they point out that the college's growth to approximately 5,000 students in three years of operation has outstripped an enrollment projection by a consulting firm of 3,000 this year and that it has outstripped the tax base.

They point out that the growth means there is less taxable assessed valuation per student, so there is less revenue available. In effect, they point out Harper is too well filling an educational gap in the northwestern suburbs.

Also, they state that chargeback revenue — out-of-district tax money contributed by out-of-district students — will decline sharply this fall with the opening of the Niles-Maine Township community college.

IT'S REALLY OFF. School Dist. 25 announced last month that a trip to Disneyland, planned by an Olive School class, would not take place in the spring nor be sponsored by the school district. Since that time plans were made to take the children to the West Coast in June after school was out, with some parents and Mrs. Ridgely Jackson, Olive teacher, supervising the trip. Mrs. Jackson said yesterday that she must attend classes during the summer which conflict with the Disneyland date of departure and the trip will definitely not take place this year.

DISCUSSING the recently added position of patrolman, members of the Arlington Heights Park Board questioned the minimum age requirement of 23. Charles Cronin and Jack Edwards wanted the age upped to 25 and the other board members approved the change. Edward Condon noted, "You guys would really be great on the voting age issue."

THE PARK district's patrolman will use a car equipped with a spot light and other special items to discourage vandals. Park Board Pres. Charles Cronin jokingly suggested a machine gun be included and board member Roy Bressler added, "How about a flame thrower?"

A PARK USE application requesting the use of the gymnasium at Recreation Park for basketball was approved at this week's meeting of the park board. The request was filed by the stockboys at Jewel Food Store who wanted to play basketball. Cronin said he agreed with approving the application "provided they use basketballs and not grapefruit."

FORMER HOME for Mrs. Santos Lopez and her three children is located near Route 72 and Busse Road in Elk Grove Township. Family moved Monday into a church basement in Arlington Heights when electricity and water were turned off recently because of unpaid bills. Elk Grove Village Community Services Director Thomas E. Smith said attempts are being made to get the family another trailer inside a trailer court. Smith met yesterday with the woman's caseworker from the Cook County Department of Public Aid.

Family Moves to Church

A church in Arlington Heights is providing a temporary home for a family that was moved recently from a decrepit house trailer at 2118 E. Higgins Road, near Route 72 and Busse Road in Elk Grove Township. Since Monday, Mrs. Santos Lopez and her three children have been living in a basement room at the Congregational United Church of Christ, 1001 W. Kirchoff Road.

The Lopez family is the second to have been provided shelter by the church in recent months.

Mrs. Lopez has been living in a mobile home that is "grossly beyond repair," said Thomas E. Smith, director of Elk Grove Village Community Services.

"LIVING CONDITIONS in the trailer are very inadequate," continued Smith, "The floor boards are rotted out and water and electricity were turned off recently because of unpaid bills."

Mrs. Lopez, who is not living with her husband, has been living in the trailer for about three years. For two months this winter another couple was living with her family.

Smith said she receives $90 a month from the Cook County Department of Public Aid, not nearly enough for her to live on. It is her only source of income, he said.

He added she has difficulty communicating because she speaks mostly Spanish.

Tow of her children, students at Mark Hopkins School in Elk Grove Village, are driven to school by some friends. The other child is of pre-school age.

"I don't know how they could get along under those conditions," said Mrs. Diane Greenholdt, a member of a housing task force formed by Jack Pahl, Elk Grove Village president, to find homes for some 17 families in addition to developing a long-range plan for housing.

OF THE FAMILIES in need of housing, the Lopez family is the most in need of help, said Mrs. Greenholdt. Smith agreed.

Smith said Mrs. Lopez was supposed to be paying about $50 a month to park the trailer on the lot but that was more than a year behind in payments.

According to Smith, she had been told many months ago by the Maywood-Proviso State Bank, acting in behalf of a trust, that she must leave but that she could not find a place to go.

A spokesman for the bank said her husband had not made payments for more than a year. "We wanted her to leave because of the bad living conditions," said the spokesman.

The problem reached a head only recently, Smith said, when the water and electricity were turned off. Water was obtained from a nearby house but the family lived in virtual darkness, until school authorities told of the situation.

Smith said the family is one of the original of housing since a housing problem gained attention with the death of three children in November.

PRIOR TO THE shutting off of utilities, it had been hoped the family could live in the trailer until the task force found it alternate housing, Smith explained.

A meeting last Friday between individuals concerned about the housing of minority groups resulted in the church basement being made available through the Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows.

The Benito Gonzalez family previously occupied the church basement for several weeks after having been evicted in December from a dwelling Cook County authorities said was substandard.

County Building Commissioner Raymond Welsh agreed to let the family move back into their home near Arlington Heights and Algonquin roads "at their own risk" when it could not find another place to live.

Another family living in a church is that of Santana Gonzalez. He has been living in a room at the Elk Grove Wesleyan Church for almost 7 weeks while friends attempt to find a place to put a trailer parked at the rear of the church.

Lions Will Play Donkey B-Game

A donkey ball-game will be played between members of the Prospect Heights Lions Club and the Hersey High School faculty, including principal Roland Goins, tonight at 7:30 p.m., at the school.

Players will ride on donkeys during the game, provided by the Bob Crosby Donkey Ball Co., of Chippewa Falls, Wis.

Tickets are still on sale and can be obtained by contacting Sam Sampson. Residents who bought tickets for the earlier scheduling of the game may use them tonight.

Crane Won't Talk

A scheduled speech tonight by U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-13th, to the Elk Grove Village Republican Club has been cancelled and club leaders are putting the blame on Township GOP Committeeman Carl Hansen.

Crane was to have addressed the club at 8 p.m. in the Holiday Inn, Elk Grove Village.

Last Friday, however, club officials received a telegram from the congressman saying he would have to attend another function tonight and that he was sorry he would have to cancel the Elk Grove speech.

In a letter to club members this week, Joe Jennings, club president, said Hansen apparently had brought pressures against Crane not to speak to the club since it is not a recognized arm of the Regular Republican Organization of Elk Grove Township.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, Hansen told the Herald he knew nothing about the cancellation and said it was a matter between the club and the congressman.

"I'm sure when Crane says he's busy, he's busy," Hansen said. "He's a hard-working congressman and his schedule is subject to change, just as Donald Rumsfeld's schedule was when he was congressman."

Crane was unavailable for comment Thursday, but his administrative assistant in Washington, Jerry Harkins, told the Herald that Crane did have another commitment for tonight and that was the reason for the cancellation.

Harkins also explained that speeches by Crane to political organizations within the district are handled through the local township committeemen and that they are generally made only to recognized Republican organizations.

ACCORDING TO Jennings, the Republican Club had explained to Crane what it was and that Crane should have known that the club was not an official arm of the township GOP unit when he accepted the invitation to speak on Feb. 18.

"We had sent out 500 invitations and had rented a hall," Jennings said. "The unfortunate thing is that it makes Crane look bad and I don't think he's the one to blame."

'Politics Kills Land'

A picture as bleak as a smog-clouded sky and as sad as a putrefied forest was painted by William Rutherford last night, as the former head of the Illinois Conservation Department continued to wage his fight against patronage politics.

Rutherford spoke before about 50 persons at the Mount Prospect VFW Hall. The meeting was called by the Wheeling Township Republican Club, and Rutherford took the advantage of his political audience to talk about the grisly facts of patronage in Illinois.

Getting angrier by the minute, Rutherford ticked off the cruelties of an industrial state toward its prairie environment, and placed the blame for dead lakes and dirty skies on the lack of professionalism in government.

"WE IN PUBLIC office should think of ourselves as your servants, not the victors," Rutherford said. He then waded into the whole issue of patronage.

"The worst price you pay is not in the lack of work under a patronage system, it is the fact that this system is a substitute for relief funds and it puts on the taxpayer's payroll the unemployables and the political hacks."

"Do, you think we can meet this environmental crisis with political appointees?" Rutherford asked. "The time is very late, but our whole lives are at stake, and we are making a desert out of Illinois in record time."

The former conservation director sounded a roll call of diminishing species of Illinois wildlife. "The bald eagle, the canvasback duck, the plants and animals that we require for flesh and fiber are going, and we have no one to blame but ourselves."

RUTHERFORD told his audience that when he assumed the directorship of the conservation department and called a meeting of the department heads, it was the first time such a meeting had been called in the memory of any man present.

Rutherford also said that the head of law enforcement of the Conservation Department had not spent one day on the job in five months, that he was drawing a salary and that he was accountable to no one for his work.

"Each time you turned over a new rock in that department," Rutherford said, "you found a new worm."

RUTHERFORD, a slim, intense lawyer from Peoria, said there were people on the payroll involved with water safety who could not swim, that the forest rangers of the state were "underpaid and underled," and that much of the department was really a private hunting and fishing club for elite members of state government.

"Equal justice under the law means equal use of government facilities," Rutherford said, pointing out that he demanded each of his employees put in a full day's work with no hunting or fishing on the job.

At the end of his talk, with the fire still in his eyes and the tenseness still in his voice, Rutherford cried out for public awareness of the environmental crisis.

"By God, we can't lick it with patronage politics, and that is the message I leave with you."

Court Tax Ruling Upheld

Elk Grove Township officials were in a quandary yesterday over an Illinois Supreme Court decision Tuesday upholding a lower court ruling that the township practice of keeping a portion of tax collections is unconstitutional.

The decision may result in added taxes if the township decides to levy a tax to make up for the loss in excess fees.

"I don't know what we'll do," was township tax collector Arnold Scharinghausen's brief comment.

"We'll probably have to apply for a tax levy," said William Rohlwing, Township supervisor. "I don't know what we're going to do."

The town board was expected to meet to discuss the decision in conjunction with planning for the annual town meeting April 14 at which time the budget is approved by voters.

ROHLWING SAID he was a little surprised by the Supreme Court's action, explaining that he thought it would cut the amount of money the township may keep instead of eliminating it.

Cook County's 30 townships in the past have kept for their own governmental operations two per cent of taxes collected through local tax collectors.

The high court ruling now holds that property taxes levied on a countywide basis and collected by local township collectors must all be turned over to the Cook County Treasurer's office for redistribution.

ELK GROVE TOWNSHIP had been distributig some of its commission funds to Elementary School Dists. 59, 57, 25, and 15, the Northwest Mental Health Program, Clearbrook School for Retarded Children and local welfare recipients.

These services are now paid for out of the $340,000 commission turned over to the township collector when residents pay real estate and personal property taxes locally.

However, local taxing bodies now will receive their full tax levy which in the past was trimmed by two per cent which was kept by the townships under the excess fee system.

THE TOWNSHIP last year turned over $150,000 to local school districts. The largest recipient was Dist. 59 which received $116,550.

Lou Audi, director of finance for Dist. 59, said he was conservatively figuring on $80,000 for the district's next fiscal year. Now, Audi said he looked upon the $80,000 as a loss in revenue.

Wheeling Town Tax Considered

Wheeling Township officials may consider a tax for the township as a result of the Illinois Supreme Court's decision Tuesday declaring unconstitutional the township's practice of keeping a portion of property tax collections.

Mrs. Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said yesterday, "The only alternative is a tax levy."

Approval for the township to collect such a tax would have to come from the township's electors (registered voters). The electors' annual meeting is set for April 14. It is at that meeting that electors will consider the township's budget and appropriations ordinance for the upcoming fiscal year.

Two weeks ago at a township auditors' meeting at which Mrs. Kolerus presented the proposed budget to auditors, she said the outcome of the pending suit against the township excess fee collection system would have little effect on the township's proposed budget.

IF A TAX LEVY for the township is approved, the township would not begin to receive revenues until 1971, more than a year from now. In the meantime, said Mrs. Kolerus, "Tax anticipation warrants might be very much a consideration depending on what the entire content of the (Supreme Court) opinions is. It depends on how much money the township will be allowed to have until it could collect taxes."

Mrs. Kolerus also said that until she knew more of the details of the court opinion, "I don't know what the disposition of the $150,000 in undistributed school funds that we are still holding will be." The funds were to have been distributed last year, but were frozen when the suit against the tax collectors was filed.

The school money was part of the funds the township received as its portion of the property tax collection. Each year the electors decide how to distribute the funds that are collected but not needed by the township.

A public hearing on the township's proposed budgets will be held March 31 at the township hall in Arlington Heights. At that time electors also will consider the highway commissioner's budget. The Supreme Court decision has no effect on the highway commissioner's budget, because taxes are levied for the commissioner's budget.

IT'S A SIMPLE shot Mick Raupp tells Perry Zeller. Both boys won first places in the recent call shot pool tournaments held at Recreation Park, 500 E. Minor St. Mick placed first in the 14 through 17 year old division while Perry took first in the 10 through 13 year old division.

Announce 7 Winners

After about a month of competition, seven winners have emerged from a field of 165 in the Arlington Heights Park District's pool, chess and ping pong tournaments.

Robert Balfour took first place in the eight ball pool playing competition for 14 through 17-year-olds. Second place was won by Pat Anderson.

In the eight ball division for 10 through 13-year-olds, Don Barnak was the winner while Perry Zeller placed second.

Mick Raupp took first place in the call shot pool tournament for 14 through 17-year-olds while Ray Estrada took second place.

The call shot pool competition for 10 to 13-year-olds was won by Perry Zeller while Tim Lock placed second.

In the ping pong tournament, Bill Kirchhoff won the 14 through 17-year-old division and Dave Pollard placed second.

THE CHESS TOURNAMENT crown was captured by John Turner and Bill Pampel placed second.

The tournaments will be held again next year, according to Rodney Denisar, center director at Recreation Park.

Competitors in the ping pong tournaments will be entered in the West Suburban Recreation Directors' Association Table Tennis Tournament and the Illinois Parks and Recreation Society State Table Tennis Tournament. Both tournaments will be held during the first half of April.

Bill Kirchhoff will represent the Arlington Heights Park District in the competition in the tournaments for contestants 14 years old and older, Scott Narup will be entered in the boys' singles competition and Carl Langsenkamp will be in the competition for the midget boys' singles for ping pong players 11 years old and younger.

Don't Bother To Write

Suburban residents planning to write to friends in the New York City area today can put their pens away.

The New York area, plagued by telephone communications problems last year, is now having difficulties with mail. A strike by post office employes yesterday caused the U.S. Post Office to put an embargo on all mail coming into the area.

LETTERS AND parcels to New York City should not be placed in local mail boxes. If they are, they will remain at suburban post offices and not forwarded to New York until the embargo is lifted.

Areas which fall under the embargo order are New York City, Brooklyn, Bronx, Flushing, Staten Island, Far Rockaway, Jamaica, Mineola, Hicksville, Riverhead and Long Island City. The zip codes for and affected areas begin with 100 through 104 and 110 through 119.

They Went Ghetto-ing

Things got blacker for a busload of parishioners from the First United Methodist Church in Arlington Heights Saturday morning.

At 7:40 a.m., they boarded a yellow bus that took them out of the white cocoon known as the Northwest suburbs and into an ebony honeycomb that oozed sour honey.

Quietly glancing at the Operation Breadbasket literature on the bus, the sleepy-eyed riders bounced along as the bus headed southeast to the Capitol Theater and the Saturday morning service of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) Operation Breadbasket.

Arriving in Chicago's South Side, the passengers alighted from the conduit that had led them into a black community.

CHEERFULLY LED by Mrs. Isabel Hill, president of the Women's Society of Christian Service, the 37 visitors from the suburbs stepped into the cavern-like Capitol Theater. Walking past young black youngsters hawking Panther and Muslim newspapers, the visitors peered around with their necks stretched like cranes, trying to absorb the ornate grandeur of what was one of Chicago's finest movie theaters.

Nearly 3,000 black people filled the huge auditorium as the service was about to begin. The 37 silently took the only seats available in the rear and sat down together. They took off their coats, looked around and saw dashikis, naturals, and black amulets with a raised black fist on them. It was a world many of them had never seen before.

They cautiously stamped their feet to the hymns sung and clapped their hands when it seemed appropriate. It was hard for them to be completely at ease but they tried. And more importantly, they listened.

They listened when the Rev. Jesse Jackson came out and participated in the standing ovation he recieved. They stared intently at Chicago's black leader as he screamed, laughed, scolded, praised and guided his black following. In the revival meeting, political rally atmosphere, they smiled when an old black woman would scream "Right-on Jesse" or "You tell 'em Jesse."

WHETHER THEY understood or not isn't as important as the fact that they learned.

Afterwards, leaving the theater past the same hawking, independent newspaper youngsters, they looked at each other and admitted that what they saw and heard had been a valuable experience.

Munching a lunch on the yellow bus, they headed for the home of Lillian Jones, editor of the SCLC Operation Breadbasket News.

There, seated crosslegged on the floor or the edge of chairs, the 37 discussed what had happened that morning with Mrs. Jones and a black junior high school teacher.

They asked what white suburbia could do and were told "Be aware . . . Know what's happening and try to understand the black man."

Asking about the hunger manifesto and Breadbasket's fight to end hunger in Chicago, they were advised to write letters, call Mayor Daley and attend the Chicago City Council meetings on the matter.

RIDING BACK to Arlington Heights, the 37 looked satisfied and talked of other things on the bus. They had a right to be satisfied because they went out of their way to become more aware of what's happening outside their suburban lives.

Someone once said that you don't know what it's like to be a black person in America until you've been called "Nigger."

The 37 parishioners from the First United Methodist Church may not fully understand what it's like to be a black American but they're learning.

The Chaplain Wore Bars

by TOM ROBB

The middle-aged man stood before a group gathered to hear him speak.

He told them about a man who grew up in 8 foster homes and 4 penal institutions, who once threatend to kill one of his many foster parents, who witnessed another foster parent sexually ruin his two sisters, who turned to a world of crime and confusion.

His voice grew louder and his listeners fidgeted in their seats and tried to look unaffected by this man's words, as he asked them who they thought he was talking about.

"Richard Speck," someone said.

The man smiled, for he knew Richard Speck and many others who were once inmates of Cook County Jail where he is prison Chaplain.

"NO, HE SAID, that man is me — Rev. John Irwin, and my two sisters are prostitutes today. What the hell can you expect?"

Rev. Irwin has been the Protestant Chaplain of Cook County Jail for the last 15 years and he was addressing the men's club of the First Methodist Church of Palatine Wednesday night.

Rev. Irwin was autobiographically making the main point of his talk: men behind bars are men. They are human and they wanted to be treated accordingly.

"It is wrong to portray to the public an image of murders and sex maniacs standing behind bars. They are men, not animals, down there in Cook County Jail," he said.

TO ILLUSTRATE his point, Rev. Irwin said he was the 13th child born into a family of 14, that when he was three his father died, and at six he and two sisters were sent to the first of a series of foster homes, as his mother could not support the large family.

This upbringing aleinated him from society, led to a variety of trouble and caused frequent "run-ins with the law," Rev. Irwin said.

It wasn't until he was drafted into the Korean War, and "became scared of dying that I got religion," he said. At 22 he was "converted and ordained."

"What changed my life was a warm man who showed he cared and that he wanted to help me and be my friend. This is what it's all about."

AND THIS IS what Programmed Activities for Correctional Education (PACE) at the Cook County Jail, which he came to explain to the men's club, is all about.

PACE was started by Rev. Irwin about three years ago. It is a not-for-profit corporation designed to aid convicted criminals in classroom and vocational training.

"We have been 70 per cent successful with those who have been in PACE institute," he said. "These men are now working steadily and some are even putting themselves through school."

Rev. Irwin said that PACE now needs evening volunteers to help the men in their vocational and classroom training.

"Such work, getting in and being around these men, can transform your life and their lives. I know, because someone who cared transformed mine."

Sidewalks Turn 'em On

Sidewalks attract people to village meetings with a certainty you can count on.

Last night's special meeting for sidewalks on major thoroughfares in Arlington Heights brought about 70 concerned people to the Board of Local Improvements (BOLI) session.

"Sidewalks are an emotional issue," BOLI Chairman Russell Colvin admitted.

COOPER ROBERTS, a representative of Consoer, Townsend and Associates, consulting engineers, explained to the audience that any sidewalks probably will be installed one foot off the property line and be five feet wide and five inches thick. He estimated the cost for the sidewalks at $1.20 per square foot by special assessment, and a 30 per cent saving on that figure if installed by private contract.

He added that the major thoroughfares in question were Arlington Heights, Kirchoff, Central, Algonquin, Wilke, Rand, Euclid, Palatine and Kensington.

BOLI member Harold Klinger said that the board has until June 1 to decide whether to choose the means of financing the venture, though special assessment or private contract.

WHEN THE audience got its chance to speak, it used it.

"Why a sidewalk on Kirchoff?" was one of the first querries Colvin answered. "It is the policy of the village to have sidewalks on both sides of every major thoroughfare."

"But no one walks on the south side of Kirchoff and it's only an empty field."

Colvin explained that construction costs are rising and it would be cheaper to do it now.

MANY OLD TIMERS ARE STILL AROUND

New and powerful miracle drugs form the basis for most of the news we hear about advances in health care. But there are still a great many medicines being prescribed that have withstood the passage of time. Penicillin, digitalis, sulfur and ephedrine are just a few that are frequently prescribed by physicians.

These drugs, day in and day out, are saving lives, curing illnesses and alleviating pain. As long as they are considered effective they will continue to occupy a prominent place in our prescription laboratory.

Seniors Hear Homosexuality Talk

by JUDY COVELLI

As part of a sociology program for seniors at Elk Grove High School, six persons spoke on homosexuality Wednesday.

Speakers from several organizations have been invited to the class to acquaint the students with problems in society related to the class topics: dating, marriage, the family and human sexuality.

The speakers, members of the Gay Liberation and most of them university students in Chicago, are publicly acknowledged homosexuals.

They were invited to speak, according to Joseph Wellman, team-teacher, to provide the students the opportunity to ask questions of a segment of people upon whom the public looks strangely.

"I WANTED them to find out that they at least don't have three arms," Wellman said. "I wanted to dispel some of the myths around the idea of homosexuality."

Wellman explained that the topic arose when the classes began discussing attitudes toward the opposite sex.

"Among other things, we discussed the "Playboy Philosophy" and the growing feminist movement," he said.

He and Mrs. Sue Kaineg, who teamteach the classes in sociology, stressed that only senior sociology students were presented the speeches and that background had been given on the topic.

One of the members of the Gay Liberation, which is a united brotherhood of homosexuals, explained, "We're not here to recruit people, but to show that we are human beings and want to be respected as such."

WELLMAN EXPLAINED that the speakers were approved by the administration, pointing out that when speakers of a somewhat controversial nature are wanted by instructors they must be cleared through the division heads, who this time received permission from the principal.

Representatives from the National Organization of Women (NOW), termed a moderate feminist organization by Mrs. Kaineg, spoke to the sociology classes recently.

"The students had a more hostile reaction to NOW," Mrs. Kaineg said.

Other speakers, such as representatives from Women's International Terrorist Conspiracy from Hell (WITCH) have also been invited. This is a radical women's rights group, Wellman said.

A PHYSICIAN has been requested to speak relative to another aspect of the class.

The members of the Gay Liberation, somewhat poised and at times quite humorous, explained how they lived, what they felt, and how they wish society would react toward them.

In brief, this is what some of the members of the Gay Liberation had to say.

Richard: a graduate student at the University of Chicago, "You don't know what it's like to walk around and know that society says that what you are feeling inside you is wrong. Because many homosexuals are oppressed, they develop a neurosis and can really become sick, although they weren't before."

Shelley: a taxicab driver who lives with a male homosexual, "There are no traditional guidelines for this kind of relationship. You make it what the two of you want it to be.

"THINK OF why you like someone. It's usually because that person is nice, or honest, or sincere, or pleasant to be with. It doesn't have to do with whether they are male or female."

Henry: "I have to accept myself as a valid human being. If I want to hold another guy's hand, I am free to do it. I have to deal with a society, though, that doesn't accept that view."

Sue, who spoke on women's liberation: "If a woman wants to go out and make it on her own, she'll have to go through a lot and probably won't make it.

"If a woman is 'gay' she doesn't have a man to rely on. She has to go out and make it on her own. She is oppressed, ignored and rejected by people."

She also pointed out that homosexuality has been accepted by many civilizations and that the need to reproduce, a tradition which necessitaged marriage, has lessened.

Tomorrow Big Day for Harper

cial affairs, projects about $64,000 in chargeback revenue in 1971-72 The college this year gained more than $880,000 in chargeback revenue.

THE OVERRIDING argument for the referendum, of course, is that Harper College has produced a quality two-year educational program, and the additional tax funds will cover the anticipated losses during the next few years.

According to a fact book prepared by Mann, the college will face a $1 million deficit in the educational fund this coming academic year if the tax rate increase is not approved. In the building fund this year money has been transferred in from the education fund to cover a loss.

The loss will grow more severe in the coming years, said Mann, unless the tax hike is granted. If the money is not available, the college may be forced to cut programs, close buildings, and generally reduce all but basic programs.

Dr. Robert Lahti, president of the college, has pointed out the full tax rate will have to be levied next year just to meet expenses, assuming the voters approve it.

The principal argument against passage of the tax hike is, of course, financial. Some voters feel another tax increase is one increase too many.

HARPER OFFICIALS argue that the increase, although it may sound large, is relatively small. Harper gets only 3 cents out of a tax dollar, and passage of the two fund increases would mean an additional $17 tax bill on a home assessed at $10,000.

Another argument is that Harper has not raised tuition enough. It is argued that the college should have asked more than the present $8 per credit hour rate (using current projections, Harper could have set the rate at $10 or $12).

Harper officials counter that they couldn't project the number of students last fall, so they had to set the rate in advance (they can gain only one-third of expenses through tuition) and that they wanted low-tuition education. And they point out that their projections show a $10 tuition rate in 1971-72, while holding the rate steady this fall at $8.

Those are some of the basic arguments and, of course, there are others. Today, the Harper officials and interested citizens will relax momentarily then begin the vigil until the final results are posted on Mann's bulletin board.

A rejection by the voters would not mean that the college's buildings would be leveled and the college's 218-acre campus turned into Chicago's third airport. But action on the referendum will determine whether Harper continues to expand at its present rate.

Harper Polling Places

Voting on the Harper College referendum to raise the education and building (maintenance) fund tax rates a total of 17 cents will take place tomorrow from noon to 7 p.m.

Harper will use the same polling places and precinct boundaries that were used in the April 12, 1969 school board elections in respective elementary district. For information, call the Harper business office at 359-4200, extension 220.

Here are the precincts, the building and the address:

So Sorry, But That Doesn't Work, Either

The Arlington Heights Post Office has announced that "Nutrivena B25," a face cream known as "Sweden's Miracle Formula," does not remove wrinkles as advertised.

After analysis of the cream by the U. S. Food and Drug Administration, the United States Post Office ordered all mail and postal money orders connected with the sale of the product stopped and returned to the senders.

The product is manufactured by Nuevene, International Ltd., of Union City, N. J. and New York City. Post Office Hearing Examiner Jesse Nessitte said the manufacturers "obviously misrepresented the product's capabilities in an attempt to induce aging women 'in-search for a foundation of youth' to part with money."

Speak Out

But Are They Old Enough To Write X?

by AL GREENE

There are two different questions people consider when asked if they feel the voting age should be lowered from 21 to 18

The first is are 18-year-olds sufficiently mature and knowledgeable about current issues? The second is if an individual can be called on to fight and sometimes die for his country, does that automatically entitle him to vote?

"Since they fight at 18," said Lois Koehler, an employe of Palatine's finance department, "they should be given the right to vote." "That includes," she said, "both boys and girls." Gladys Gustafson, a co-worker agreed with her.

BUT BOTH WOMEN changed their minds when Dolores Specht said "No," the voting age should not be lowered to 18 "I don't think I want to be ruled by a mass with that intelligence," she explained

Seventeen-year-old, Bob Hayes of 49 S. Linden said he feels the voting age should be lowered to 18. "If you're old enough to fight for your country, you're old enough to vote."

A woman, who said she had several teenage children, thought the voting age would be better left at 21. "I don't think they pay that much attention to politics," she said.

"I can understand" about 18-year-olds being asked to fight for their country and not being able to vote, she said, but added that, "I don't think they're qualified to know their own minds."

ONE WOMAN, who has a daughter 19 and a son, 20, said "as far as knowledge, they have a tremendously larger scope . . than we had at their age."

The question is, she said, do they have the "judgment to use it?"

"If these fellows can be drafted," she said, "they should have the right to vote" This does not include the girls, she said, adding that "my daughter would probably be the first one to scream."

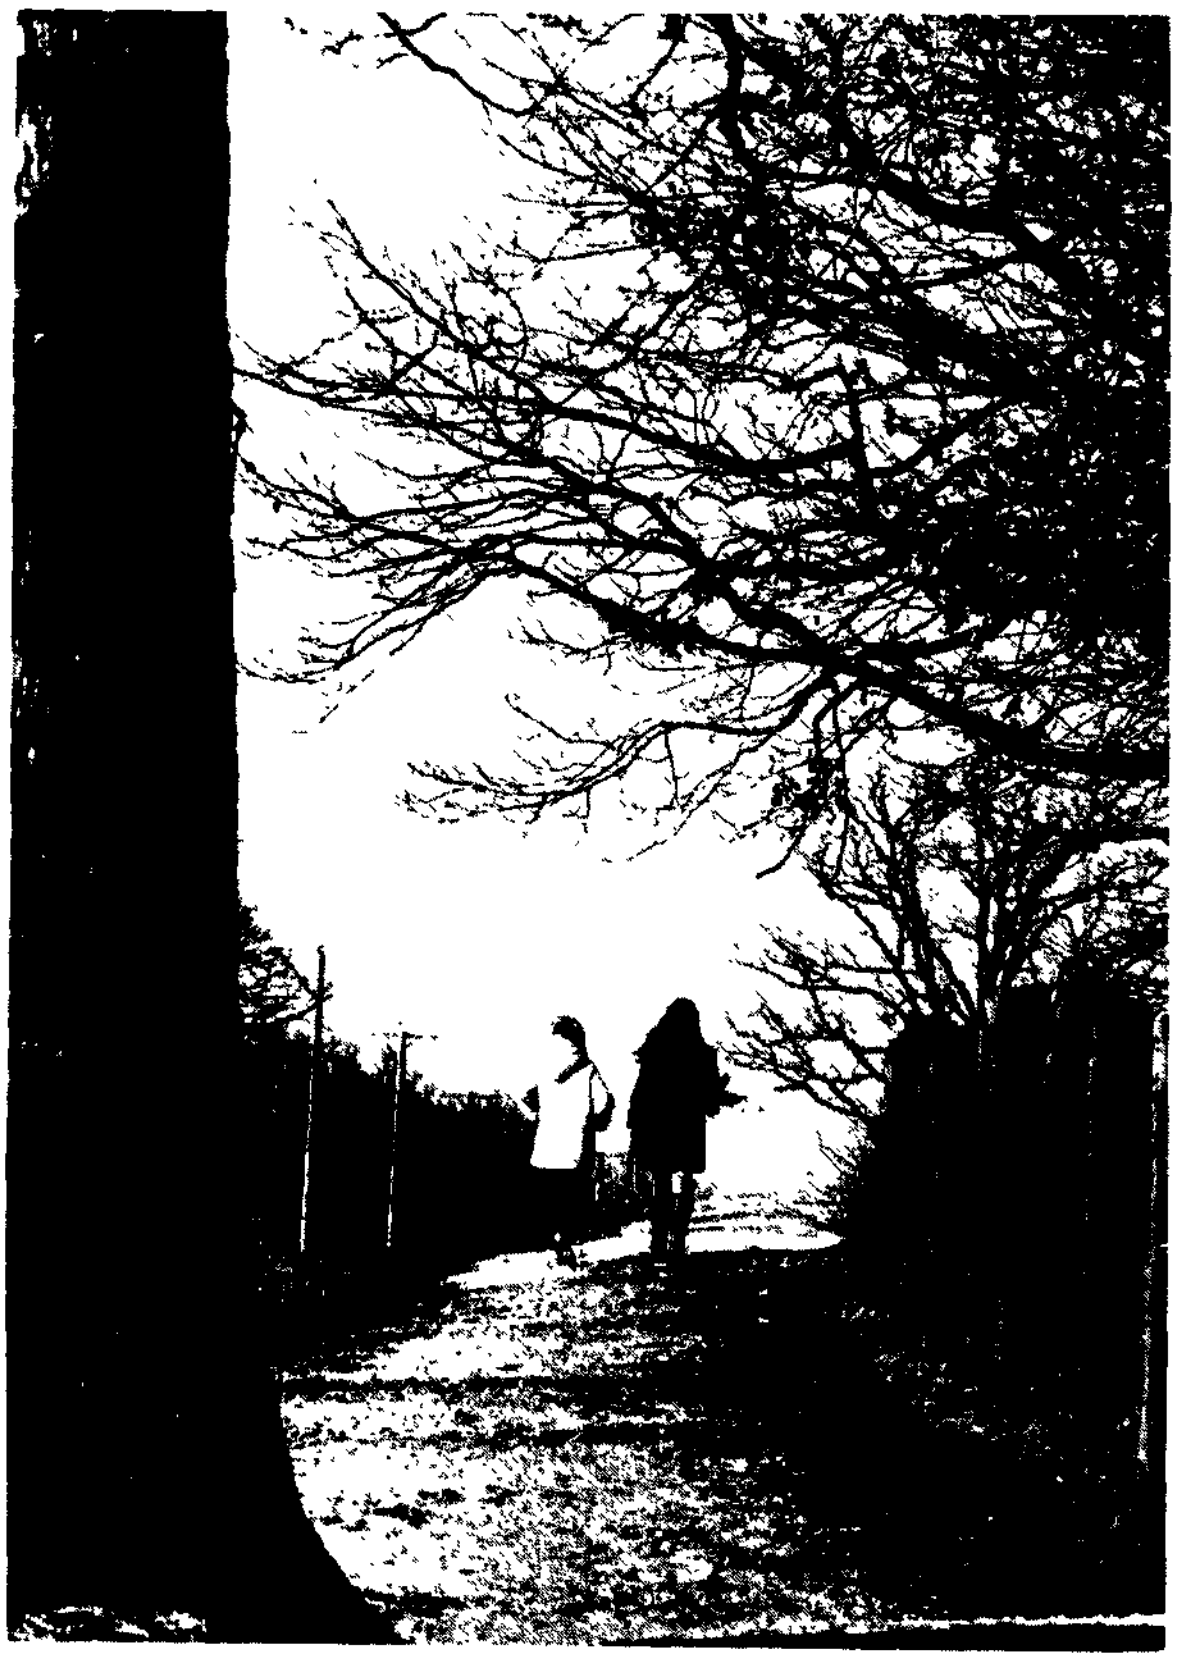
"I don't see them sitting down and reading a newspaper like adults," she said, "they seem much more interested in other things."

Another woman, who asked to remain unidentified, said the voting age should be lowered to 19, not 18. There is a big difference in that one year, she said, particularly if a youngsters goes off to college. During that year, she said, "they become much more aware of the world around them."

MURIEL LORIST of 9 W. Daniels asked, "If they can go into the service at 18 why shouldn't they vote." Girls should also have the right to vote at 18, she said, adding, "Why should they be different?"

A 23-year-old man who asked to remain unidentified said he thought 18-year-olds have as much capability to make a wise decision as 90 per cent of the adult population.

"When you figure most people don't educate themselves after they leave high school," he said, "the high school graduate is as intellectually competent as anybody."



TOMORROW IS THE first day of Spring, but most people feel it is about two months late. Blossoms are shivering on their branches waiting for warm weather and golden sunlight to ring them into the season. Weary from a cold, damp winter people are beginning to think about such trifles as picnics, boat rides, walks, backyard barbecues and lemonade.

Open Windows -- It's Spring

Although the worlds of Palatine and Rolling Meadows won't change overnight with the arrival of spring today, it's here.

And there's more than love and flowers ready to bloom.

Popping up will be more holes and bumps in the major and minor thoroughfares. Shock absorbers and tires will take their usual spring beating

Popping out will be several boys as they step to home plate swinging the bat for a homerun The 1970 baseball seasons for both the Rolling Meadows Boys Baseball Association and Palatine Little Leagues begin around May 1. Sign-up already has taken place and more boys than ever will participate this year.

Popping in will be friends and neighbors feeling a warm welcome through open windows which have been closed all winter.

IT WON'T BE long and swing sets and patio furniture again will decorate suburban backyards. Cushions, rugs, drapes might decorate porches too, as housewives air the rooms for spring cleaning

School coat rooms will show signs of spring too. Heavy winter clothing, knee high boots, wool scarves and mittens will be gone. But children's playfulness will continue as the spring rain's puddles provide messy fun.

Rain and the spring thaw also mean messy times for some adults of Palatine and Rolling Meadows living along Salt Creek. Once again, it's time for "cloud-watching tension," — time to work for a solution to flooding problems and time to clean the creek of winter's debris.

Still looking to the skies, multi-colored kites will be flying as the warm spring breezes blow.

Blowing breezes will help spread the fertilizer which weekend gardeners will carefully spread on the suburban lawns. That's just one of the weekend chores ushered in with spring.

There are rose bushes to be uncovered, storm windows to come down, seeds to be planted, and then, grass to be cut.

So whether or not the ground is white today, at least we officially can recognize the start of a warmer, more pleasant, and busier season.

Death Ruled Accidental

A Cook County coroner's jury issued a verdict of accidental death yesterday in the inquest into the death of Mrs Reva E Von Busch, 63 , of 3215 Dove St , Rolling Meadows.

Mrs. Von Busch was one of three persons killed after sustaining injuries in a two car crash on Route 14 about one-half mile east of Quentin Road, Feb. 19.

Steven B. Krisan, 20 of 2424 Oakton, Arlington Heights, the driver of one car and William H. Moss Jr., 20 of 44 S Elmwood, Palatine, a passenger in the Krisman car were killed when it collided with Mrs. Von Busch's car. Mrs. Von Busch died March 10 in the Northwest Community Hospital where she had been since the accident.

Walter R. Barlow III, 22, of 206 N. Brockway, Palatine, is accused by state police of drag racing with the Krisman car in connection with the accident.

BARLOW TOLD the coroner's jury yesterday he was not drag racing with the Krisman car. He said he did not exceed the speed limit and "never attempted to race."

He also testified that he was about 100 yards behind the Krisman car when the mishap occurred. He estimated Krisman's speed at between 60 to 65 miles-per-hour.

Barlow testified he met Krisman and Moss at McDonalds in Arlington Heights earlier in the evening. Krisman, he said, wanted to drag race but Barlow said he did not want to. Barlow said he did not think it would be a contest because he had a faster car.

Later in the evening, Barlow testified, they met at another restaurant where "they tried to egg me on." He started going to another restaurant when the cars met on the highway, Barlow said

"He got 100 yards ahead of me and veered into the path of an oncoming car," Barlow said. He said the Krisman car looked like it made a left turn.

STATE TROOPER L. R. Nelson testified that the Barlow and Krisman cars were westbound on the Northwest Highway at the time of the accident He said the Krisman car crossed into the eastbound lane and collided with the car driven by Mrs. Von Busch.

Nelson said the accident was caused by an icy patch of road on which the Krisman car skidded and the speed with which it was traveling. The mishap happended about 10:30 p.m., he said.

Mrs. James Knowlton of 1321 N. Belmont in Arlington Heights, testified she saw the accident. She said the two westbound cars were drag racing. By that, she said she meant the drivers were trying to determine "who can go the furthest the quickest "

She said she could not estimate the speed the cars were going.

The inquest was held at the Ahlgrim and Sons Funeral Home at 201 N. Northwest Highway, Palatine The six member coroner's jury deliberated seven minutes before returning the verdict.

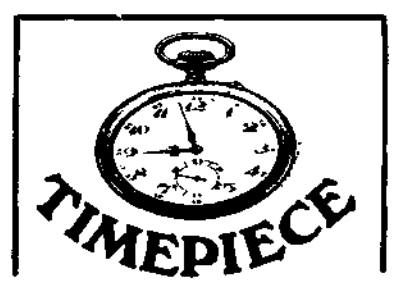
Fertilizer Sale Under Way Today

The first Palatine Jaycee fertilizer sale begins today with two products being offered to local residents for the first time

Both straight fertilizer and fertilizer with a weed killer are available at $4 per bag A bag will cover 5,000 square feet according to Jaycees.

Designed as both a public service and a fund-raising project for the group, the sale ends on Sunday, March 29. Until then, Jaycees will take orders from local residents with free delivery scheduled for April 4 and 5.

Those interested may call 359-2275 or 358-0972 to place their orders



With the spring overflow of Salt Creek in Palatine and Rolling Meadows just around the corner, it's interesting to look back at the 19th Century's use of the body of water.

Back in the 1840's a dam was built across the creek just east of an old bridge on Plum Grove Road. A saw mill was built near the dam and operated by Lot Whitcomb.

The pond formed to get water power for the mill was about a half mile long and several rods wide During the winter, it was a popular place for the ice skaters of the old Plum Grove settlement.

The mill business is recorded as a financial success, but some kind of misunderstanding among business partners also is noted

In the early 1950's, the saw mill was completely destroyed by fire. Although suspicion arose at the time, cause of the fire was never determined

Fun Fair Coming

Children of all ages will be able to play games at the Fun Fair at Pleasant Hill School tomorrow from 10 a. m. to 3 p.m

The annual fair is sponsored by the Pleasant Hill PTA to raise money for school projects.

Oops! One More Day

Around election time almost everybody is anxious to get things over with. But the Herald mistakenly tried to speed things up in Thursday's edition

Those who have taken petitions out for the April 11 school elections in Dist 211 have until 4 p.m. today to file, instead of yesterday as we reported.

Okay Given for Salt Creek Flood Plans

An authorization that will make treacherous, unpredictable Salt Creek into a recreation-oriented friend of the Northwest suburbs has been announced to the area Salt Creek Watershed Steering Committee.

The Soil Conservation Service (SCS) of the U.S. Department of Agriculture has given Illinois the go-ahead for planning work that will lead to an estimated $5 million in federal funding to halt Salt Creek flooding. The estimated $66,000 in planning, to be done by the local SCS, is expected to be completed by Aug. 1 and presented to Congress in January.

Permission for planning extends only to the Cook County portion of Salt Creek which has a local government sponsor in accordance with federal requirements. Total cost of the Cook County project is estimated at $8 million, with approximately $3.1 million to be contributed locally through acquisition of land for reservoirs and easements.

Richard Duesterhaus, SCS technician on the Salt Creek watershed project, expressed confidence the Salt Creek project would be included in the 1971 Congressional appropriation to Public Law 566 for small watersheds.

Duesterhaus said Thursday the actual improvement project would be going on for several years. When completed, it will knock annual flood damages from $700,000 a year to $6,000 a year, Duesterhaus said.

DuPage County was considered for improvements in the preliminary investigation of improving Salt Creek but has not provided the necessary local sponsor and can not be considered for further federal grants.

The Chicago Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) is acting as the Cook County project sponsor and has already acquired two reservoir sites, both in Palatine. Another reservoir site is being acquired on the Arlington Heights branch of Salt Creek.

The Cook County Forest Preserve District is acting as sponsor for the Busse Woods lake near Elk Grove Village, a project that will provide water recreation for local boating and swimming enthusiasts.

Announced Thursday by Congressman Philip Crane, the authorization for planning will be for a work plan which can serve as a basis for funding. Duesterhaus said when this plan is approved by Congress, design planning and actual construction can begin.

The 1968 preliminary flood control report on Salt Creek, prepared by the Salt Creek Watershed Steering Committee, calls for five structures in Cook County and three in DuPage County, plus channel improvements

Communities in the watershed area to benefit from the improvements are Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Hoffman Estates, Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Roselle and Inverness in Cook County; and Bensenville, Addison, Elmhurst, Wood Dale, Villa Park and Oak Brook in DuPage County.

Tom Hamilton of Elk Grove Village, chairman of the Salt Creek Watershed Steering Committee, began in 1965 the "cost-benefit ratio" study of Salt Creek that indicated the waterway could be improved under the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Public Law 566.

THE EARTH EVOLVED from one of several possible theories which Donald Ellis, an eighth grader at Stuart R. Paddock School, illustrated in his science fair project which won first place Wednesday night. Donald and the district's two other fair winners will take their projects to the Northwest area science fair in Wheeling April 11 to compete. First and second place winners at the area fair will be eligible to compete in the state-wide contest next month.

Query Witness' Testimony

by PAT GERLACH

The credibility of testimony delivered by an "expert" witness appeared shadowed during cross-examination by attornies representing several local homeowners groups during a Hoffman Estates Zoning Board hearing observed by a group of more than 250 persons Wednesday night.

Involved is a proposed change in zoning from commercial to planned residential development for a 78-acre tract of land just north of the primarily undeveloped Howie-in-the-Hills subdivision.

Approval of the requested alteration in zoning would permit construction of a 1,352 unit apartment complex and convenience shopping center along Palatine Road.

The $25 million development would consist of 28-four story elevator buildings and would have an overall mix of 60 per cent one-bedroom units and 40 per cent two-bedroom apartments.

THIS WEEK Robert Haskins, an attorney representing the publicly undisclosed developer, presented Philip Zeitlin, a paid consultant and planning and zoning expert, who attested to the fact that the highest and best use of the land involved, in his opeinion, is the proposed apartment development.

In his experience as assistant commissioner of planning and zoning for the city of Chicago, Zeitlin, who holds a degree in architecture from Illinois Institute of Technology and a masters degree in city planning from Harvard University, said he has had extensive work to his credit to qualify him as an expert in these fields.

Although he has been primarily involved in Chicago zoning matters he has also served as a paid consultant to developers planning projects in Deerfield, Glenview, Rolling Meadows, Alsip, Waukegan and Orland Park.

ON QUESTIONING from Village Atty. Edward Hofert, Zeitlin admitted that his involvement in the Rolling Meadows project, known as Fairfax Village, was in excess of two years ago and he could not remember the location of the 20-acre townhouse complex.

Responding to questions from Hofert, Bill Weaver, a zoning board member, and several attornies representing homeowners, Zeitlin could not fully explain the reasoning which led him to make the highest and best usage judgment.

He said that this opinion was formulated, to a great degree, through information presented to him by others serving as witnesses in the hearings who were experts in other fields.

Zeitlin said that the rolling terrain of the land involved in this proposal gave it a character adaptable to multiple family zoning but could not give an opinion on other land surrounding the subject parcel which has similar contour.

WEAVER REPEATEDLY asked Zeitlin if, when engaged in the project by the petitioner, the consultant was given various choices to work from in making a decision regarding land use.

It was subsequently revealed that Zeitlin had been retained as a consultant by a petitioner, whose identity the planning expert says is unknown to him, to come to the conclusion attested to in this week's hearing.

After lengthly questioning of Zeitlin by attornies representing homeowners in Inverness and unincorporated areas of Barrington and Palatine townships which abut the land involved, Haskins asked Board Chairman Robert T. Valentino to rule on the cross-examination methods being used. Haskins claimed that Zeitlin was being ridiculed.

"I HAVE BEEN here for four hearings and I hope that I am welcome to come back a fifth or sixth time if necessary and be treated in a gentlemanly manner," he said, quickly adding, "and, maybe I'll be seeing you people in the courts."

Valentino asked that attornies and others questioning the witness confine their activities to questions pertinent to Zeitlin's testimony.

Hearings are attracting a large number of homeowners in the area of the development who do not wish to see the land developed as an apartment complex.

They also feel that there are potential water run-off problems as well as a possible water shortage.

Testimony is scheduled to continue at the next scheduled hearing which has been set for Wed., April 22 at 7:30 p.m. at Hoffman School.

The Chaplain Wore Bars

by TOM ROBB

The middle-aged man stood before a group gathered to hear him speak.

He told them about a man who grew up in 8 foster homes and 4 penal institutions, who once threatend to kill one of his many foster parents, who witnessed another foster parent sexually ruin his two sisters, who turned to a world of crime and confusion.

His voice grew louder and his listeners fidgeted in their seats and tried to look unaffected by this man's words, as he asked them who they thought he was talking about.

"Richard Speck," someone said.

The man smiled, for he knew Richard Speck and many others who were once inmates of Cook County Jail where he is prison Chaplain.

"NO, HE SAID, that man is me — Rev. John Irwin, and my two sisters are prostitutes today. What the hell can you expect?"

Rev. Irwin has been the Protestant Chaplain of Cook County Jail for the last 15 years and he was addressing the men's club of the First Methodist Church of Palatine Wednesday night.

Rev. Irwin was autobiographically making the main point of his talk: men behind bars are men. They are human and they wanted to be treated accordingly.

"It is wrong to portray to the public an image of murders and sex maniacs standing behind bars. They are men, not animals, down there in Cook County Jail," he said.

TO ILLUSTRATE his point, Rev. Irwin said he was the 13th child born into a family of 14, that when he was three his father died, and at six he and two sisters were sent to the first of a series of foster homes, as his mother could not support the large family.

This upbringing aleinated him from society, led to a variety of trouble and caused frequent "run-ins with the law," Rev. Irwin said.

It wasn't until he was drafted into the Korean War, and "became scared of dying that I got religion," he said. At 22 he was "converted and ordained."

"What changed my life was a warm man who showed he cared and that he wanted to help me and be my friend. This is what it's all about."

AND THIS IS what Programmed Activities for Correctional Education (PACE) at the Cook County Jail, which he came to explain to the men's club, is all about.

PACE was started by Rev. Irwin about three years ago. It is a not-for-profit corporation designed to aid convicted criminals in classroom and vocational training.

"We have been 70 per cent successful with those who have been in PACE institute," he said. "These men are now working steadily and some are even putting themselves through school."

Rev. Irwin said that PACE now needs evening volunteers to help the men in their vocational and classroom training.

"Such work, getting in and being around these men, can transform your life and their lives. I know, because someone who cared transformed mine."

AN INTEREST in silicones sparked Michael Vervort and Jeff Poetter to build a science project about the use of silicones in surgery. The boys, students at Winston Park Junior High School, won first place in hte district science fair this week.

Three Win Awards In Science Fair

Three Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 students received first place awards at the district-wide science fair at Plum Grove School and 11 others received second place awards, qualifying them to enter the area science fair in Wheeling April 11.

Donald Ellis, an eighth grader at Paddock School won a first place award for his project "The Earth's Evolution" and Jeffrey Peotter and Michael Vervort, seventh graders at Winston Park, for their project "Silicones Role in Surgery."

The three boys and their 11 second place cohorts received their awards at the 27-project fair Wednesday night. Each contestant in the district fair has won before in his own school fair.

SECOND PLACE awards were won by Geoffrey Bolton and Robert Norris for their project "Solar Energy;" Jon Paine and Steven Sherwin, "Laser;" Cheryl Friedman, "How the Miracle of Life Begins;" Cindy Chase, "Dyes and Fabrics;" Susan Stoner, "Punishment or Reward?" David Tehle, Gregory Grupe and Duane Weimer, "World Beneath the Tides;" Bradley Ashmore, "Can We Forecast a Year's Weather from Last Year's Temperatures?" and David Bollavia, "Voyage to the Moon."

Judges for the district contest were Mrs. Rita Faughnan, John Myer, Gail Reed, Donald Riek, Mrs. Linda Williams and Daryl Samborski, science teachers in Dist. 15.

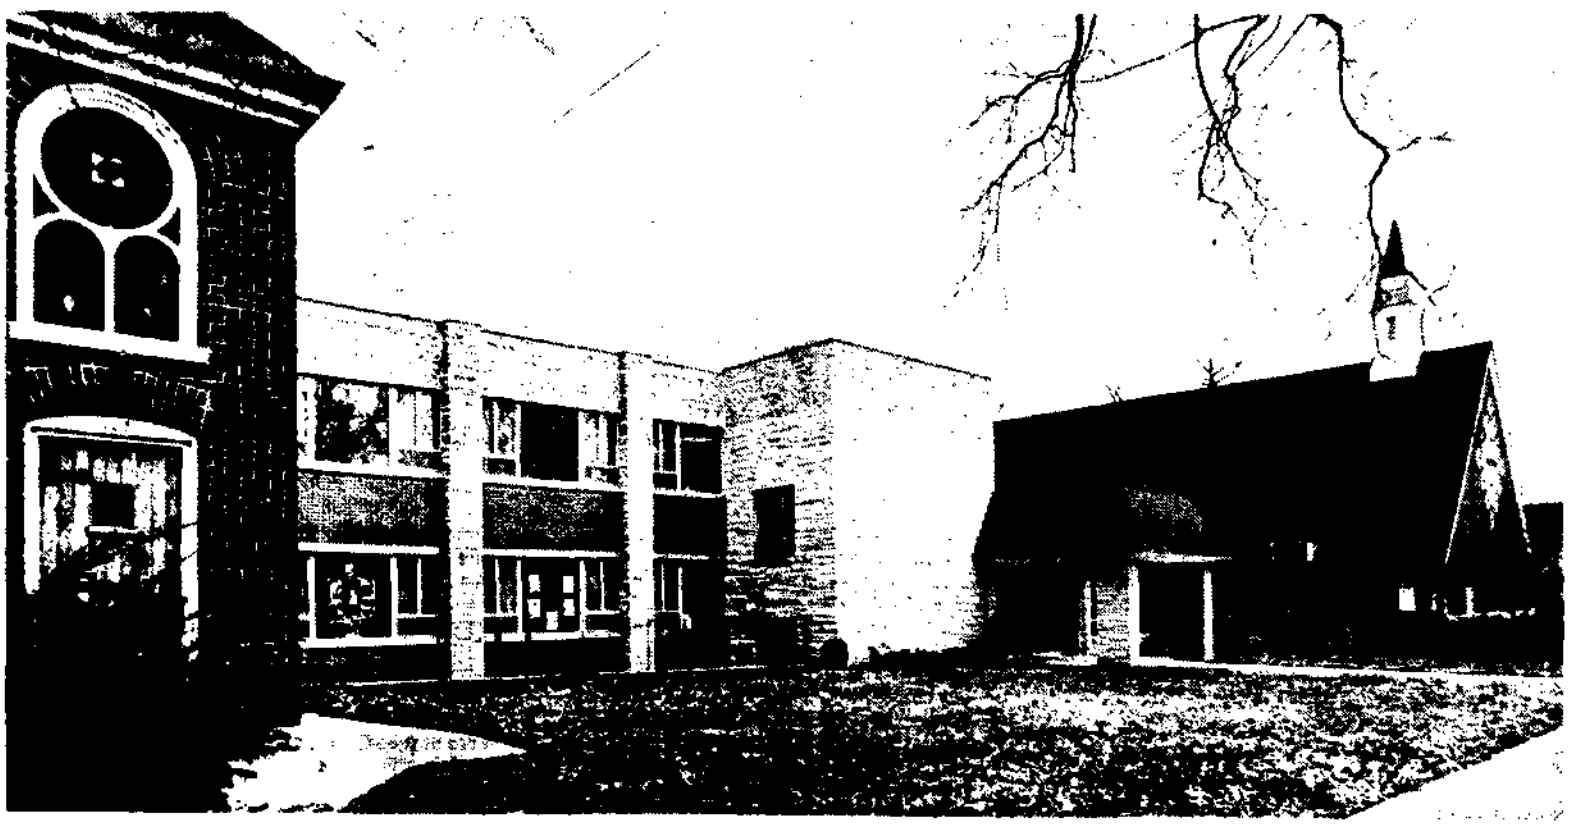
Meeting to View 'New Morality'

"The New Morality: An Adult Approach to the Sacrament of Penance" will be the topic of the Palm Sunday night renewal meeting at St. Theresa School hall Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Richard J. Westley, lay theologian and associate professor of philosophy at Loyola University in Chicago, will be the guest speaker. Westley is noted for his ability to interpret theological terms into everyday language for the layman.

MARRIED, with six children, Westley has studied at Marquette University, the Pontifical Institute of Medieval Studies and has a doctoral degree in philosophy from the University of Toronto.

The lecture is sponsored by the adult education committee of St. Theresa parish, which is conducting home discussions and guest lectures on topics like the Vatican II documents and the future of the Roman Catholic Church.



A NEW BUILDING next to the old sanctuary will be commemorated tonight at a dinner in the United Methodist Church of Palatine fellowship hall. The newest addition to the 112-year-old parish is an educational building completed last fall which will house the church offices, special meeting rooms, a new fellowship hall and classrooms. Plates and stationery with a picture of the church will be available at the dinner.

The Nurses Wore Red Carnations

Nurses at Northwest Community Hospital wore red carnations on their uniforms this week.

The flowers were presented to the 202 registered and practical nurses at the hospital in honor of Illinois Nurses Week. The carnations were donated by Pesche's and Sauerland Florists in Arlington Heights and by Kinsch's and Nelson's Florists in Palatine.

The nurses helped care for 14,000 patients in the hospital this year. Northwest Community estimates that by 1975 an additional 200 will be needed to fill the needs of a burgeoning population.

To Attend Conference

Mrs. Jeanette Kramer, administrator of the Plum Grove Nursing Home in Palatine, will attend the Nursing Home Advisory Council of the Illinois Department of Health meeting this weekend in Springfield.

The council will be reviewing revisions proposed by the health department concerning licensing standards for nursing homes, sheltered care homes and homes for the aged.

Skopal Graduates

Second Lt. Paul A. Skopal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Skopal of 16 Garden, Palatine, has been awarded Air Force silver pilot wings upon graduation at Randolph Air Force Base, Tex.

Following specialized aircrew training at other bases, he will be assigned to Ellsworth AFB, South Dakota, for duty with the 28th Air Refueling Squadron, a unit of the Strategic Air Command.

The lieutenant, a graduate of Prospect High School, received a B.A. degree from Lawrence University, Appleton, Wis., and was commissioned there through the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

Miss Kienker Honored

Karen Ann Kienker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth L. Kienker of 1311 Norman Drive, Palatine, has been named to the dean's scholarship list for the fall semester at Central Methodist College, Fayette, Mo.

Miss Kienker is a freshman majoring in biology.

Glaser In Drama

A Rolling Meadows student appeared in the recent production of William Saroyan's "The Beautiful People," which was presented at Cornell College.

Robert W. Glaser Jr. of 3500 Bobolink Lane appeared as Dan Hillboy. Glaser is a senior at Cornell.

Powell Has Honors

James B. Powell, a student in the graduate school of Oregon State University, has been named to the fall term scholastic honor roll.

Powell lives at 539 S. Cedar St., Palatine.

Methodist Dinner Set

Members of the First United Methodist Church of Palatine will dine together tonight at 6 p.m. in the fellowship hall to commemorate the completion of the educational building opened in November.

Commemorative plates and stationery of the church and its recent addition will be sold and a candy booth will feature homemade gift-wrapped sweets.

The dinner, being planned by the Women's Society of Christian Service, will also have a nursery for preschoolers.

A new fellowship hall, formal parlor, fireplace seminar room and offices are located in the educational addition, which is joined to the original brick sanctuary designed in 1895. The first church building of the parish was built in 1858 after the Rev. Thomas Cochran had earlier opened a preaching point in the then-new Village of Palatine.

The present sanctuary was built in 1957 on additional land adjacent to the original site on Plum Grove Road and Wood Street.

The Rev. C. Albert Chamberlain is pastor of the 1,800-member church and the Rev. Robert H. King is associate pastor.

Tomorrow Is Big Day For Harper College

by TOM WELLMAN

Tomorrow the voting-age registered citizens of the Harper College district will decide how much money the three-year-old community college can count on in the next several years.

Residents will act to approve or reject an 11-cent increase in the education fund tax rate and a six-cent hike in the building (maintenance) fund tax rate.

Polling places will be open from noon to 7 p.m. Saturday at 43 different locations, mostly schools, throughout the four-township area of Elk Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Palatine, as well as in parts of the cities of Des Plaines, Barrington and Carpentersville.

The vote totals from the polling places will be brought into the business office of the community college, located at the intersection of Algonquin and Roselle roads in Palatine, to be recorded.

AND NO ONE at the college is overly optimistic about passage of both tax hikes.

Various college officials have pointed out a lack of positive interest from the community about the referendum. A series of public appearances by officials has been held to explain the referendum, but a large outpouring of vocal public support has not materialized.

However, there is no apparent organized opposition at this time, either. The Herald has received perhaps three or four calls objecting to the referendum.

College officials and outside observers believe a recent series of Sunday open houses may aid passage tremendously. The six open houses drew more than 3,000 persons to the campus to take guided tours and to see a film strip on the college's achievements.

But it's the lack of public response that bothers college officials. They have watched as a McHenry County referendum for a junior college was defeated recently and as a $105 million sewer bond referendum in DuPage referendum was decisively rejected this week.

THEY ARE concerned, too, that area taxpayers will be feeling the squeeze of inflation too much to vote additional funds for the college. They feel the recent success of candidates on anti-inflation platforms may be a bad sign.

They also fear voter apathy, and there is an old maxim that a small turnout means that only the "no" voters have turned out.

If the two tax hikes are defeated, it won't be the last chance to raise the tax rate. The college could go for another try for the tax rate this fall. However, they would prefer passage Saturday.

At stake in the referendum vote is not only the financial future of Harper College but also possibly the reelection chances of two incumbent board members and three independent candidates. Another person, active in the pro-referendum campaign, will file for the Harper board this afternoon.

College officials and others interested in the referendum's success are, understandably, walking around on eggshells. They are encouraging registered students over 21 to vote and carefully watching to see that Harper's best foot goes forward prior to the election.

HARPER OFFICIALS and others have several primary arguments for the referendum. First, they point out that the college's growth to approximately 5,000 students in three years of operation has outstripped an enrollment projection by a consulting firm of 3,000 this year and that it has outstripped the tax base.

They point out that the growth means there is less taxable assessed valuation per student, so there is less revenue available. In effect, they point out Harper is too well filling an educational gap in the northwestern suburbs.

Also, they state that chargeback revenue — out-of-district tax money contributed by out-of-district students — will decline sharply this fall with the opening of the Niles-Maine Township community college.

William Mann, vice president of financial affairs, projects about $64,000 in chargeback revenue in 1971-72 The college this year gained more than $880,000 in chargeback revenue.

THE OVERRIDING argument for the referendum, of course, is that Harper College has produced a quality two-year educational program, and the additional tax funds will cover the anticipated losses during the next few years.

According to a fact book prepared by Mann, the college will face a $1 million deficit in the educational fund this coming academic year if the tax rate increase is not approved. In the building fund this year money has been transferred in from the education fund to cover a loss.

The loss will grow more severe in the coming years, said Mann, unless the tax hike is granted. If the money is not available, the college may be forced to cut programs, close buildings, and generally reduce all but basic programs.

Dr. Robert Lahti, president of the college, has pointed out the full tax rate will have to be levied next year just to meet expenses, assuming the voters approve it.

The principal argument against passage of the tax hike is, of course, financial. Some voters feel another tax increase is one increase too many.

HARPER OFFICIALS argue that the increase, although it may sound large, is relatively small. Harper gets only 3 cents out of a tax dollar, and passage of the two fund increases would mean an additional $17 tax bill on a home assessed at $10,000.

Another argument is that Harper has not raised tuition enough. It is argued that the college should have asked more than the present $8 per credit hour rate (using current projections, Harper could have set the rate at $10 or $12).

Harper officials counter that they couldn't project the number of students last fall, so they had to set the rate in advance (they can gain only one-third of expenses through tuition) and that they wanted low-tuition education. And they point out that their projections show a $10 tuition rate in 1971-72, while holding the rate steady this fall at $8.

Those are some of the basic arguments and, of course, there are others. Today, the Harper officials and interested citizens will relax momentarily then begin the vigil until the final results are posted on Mann's bulletin board.

A rejection by the voters would not mean that the college's buildings would be leveled and the college's 218-acre campus turned into Chicago's third airport. But action on the referendum will determine whether Harper continues to expand at its present rate.

Fremd Drama 2nd In Meet

Competing in the Northwest sectional suburban speech contest, the Fremd High School Drama Club carried home second place honors March 7.

This honor puts Fremd among the top 12 dramatic teams in the state, and has enabled them to compete for state honors at the University of Illinois April 3 and 4

The play which brought the Fremd students their second place award was "Waiting for Godot," by Samuel Beckett. Students did a scene from this selection from the theater of the absurd which included the following cast members:

D'di was portrayed by Gary Motta, Gogo by Mark Nechoda, Luck by Gary Palmer, Pozzo by Dave Schroeder and A Boy was played by Pat Irwin.

Stephanie Lawrence, speech director, said, "Waiting for Godot" is a self-directing play and the students deserve all the credit for their outstanding performance. "They selected the play, staged it, and were totally responsible for the high commendation the judges gave it," she said.

Speak Out
LowerVoting Age to 18 Or Stay Same?

by TOM ROBB

Last week the U.S. Senate passed an amendment to a bill extending the 1965 Voting Rights Act which would give the vote to 18-year-olds in federal, state and local elections.

In the House, there are also indications of growing support for this measure, which, if passed, would go into effect in 1971 and give the ballot to nearly 11 million young people.

Currently, only four states — Alaska, Georgia, Hawaii and Kentucky — allow those under 21 to vote.

With this issue gaining more prominence everyday, the Herald asked residents of Rolling Meadows for their opinions on lowering the voting age to 18.

The following answers were obtained by calling city residents at random for this week's Speakout.

Mrs. D. H. Monson of 2909 Cardinal Drive said:

"I like it the way it is right now. When you're 21 you have more experience and discretion. Twenty-one has been, is, and should remain to be the legal voting age."

Mrs. Daniel McGowen of 2703 Oriole Lane said

"I think lowering the voting age ot 18 would be fine. The first time I voted I was dumbfounded. Today's kids are a lot smarter.

"They're old enough to fight in the war, to raise families and be pretty politically minded, so they are certainly old enough to vote," she said.

A Rolling Meadows man who preferred to remain unidentified said:

"If a kid can be forced to join the military, he should have some say over his own fate. The general problem today is that young people are finding out that they don't have any control over their fate.

"People say they will make the wrong decisions if they vote, but even if they do make the wrong decisions — with their own fate — they have to live with it. Raise the draft age to 21 and the situation wouldn't be any different," he said.

Mrs. Fred Kalush of 351 Willow Wood Drive said:

"I'd hesitate to give the vote to 18-year-olds. At that age they seem to be just a little bit immature to be handling such a responsibility.

Mrs. Herman Tegtmeier of 3701 Meadow Drive said:

"I think it's a great idea. These kids today really want to vote. They're very politically inclined. They're not all old enough, but you can't judge people by the years they've accumulated. Some adults don't act old enough to vote."

Mrs. Frank Andrykowski of 3702 Bluebird Lane said:

"I think it would be all right. It's hard to draw the line on such a thing. I mean, it would be nice for those 18-year-olds who are sensible, but the radicals might abuse the privilege. But everybody has their own mind, and it all depends on the person."

Mrs. John Fiedler of 5868 Blue Bird Lane said:

"It's a good idea and it would hopefully shake a lot of these parents off their backsides to get out and vote like they should.

"Kids are probably more involved and more serious about the vote than adults. Giving the vote to them wouldn't create a danger where the radicals are concerned because they are all serious about things today, they know their responsibility. And these kids read, listen, participate and are all around genuinely more aware of political issues than their parents are," she said.

TOMORROW IS THE first day of Spring, but most people feel it is about two months late. Blossoms are shivering on their branches waiting for warm weather and golden sunlight to ring them into the season. Weary from a cold, damp winter people are beginning to think about such trifles as picnics, boat rides, walks, backyard barbecues and lemonade.

Death Ruled Accidental

A Cook County coroner's jury issued a verdict of accidental death yesterday in the inquest into the death of Mrs. Reva E. Von Busch, 63, of 3215 Dove St., Rolling Meadows.

Mrs. Von Busch was one of three persons killed after sustaining injuries in a two car crash on Route 14 about one-half mile east of Quentin Road, Feb. 19.

Steven B. Krisan, 20 of 2424 Oakton, Arlington Heights, the driver of one car and William H. Moss Jr, 20 of 44 S. Elmwood, Palatine, a passenger in the Krisman car were killed when it collided with Mrs. Von Busch's car. Mrs. Von Busch died March 10 in the Northwest Community Hospital where she had been since the accident.

Walter R. Barlow III, 22, of 206 N. Brockway, Palatine, is accused by state police of drag racing with the Krisman car in connection with the accident.

BARLOW TOLD the coroner's jury yesterday he was not drag racing with the Krisman car. He said he did not exceed the speed limit and "never attempted to race."

He also testified that he was about 100 yards behind the Krisman car when the mishap occurred. He estimated Krisman's speed at between 60 to 65 miles-per-hour.

Barlow testified he met Krisman and Moss at McDonalds in Arlington Heights earlier in the evening. Krisman, he said, wanted to drag race but Barlow said he did not want to. Barlow said he did not think it would be a contest because he had a faster car.

Later in the evening, Barlow testified, they met at another restaurant where "they tried to egg me on." He started going to another restaurant when the cars met on the highway, Barlow said.

"He got 100 yards ahead of me and veered into the path of an oncoming car," Barlow said. He said the Krisman car looked like it made a left turn.

STATE TROOPER L. R. Nelson testified that the Barlow and Krisman cars were westbound on the Northwest Highway at the time of the accident. He said the Krisman car crossed into the eastbound lane and collided with the car driven by Mrs. Von Busch.

Nelson said the accident was caused by an icy patch of road on which the Krisman car skidded and the speed with which it was traveling. The mishap happended about 10:30 p.m., he said.

Mrs. James Knowlton of 1321 N. Belmont in Arlington Heights, testified she saw the accident. She said the two westbound cars were drag racing. By that, she said she meant the drivers were trying to determine "who can go the furthest the quickest."

She said she could not estimate the speed the cars were going.

The inquest was held at the Ahlgrim and Sons Funeral Home at 201 N. Northwest Highway, Palatine. The six member coroner's jury deliberated seven minutes before returning the verdict.

Church To Complete Mission Conference

Meadows Baptist Church in Rolling Meadows will complete its month-long 14th annual missions conference this weekend with programs tonight and Sunday.

Horace L. Fenton, Mrss Anne Criswell and the Rev. Bill Holeman will be on tonight's program which begins at 7:30 p.m. Fenton will also speak at 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday. The guest speaker is director of "Latin American Mission" and a Bible teacher.

MISS CRISWELL is a soloist and radio-television recording artist and the Rev. Bill Holeman is pastor of Kentucky Mountain Mission. He is also a ventriloquist and youth and camp minister.

Sunday night the church choir will also perform "Let the Earth Hear His voice."

Past-times

With the spring overflow of Salt Creek in Palatine and Rolling Meadows just around the corner, it's interesting to look back at the 19th Century's use of the body of water.

Back in the 1840's a dam was built across the creek just east of an old bridge on Plum Grove Road. A saw mill was built near the dam and operated by Lot Whitcomb.

The pond formed to get water power for the mill was about a half mile long and several rods wide. During the winter, it was a popular place for the ice skaters of the old Plum Grove settlement.

The mill business is recorded as a financial success, but some kind of misunderstanding among business partners also is noted.

In the early 1950's, the saw mill was completely destroyed by fire. Although suspicion arose at the time, cause of the fire was never determined.

Open Windows -- It's Spring

Although the worlds of Palatine and Rolling Meadows won't change overnight with the arrival of spring today, it's here.

And there's more than love and flowers ready to bloom.

Popping up will be more holes and bumps in the major and minor thoroughfares. Shock absorbers and tires will take their usual spring beating.

Popping out will be several boys as they step to home plate swinging the bat for a homerun. The 1970 baseball seasons for both the Rolling Meadows Boys Baseball Association and Palatine Little Leagues begin around May 1. Sign-up already has taken place and more boys than ever will participate this year.

Popping in will be friends and neighbors feeling a warm welcome through open windows which have been closed all winter.

IT WON'T BE long and swing sets and patio furniture again will decorate suburban backyards. Cushions, rugs, drapes might decorate porches too, as housewives air the rooms for spring cleaning.

School coat rooms will show signs of spring too. Heavy winter clothing, knee high boots, wool scarves and mittens will be gone. But children's playfulness will continue as the spring rain's puddles provide messy fun.

Rain and the spring thaw also mean messy times for some adults of Palatine and Rolling Meadows living along Salt Creek. Once again it's time for "cloud-watching tension," — time to work for a solution to flooding problems and time to clean the creek of winter's debris.

Still looking to the skies, multi-colored kites will be flying as the warm spring breezes blow.

Blowing breezes will help spread the fertilizer which weekend gardeners will carefully spread on the suburban lawns. That's just one of the weekend chores ushered in with spring.

There are rose bushes to be uncovered, storm windows to come down, seeds to be planted, and then, grass to be cut.

So whether or not the ground is white today, at least we officially can recognize the start of a warmer, more pleasant, and busier season.

Fun Fair Coming

Children of all ages will be able to play games at the Fun Fair at Pleasant Hill School tomorrow from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The annual fair is sponsored by the Pleasant Hill PTA to raise money for school projects.

Oops! One More Day

Around election time almost everybody is anxious to get things over with. But the Herald mistakenly tried to speed things up in Thursday's edition.

Those who have taken petitions out for the April 11 school elections in Dist. 211 have until 4 p.m. today to file, instead of yesterday as we reported.

Okay Given for Salt Creek Flood Plans

An authorization that will make treacherous, unpredictable Salt Creek into a recreation-oriented friend of the Northwest suburbs has been announced to the area Salt Creek Watershed Steering Committee.

The Soil Conservation Service (SCS) of the U.S. Department of Agriculture has given Illinois the go-ahead for planning work that will lead to an estimated $5 million in federal funding to halt Salt Creek flooding. The estimated $85,000 in planning, to be done by the local SCS, is expected to be completed by Aug. 1 and presented to Congress in January.

Permission for planning extends only to the Cook County portion of Salt Creek which has a local government sponsor in accordance with federal requirements. Total cost of the Cook County project is estimated at $8 million, with approximately $3.1 million to be contributed locally through acquisition of land for reservoirs and easements.

Richard Duesterhaus, SCS technician on the Salt Creek watershed project, expressed confidence the Salt Creek project would be included in the 1971 Congressional appropriation to Public Law 566 for small watersheds.

Duesterhaus said Thursday the actual improvement project would be going on for several years. When completed, it will knock annual flood damages from $700,000 a year to $6,000 a year, Duesterhaus said.

DuPage County was considered for improvements in the preliminary investigation of improving Salt Creek but has not provided the necessary local sponsor and can not be considered for further federal grants.

The Chicago Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) is acting as the Cook County project sponsor and has already acquired two reservoir sites, both in Palatine. Another reservoir site is being acquired on the Arlington Heights branch of Salt Creek.

The Cook County Forest Preserve District is acting as sponsor for the Busse Woods lake near Elk Grove Village, a project that will provide water recreation for local boating and swimming enthusiasts.

Announced Thursday by Congressman Philip Crane, the authorization for planning will be for a work plan which can serve as a basis for funding. Duesterhaus said when this plan is approved by Congress, design planning and actual construction can begin.

The 1968 preliminary flood control report on Salt Creek, prepared by the Salt Creek Watershed Steering Committee, calls for five structures in Cook County and three in DuPage County, plus channel improvements.

Communities in the watershed area to benefit from the improvements are Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Hoffman Estates, Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Roselle and Inverness in Cook County; and Bensenville, Addison, Elmhurst, Wood Dale, Villa Park and Oak Brook in DuPage County.

Tom Hamilton of Elk Grove Village, chairman of the Salt Creek Watershed Steering Committee, began in 1965 the "cost-benefit ratio" study of Salt Creek that indicated the waterway could be improved under the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Public Law 566.

THE EARTH EVOLVED from one of several possible theories which Donald Ellis, an eighth grader at Stuart R. Paddock School, illustrated in his science fair project which won first place Wednesday night. Donald and the district's two other fair winners will take their projects to the Northwest area science fair in Wheeling April 11 to compete. First and second place winners at the area fair will be eligible to compete in the state-wide contest next month.

Query Witness' Testimony

by PAT GERLACH

The credibility of testimony delivered by an "expert" witness appeared shadowed during cross-examination by attornies representing several local homeowners groups during a Hoffman Estates Zoning Board hearing observed by a group of more than 250 persons Wednesday night.

Involved is a proposed change in zoning from commercial to planned residential development for a 78-acre tract of land just north of the primarily undeveloped Howie-in-the-Hills subdivision.

Approval of the requested alteration in zoning would permit construction of a 1,352 unit apartment complex and convenience shopping center along Palatine Road.

The $23 million development would consist of 28-four story elevator buildings and would have an overall mix of 60 per cent one-bedroom units and 40 per cent two-bedroom apartments.

THIS WEEK Robert Haskins, an attorney representing the publicly undisclosed developer, presented Philip Zeitlin, a paid consultant and planning and zoning expert, who attested to the fact that the highest and best use of the land involved, in his opeinion, is the proposed apartment development.

In his experience as assistant commissioner of planning and zoning for the city of Chicago, Zeitlin, who holds a degree in architecture from Illinois Institute of Technology and a masters degree in city planning from Harvard University, said he has had extensive work to his credit to qualify him as an expert in these fields.

Although he has been primarily involved in Chicago zoning matters he has also served as a paid consultant to developers planning projects in Deerfield, Glenview, Rolling Meadows, Alsip, Waukegan and Orland Park.

ON QUESTIONING from Village Atty. Edward Hofert, Zeitlin admitted that his involvement in the Rolling Meadows project, known as Fairfax Village, was in excess of two years ago and he could not remember the location of the 20-acre townhouse complex.

Responding to questions from Hofert, Bill Weaver, a zoning board member, and several attornies representing homeowners, Zeitlin could not fully explain the reasoning which led him to make the highest and best usage judgment.

He said that this opinion was formulated, to a great degree, through information presented to him by others serving as witnesses in the hearings who were experts in other fields.

Zeitlin said that the rolling terrain of the land involved in this proposal gave it a character adaptable to multiple family zoning but could not give an opinion on other land surrounding the subject parcel which has similar contour.

WEAVER REPEATEDLY asked Zeitlin if, when engaged in the project by the petitioner, the consultant was given various choices to work from in making a decision regarding land use.

It was subsequently revealed that Zeitlin had been retained as a consultant by a petitioner, whose identity the planning expert says is unknown to him, to come to the conclusion attested to in this week's hearing.

After lengthly questioning of Zeitlin by attornies representing homeowners in Inverness and unincorporated areas of Barrington and Palatine townships which abut the land involved, Haskins asked Board Chairman Robert T. Valentino to rule on the cross-examination methods being used. Haskins claimed that Zeitlin was being ridiculed.

"I HAVE BEEN here for four hearings and I hope that I am welcome to come back a fifth or sixth time if necessary and be treated in a gentlemanly manner," he said, quickly adding, "and, maybe I'll be seeing you people in the courts."

Valentino asked that attornies and others questioning the witness confine their activities to questions pertinent to Zeitlin's testimony.

Hearings are attracting a large number of homeowners in the area of the development who do not wish to see the land developed as an apartment complex.

They also feel that there are potential water run-off problems as well as a possible water shortage.

Testimony is scheduled to continue at the next scheduled hearing which has been set for Wed., April 22 at 7:30 p.m. at Hoffman School.

The Chaplain Wore Bars

by TOM ROBB

The middle-aged man stood before a group gathered to hear him speak.

He told them about a man who grew up in 8 foster homes and 4 penal institutions, who once threatend to kill one of his many foster parents, who witnessed another foster parent sexually ruin his two sisters, who turned to a world of crime and confusion.

His voice grew louder and his listeners fidgeted in their seats and tried to look unaffected by this man's words, as he asked them who they thought he was talking about.

"Richard Speck," someone said.

The man smiled, for he knew Richard Speck and many others who were once inmates of Cook County Jail where he is prison Chaplain.

"NO, HE SAID, that man is me — Rev. John Irwin, and my two sisters are prostitutes today. What the hell can you expect?"

Rev. Irwin has been the Protestant Chaplain of Cook County Jail for the last 15 years and he was addressing the men's club of the First Methodist Church of Palatine Wednesday night.

Rev. Irwin was autobiographically making the main point of his talk: men behind bars are men. They are human and they wanted to be treated accordingly.

"It is wrong to portray to the public an image of murders and sex maniacs standing behind bars. They are men, not animals, down there in Cook County Jail," he said.

TO ILLUSTRATE his point, Rev. Irwin said he was the 13th child born into a family of 14, that when he was three his father died, and at six he and two sisters were sent to the first of a series of foster homes, as his mother could not support the large family.

This upbringing alelnated him from society, led to a variety of trouble and caused frequent "run-ins with the law," Rev. Irwin said.

It wasn't until he was drafted into the Korean War, and "became scared of dying that I got religion," he said. At 22 he was "converted and ordained."

"What changed my life was a warm man who showed he cared and that he wanted to help me and be my friend. This is what it's all about."

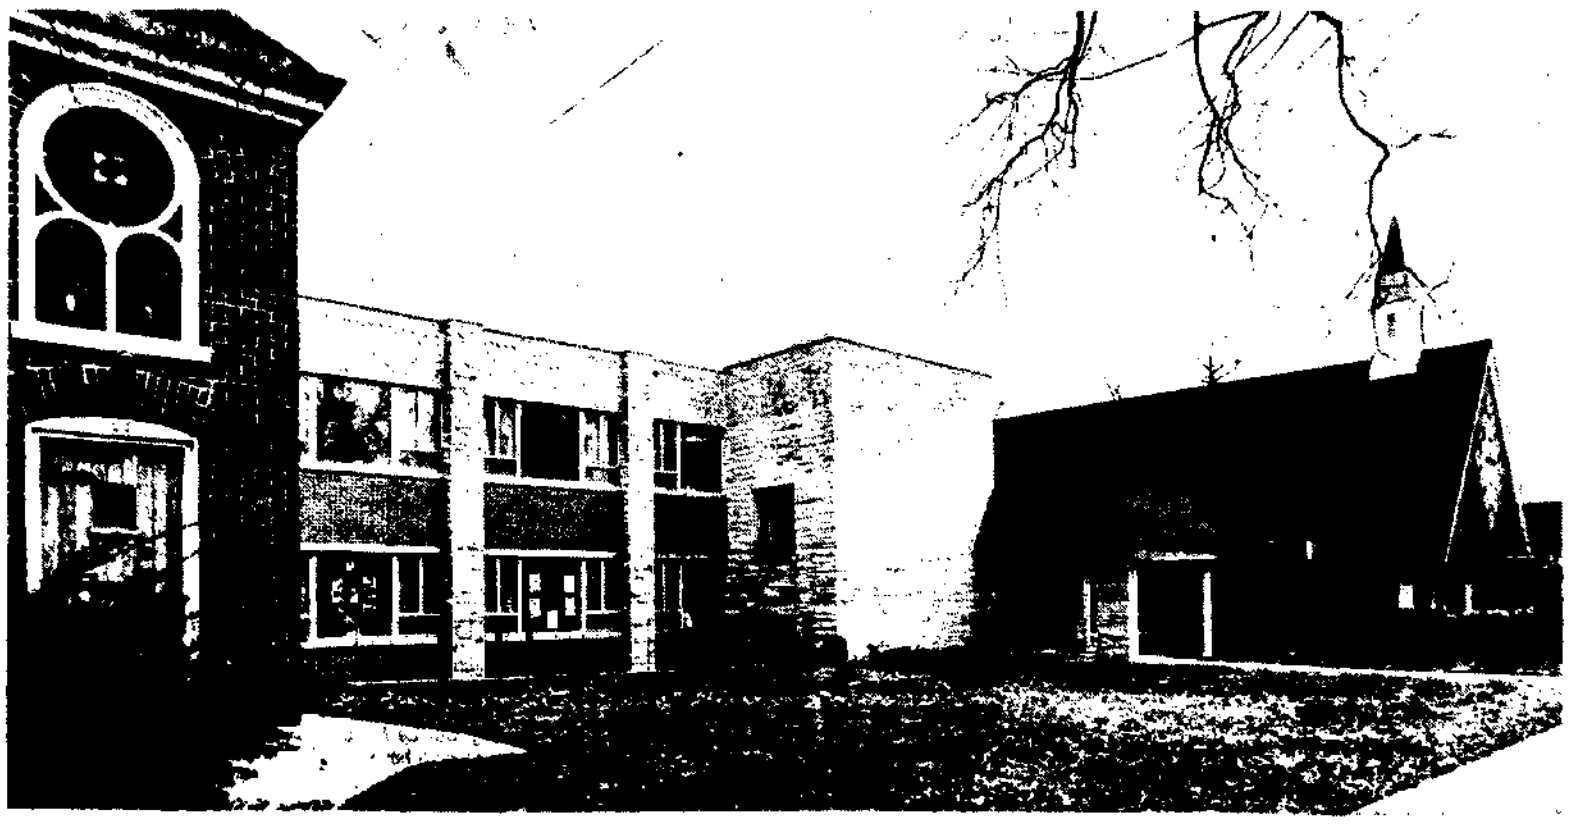
AND THIS IS what Programmed Activities for Correctional Education (PACE) at the Cook County Jail, which he came to explain to the men's club, is all about.

PACE was started by Rev. Irwin about three years ago. It is a not-for-profit corporation designed to aid convicted criminals in classroom and vocational training.

"We have been 70 per cent successful with those who have been in PACE institute," he said. "These men are now working steadily and some are even putting themselves through school."

Rev. Irwin said that PACE now needs evening volunteers to help the men in their vocational and classroom training.

"Such work, getting in and being around these men, can transform your life and their lives. I know, because someone who cared transformed mine."



A NEW BUILDING next to the old sanctuary will be commemorated tonight at a dinner in the United Methodist Church of Palatine fellowship hall. The newest addition to the 112-year-old parish is an educational building completed last fall which will house the church offices, special meeting rooms, a new fellowship hall and classrooms. Plates and stationery with a picture of the church will be available at the dinner.

AN INTEREST in silicones sparked Michael Vervort and Jeff Poetter to build a science project about the use of silicones in surgery. The boys, students at Winston Park Junior High School, won first place in hte district science fair this week.

Three Win Awards In Science Fair

Three Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 students received first place awards at the district-wide science fair at Plum Grove School and 11 others received second place awards, qualifying them to enter the area science fair in Wheeling April 11.

Meeting to View 'New Morality'

"The New Morality: An Adult Approach to the Sacrament of Penance" will be the topic of the Palm Sunday night renewal meeting at St. Theresa School hall Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Richard J. Westley, lay theologian and associate professor of philosophy at Loyola University in Chicago, will be the guest speaker. Westley is noted for his ability to interpret theological terms into everyday language for the layman.

MARRIED, with six children, Westley has studied at Marquette University, the Pontifical Institute of Medieval Studies and has a doctoral degree in philosophy from the University of Toronto.

The lecture is sponsored by the adult education committee of St. Theresa parish, which is conducting home discussions and guest lectures on topics like the Vatican II documents and the future of the Roman Catholic Church.

The Nurses Wore Red Carnations

Nurses at Northwest Community Hospital wore red carnations on their uniforms this week.

The flowers were presented to the 202 registered and practical nurses at the hospital in honor of Illinois Nurses Week. The carnations were donated by Pesche's and Sauerland Florists in Arlington Heights and by Kinsch's and Nelson's Florists in Palatine.

The nurses helped care for 14,000 patients in the hospital this year. Northwest Community estimates that by 1975 an additional 200 will be needed to fill the needs of a burgeoning population.

To Attend Conference

Mrs. Jeanette Kramer, administrator of the Plum Grove Nursing Home in Palatine, will attend the Nursing Home Advisory Council of the Illinois Department of Health meeting this weekend in Springfield.

The council will be reviewing revisions proposed by the health department concerning licensing standards for nursing homes, sheltered care homes and homes for the aged.

Skopal Graduates

Second Lt. Paul A. Skopal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Skopal of 16 Garden, Palatine, has been awarded Air Force silver pilot wings upon graduation at Randolph Air Force Base, Tex.

Following specialized aircrew training at other bases, he will be assigned to Ellsworth AFB, South Dakota, for duty with the 28th Air Refueling Squadron, a unit of the Strategic Air Command.

The lieutenant, a graduate of Prospect High School, received a B.A. degree from Lawrence University, Appleton, Wis., and was commissioned there through the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity.

Miss Kienker Honored

Karen Ann Kienker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth L. Kienker of 1311 Norman Drive, Palatine, has been named to the dean's scholarship list for the fall semester at Central Methodist College, Fayette, Mo.

Miss Kienker is a freshman majoring in biology.

Glaser In Drama

A Rolling Meadows student appeared in the recent production of William Saroyan's "The Beautiful People," which was presented at Cornell College.

Robert W. Glaser Jr. of 3500 Bobolink Lane appeared as Dan Hillboy. Glaser is a senior at Cornell.

Powell Has Honors

James B. Powell, a student in the graduate school of Oregon State University, has been named to the fall term scholastic honor roll.

Powell lives at 539 S. Cedar St., Palatine.

Methodist Dinner Set

Members of the First United Methodist Church of Palatine will dine together tonight at 6 p.m. in the fellowship hall to commemorate the completion of the educational building opened in November.

Commemorative plates and stationery of the church and its recent addition will be sold and a candy booth will feature homemade gift-wrapped sweets.

The dinner, being planned by the Women's Society of Christian Service, will also have a nursery for preschoolers.

A new fellowship hall, formal parlor, fireplace seminar room and offices are located in the educational addition, which is joined to the original brick sanctuary designed in 1895. The first church building of the parish was built in 1858 after the Rev. Thomas Cochran had earlier opened a preaching point in the then-new Village of Palatine.

The present sanctuary was built in 1957 on additional land adjacent to the original site on Plum Grove Road and Wood Street.

The Rev. C. Albert Chamberlain is pastor of the 1,800-member church and the Rev. Robert H. King is associate pastor.
